PREFACE.

ON the twenty-third day of April, 1885, the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of the Boston Public Latin School was celebrated in the new School House on Warren Avenue. At the end of its first quarter-millennium, the Committee to which had been entrusted the preparation of this Catalogue has great pleasure in offering it to the pupils of the School, and to all who are interested in the annals of the town and city of Boston as a fit memorial of its oldest School.

It may seem a long period since this work was begun by the Committee. But as we have said, once and again, in our annual reports, it was not worth doing at all unless we did it as well as we could. What we have desired was to make the best Catalogue possible of the teachers and scholars of the School since the beginning. New material has offered itself once and again, sometimes from unexpected sources; yet the elucidation of the broken record has always required, as will readily be seen, careful research, and one obdurate name, for which there was any hope of more light, has often set back the compiler many weeks in the work of printing.

Frequently when a page has been supposed to be complete, new information has been received, which has required all that had been done to be cast away and the whole work to be begun afresh, thus greatly adding to the labor and increasing the cost of the book; and if any investigator, searching the Records of the Association, thinks the expenses of the years during which this Catalogue has been in press, have been unduly exorbitant, he can justly ascribe them to the cost of correcting old or doing new work which was made necessary by the acquisition of important information for the Catalogue, which arrived too late to be used in the original preparation of the pages.

So careless was the past in preserving lists of school-boys, that when the Latin School Association was formed, as lately as 1844, we had no catalogue of our former scholars. At that time the late Judge Davis gave to one of the officers of the Association a transcript which James Lovell had made, in his own handwriting, from John Lovell's complete list of the boys who were under his instruction from 1734 to 1774. Mr. William Bentley Fowle furnished a copy made from the same list, by the Rev. Dr. Homer of Newton, of our Class of 1766. From these two copies from John Lovell's list, from one or two manuscript lists of particular years in Master Hunt's and Master Biglow's rule, and the printed Annual Catalogues which began in 1819 under Master Gould, the Committee appointed at an early meeting of the Association, based their work. They had no list before Lovell's appointment in 1734, and they had long gaps between the day of the battle of Lexington in 1775 and Mr. Gould's appointment in 1819. That Committee published in 1847 these lists, with such additions as they had been able to make from other quarters. It will be seen that almost everything before 1734, and everything between 1774 and 1814 was necessarily fragmentary. But Mr. Gould and Mr. Dillaway, for their sketches of the history of the School, had collected quite full memoranda of the names of the teachers.

That Committee, therefore, very properly called its work, published in 1847, "Materials for a Catalogue of the Masters and Scholars who have belonged to the Public Latin School, Boston, Massachusetts, from 1635 to 1846." In their preface they acknowledged its fragmentary character, and pointed out the sources where light might be looked for, and urged its completion.

In the year 1875 a fortunate stimulus was given to such study in the discovery by Mr. E. S. Dixwell of the full Catalogue of Samuel Hunt, including the boys who were under him, both at the North Grammar School, and after his transfer to our School. The same manuscript showed that the holiday after the battle of Lexington was not so long as had been supposed, but that the School was opened again immediately after Washington's entrance into the town. Encouraged by this happy discovery, the Association at once ordered the preparation of a new and enlarged Catalogue, and appointed for the purpose a special Committee, of which Edward E. Hale was made Chairman, and the late Joseph Healy, then Secretary of the Latin School Association, Secretary. This Committee was authorized to add to its own number, and has been continued from year to year to the present time, and has consisted of the following gentlemen beside those named above: Epes Sargent Dixwell, the Rev. Cazneau Palfrey, D. D., Moses Merrill, Ph. D., John J. May, John D. Bryant, Prof. Henry W. Haynes, William T. R. Marvin, Horace E. Scudder, Rev. Henry F. Jenks, John T. Hassam, J. Russell Reed, and Grenville H. Norcross.

We have felt ourselves fortunate in being able to entrust the details of our work to one of our number, the Rev. Henry F. Jenks, of our Class of 1854, whose historical tastes admirably qualified him to undertake it; so that while all the members of the Committee have aided as they could, it has been understood on all hands that the research, the compilation, and the preparation for printing have been the especial charge of Mr. Jenks, with whom this has been, we will not say a labor, but, almost entirely, a work of love.

Meanwhile, in determining who is who, in lists of boys whose surnames only are recorded,—and in dating rightly their entrances and their exits on our stage, new materials for our modest history have been gathered. In publishing the Catalogue of our boys, the Committee has determined to publish also these memoirs of the School's life. From various reports to the Association, from public addresses and articles in the journals, Mr. Jenks has collected and preserved such memorials, and we print them in this book as the proper introduction to the Catalogue of our Alumni.

There is still the possibility that other gaps in our record may yet be filled. Some lad in New Hampshire, looking under the eaves for a bit of paper-hanging with which to make a bob-tail for his kite, may light on a precious scroll with the names of Pormort's boys and Maude's. A letter from Fairfax to Essex, in the heat of the English civil war, may prove to have been written on the back of a list of Woodbridge's scholars sent from John Hull's father to General Sedgwick. A Judge of Probate in Indiana may find Woodmansey's catalogue tied in with the inventory of the estate of Susan Stoddard. Among the Tomsons of Alaska there may be found the precious parchment-covered book, in which Benjamin Tompson preserved the names of his pupils. But these prospects are so vague, that it has not seemed best to defer printing what we have, in hope of their realization. Still serious search ought to be made by all those numerous descendants who are proud to call Ezekiel Cheever and Nathaniel Williams ancestors,—for the list which Cheever began, and which his successor doubtless continued. However vague the hopes for the earlier years, it is more than probable that these catalogues even yet exist to furnish to Mr. Jenks new material for his untiring industry.

Many of the gentlemen whose names are recorded on pages x and xi as having aided the Committee which prepared the Catalogue of 1847 were still living when the present work was undertaken, and have placed its successors under equal obligations which we are glad to acknowledge. Whatever assistance we have sought, has been rendered with alacrity and interest, whether we have applied to our fellow pupils, or to those whose only interest in the School was because it was the Alma Mater of some ancestor or descendant, or a cherished institution of their native town. Among those pupils of the School who have died during the progress of the work, who have taken especial pains to supply us with information, are the Rev. John L. Watson, D. D., formerly of Boston, and subsequently of Orange, N. J., of our Class of 1805, and Ebenezer Thayer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., of our Class of 1806. The latter, who was born in the shadow of the first School-house on the present site of the Parker House in School Street, was particularly solicitous to have the engraving presented of that building, which was drawn from description, correspond with his recollections, and again and again forwarded to us rough plans and carefully scrutinized the artist's work. Among the living, thanks are due to ex-Head Master Charles K. Dillaway, Prof. Henry W. Torrey, who carefully read the proof sheets of the Historical Sketch, Samuel F. McCleary, and Thomas Gaffield, the latter of whom collected a large sum of money to meet the cost of publication, and many others. Of gentlemen, never pupils of the School, the Committee has received much valuable assistance from the Hon. Samuel A. Green, M. D., ex-Mayor of Boston, the Hon. Thomas C. Amory, the Hon. Mellen Chamberlain, the Rev. John Langdon Sibley, Augustus T. Perkins, Clement Hugh Hill and John Ward Dean.

The Committee has been in correspondence with gentlemen who graduated in 1835, and cannot learn that any note of the Second Centennial was taken in the public exercises of the day of their graduation. It may be feared that the Centennial of 1735 passed equally unnoticed.

HISTORICAL SKETCH,

HENRY F. JENKS.

BOSTON PUBLIC LATIN SCHOOL.

THE Boston Public Latin School is the oldest educational institution, with continuous existence, in the country. It antedates Harvard College by some years, and from the time when the earliest students received their preparation for college at the School, and thus justified the remark of a well-known graduate of both, that "the Latin School dandled Harvard College on her knees," down to the present, the stream of pupils, passing from one to the other, now narrowed now widened, has never ceased, and the names of not a few of the most distinguished graduates of the College, who have done her honor in literature, art, science, or politics, are borne upon the rolls of the School, which also claims a share in their glories, a reflection of the lustre of their names.

It was founded by an agreement among the first citizens of Boston, led by the first Governor, Winthrop From this establishment, itself the example and seed corn, the whole American system of free education grew. There is, indeed, fair reason for question whether that system would ever have taken on its breadth of range if this school, the first free school, had not at the very beginning been a school for the higher education, instead of one confined merely to the elements of instruction. Among the theorists of to-day there is a handful who argue that the utmost the State is bound to furnish to its children is a knowledge of the three R's; that the study of the classics, of the higher mathematics, and sciences, is to be classed among specialties, and as the State does not teach its children how to play the organ, or how take a photograph, it ought not to teach them Latin, or Greek, or algebra. But John Winthrop and the other founders had no such doubts. Their wish and determination was to beat Satan in each and all of his lairs, and, knowing that ignorance was the darkest of these lairs, into that first they threw the light from their reflectors. As the poorest boy in the meanest hovel on the unknown slope of Beacon Hill might prove to be he who should have the best gift for language, to that boy also as a matter of the common defence, and for the general welfare, should the classical languages be taught at the common charge.

Governor Winthrop's History makes no reference to the planting of the first free school, but under date of 1645 we find:

Divers free schools were erected, as at Roxbury (for maintenance whereof every inhabitant bound some house or land for a yearly allowance forever), and at Boston (where they made an order to allow forever 50 pounds to the master and an house, and 30 pounds to an usher, who should also teach to read and write and cipher, and Indians' children were to be taught freely), and the charge to be by yearly contribution, either by voluntary allowance, or by rate of such as refused, etc., and this order was confirmed by the General Court. Other towns did the like, providing maintenance by several means. Winthrop's History of N. E., ii, p. 215.

In 1647 the General Court passed the following order establishing free schools, the preamble giving the reason for requiring that they should be classical schools:

It being one chief project of the old deluder, Satan, to keep men from the knowledge of the Scriptures, as, in former times, by keeping them in an unknown tongue, so, in these latter times, by persuading from the use of tongues, that so at least the true sense and meaning of the original might be clouded by false gloss of saint-seeming deceivers; now, that learning may not be buried in the grave of our fathers, in the Church and Commonwealth, the Lord assisting our endeavors;

It is, therefore, ordered, that every township in this jurisdiction, after the Lord hath increased them to the number of fifty householders, shall then forthwith appoint one within their town to teach all such children as shall resort to him, to write and read and it is further ordered, that, where any town shall increase to the number of one hundred families or householders, they shall set up a grammar school, the master thereof being able to instruct youth so far as they may be fitted for the university, provided that if any town neglect the performance hereof above one year, that every such town shall pay £5 to the next school, till they shall perform this order.*

In 1679 a recommendation was passed that those who send their children to school, and are able to pay something, shall contribute for the encouragement of the master. At the same time it is provided that Indian children shall be taught gratis.

* Mr. Geo. B. Emerson in his lecture in the Massachusetts Historical Society's volume on the Early History of Massachusetts says: A grammar school was then understood to be a school in which the Latin and Greek languages were taught.

The following interesting article by the Rev. Robert C. Waterston, in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society for February, 1873, gives reasons for believing that the establishment of this School was largely due to the influence of the Rev. John Cotton, who came to this country in 1633 from Boston in Lincolnshire, England.

On the fourth day of September, 1633, in the ship 'Griffin,' of three hundred tons, came, among others, John Cotton, who for many years had been a powerful and influential preacher in connection with St. Botolph's in Boston, Lincolnshire. He was in every respect a man of mark, and destined to exert a powerful influence upon these shores.

It was acknowledged that his coming formed a new era in the history of the colony. In the language of Dr. Increase Mather, "Both Bostons have reason to honor his memory, and New England most of all, which oweth its name and being to him more than to any other person in the world."

This, then is a fact worthy of observation; two years after the arrival of John Cotton, (or, strictly speaking, one year and five months) we find the establishment of a free school, and this school we know to be the Latin School, whose history continues to this day, and whose prosperity and efficiency were never greater than at the present time. One peculiar fact in the establishment of this first free school was, that usual methods are reversed; our fathers did not commence with a school for elementary instruction; they provided at the very beginning for the higher branches of study.

Now, I think it is interesting to ask if there are any reasons why it would be natural to connect the establishment of this School with John Cotton? One strong reason for so doing would be, that he was not only distinguished, before he came to these shores, for ability and learning, but from the moment he landed here he was universally welcomed and became the acknowledged centre of vast influence both in ecclesiastical and civil affairs. Thus it was that the famous Thursday Lecture, which all through our early colonial history held so conspicuous a place, and also the accompanying Market Day, sanctioned by order of the Court, had their origin in him; and they both alike had their antecedents in his personal experience at Boston in Lincolnshire. Was there then anything corresponding with the idea of such a school as this earliest school, at Boston, in Lincolnshire, where for so many years Cotton had labored?

As early as 1554, Queen Mary, in the first year of her reign, made a grant to the corporation of Boston, "for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL in the town." Thus we know as a matter of history, that there was a Free Grammar School in Boston, Lincolnshire.

But is there any reason to suppose that Latin was taught in such a school? It may be said in answer: This is the last thing which one might expect would be taught in a school so established. Yet in the Corporation Records (some of which I personally examined on a visit to that ancient place) there is this curious entry, which proves to us that Latin was taught.

In 1578 it was agreed that a "Dictionarye shall be bought for y^e Scollars of y^e Free Scoole and the same boke to be tyed in a cheyne and set upon a deske in y^e scoole whereunto any scoller may have accesse as occasion shall serve;" and in 1601 the Corporation purchased two dictionaries—one Greek, the other Latin—for the school, "the schoolmaster to keep the same for the use of the scholars."

Thus we find that in Boston, Lincolnshire, there was a Free Grammar School, in which Latin and Greek were taught, and it is natural to presume that a lover of learning like Cotton, who had been appointed to the Vicarage of that town in 1612, and had been active there in all good ways and works for more than twenty years, should have been not only acquainted but very familiar with such a school. Still, if there were no evidence of such a knowledge on Cotton's part, it would be mere conjecture with us. Is there, then, any positive evidence that John Cotton did know of this school? Singularly enough I find this record:—

"In 1613 a committee consisting of Dr. Baron, REV. JOHN COTTON, and two others, was appointed to examine Mr. Emnith and report whether he be fit to exercise the office of USHER in this school."

Thus we have direct proof that the Rev. John Cotton was so identified in thought with that school that he was nominated to examine an usher, and decide upon his fitness for the place!

Leaving, then, England, as he did, in 1633, and exchanging the Old for the New World, how natural that this scholar (who had graduated from Trinity College, Cambridge, and had afterwards been elected to a fellowship in Emmanuel College), taking up his abode here in this then almost wilderness settlement, should have recalled all that was precious in his memory, as suggestive of what might—in some larger and better way—become transplanted here.

Thus, the old Lecture, dear for so many years, when the Thursday came round, would recur to his mind. Why should he, then, not have a similar lecture here? The Market Day, when the people gathered from the country around, buying and selling commodities—why not have that also? As soon as suggested, the Court approved; and this also became as important a fact on this side of the Atlantic as it had been on the other. In the same way when he saw the children growing up, he thought of the school, the free school, to which all could go; and with his own love for classical literature, and his partiality for the privileges of a collegiate education, the memory of a free grammar school, where Latin and Greek were taught, may have risen in his mind, and he may have said, Here also, where the trees of the forest are not yet felled, and the wild Indian is at our doors, here let such a school be established, to become as good, and as much better as we can make it. And let that one be the forerunner of a thousand more that shall follow—free for all, and where not only the simple rudiments of learning may be secured, but some reasonable introductory knowledge, at least, of the ancient languages.

There is another coincidence between John Cotton's new and old home. The records of the English Boston of 1642, show that the master of the grammar school had "a house rent free;" and in the American Boston we find that, in 1645, it was ordered that fifty pounds be allowed to the master, and "a house for him to live in."

As an indication of how small a place Boston was at that period, it is only necessary to remember that, although the inhabitants were characterized by their religious zeal, one small meeting-house answered for the whole community, and continued to do so until 1648. The simplicity of their first place of worship is suggested by the fact that it had "mud walls and a thatched roof." This primitive building, situated on what is now the south side of State Street, was replaced by a more commodious wooden structure in 1640, in Washington street, nearly opposite State street, which edifice lasted seventy years, when it was destroyed by fire. During 1631 only ninety persons came over from England, and in 1632 not above two hundred and fifty new settlers arrived. Thus the one Free School, dating from 1635, answered the need of the people, not only at that time, but for forty years after. In a community so limited, every suggestion, from a man of the acquirements and influence of John Cotton, must have had great weight. We can, therefore, hardly imagine that such a school as this could have been established without his active co-operation, and we think we have given some very conclusive evidence that this School may have owed its origin to him more, perhaps, than to any one else.

Mr. Cotton's first child, a son, born at sea, on board the "Griffin," had received on that account the name of "Seaborn." A father's thoughts would even more impulsively turn to the education of the young. Cotton died Dec. 23, 1652, from illness caused by exposure in crossing the ferry over Charles River, being on his way to preach to the students at Cambridge.

After his death it was found that, on certain contingencies, he had arranged by his will, that one-half of his whole estate should revert to Harvard College, and the other half be devoted to the support of the Free School in Boston. Thus we have most satisfactory evidence of the deep and abiding interest cherished by John Cotton in whatever pertained to the work of instruction; and sufficient reasons (have we not?) for associating his name, in an especial manner, with the establishment of the first free school, and with that educational system which has become our joy and our pride.

Mr. Gould, writing of the early history of the School, in the fourth number of the Prize Book, says:—

The General Court of Massachusetts having at a previous period granted to the Town of Boston several of the Islands in the harbor, the Records state, that, in 1641:—"This 10th of the 11th moneth, It's ordered that Deare Island shall be improved for the maintenance of a Free schoole for the Towne, and such other occasions as the Townsmen for the time being shall thinke meet, the sayde schoole being sufficiently provided for." Capt. Edward Gibbon was soon after intrusted with the care and use of the island, "until the Towne doe let the same."* Accordingly in 1644 it was let for three years, at the rate of seven pounds per annum, expressly for the use of the School.† In 1647, at the expiration of this lease, it was again let for seven years, and the rent was now "fourteen pound per annum for the scoole's use in provision and clothing."‡ This lease was extended in 1648 to twenty-one years, at the same rate of rent.§ The next year Long Island|| and Spectacle Island¶ were placed on a similar footing, and the Selectmen were to take order that they be leased, paying a yearly rent on every acre, rated afterwards as sixpence, for the use of the School.

It seems to have been the design of the community to endow their Free School, as they delight to name it,* with bequests in their wills, lands rented on long leases, and similar sources of income, in preference to a direct support from the public treasury. Thus, in 1649, Wm. Phillips "agreed to give 13s. 4d., per ann. forever to the use of the Schole for the land that Christopher Stanley gave in his will to the Schol's use."† Forty shillings per annum for the same use were secured by lease of 500 acres of land at Braintree,‡ and several other sums on different lands belonging to the Town,§ at about the same date.

*Mr. Henry Barnard, in an article on EZEKIEL CHEEVER in the first volume of the American Journal of Education, (p. 299, et seq.,) explains that

The Free Schools of England were originally established in towns where there was no old Conventual, Cathedral, Royal, or Endowed Grammar School. With very few exceptions, these schools were founded and endowed by individuals, for the teaching of Greek and Latin, and for no other gratuitous teaching. The gratuitous instruction was sometimes extended to all the children born or living in a particular parish, or of a particular name. All not specified and provided for in the instruments of endowment, paid tuition to the master; and by Free School and Free Grammar School, as used in the early records both of towns and the General Court in Connecticut and Massachusetts, was not intended the Common or Public School, as afterwards developed, particularly in Massachusetts, supported by tax, and free of all charge to all scholars, rich and poor; neither was it a charity school, exclusively for the poor, but a Grammar School unrestricted as to a class of children or scholars specified in the instruments by which it was founded, and so supported as not to depend on the fluctuating attendance and tuition of scholars for the maintenance of a master. The "free schools" of New England were endowed by grants of land, by gift and bequests of individuals, or by "allowance out of the common stock of the town;" were designed especially for instruction in Latin and Greek, and were supported in part by payments of tuition or rates by parents. These schools were the well-springs of classical education in this country, and were the predecessors of the incorporated academies which do not appear under that name until a comparatively recent period.

The early votes establishing and providing for the support of the "free schools" in Boston, as well as in other towns in Massachusetts, while they recognize, by grants of land and allowance out of the common stock, the interest and duty of the public in schools and universal education, also provide for the payment by parents of a rate or tuition.

†9: 2: mo., [-]1649. Wm. Philips hath agreed to give 13s. 4d. per annum for ever to the use of the schole for the land that Christopher Stanley gave in his will for the schols use; the rent day began the 1 of March 1649.

"to be paid yearely every first day of March to the Town Treasurer for the use of the free schoole."‡

About four years after this, however, a release of several rents for the Islands and other lands was made, the support of the School arising, doubtless, in great measure from other funds.

The esteem in which the School has been held by the citizens of Boston is shown by the fact that fathers who have been its pupils have sent their sons to share its privileges and secure its benefits, and a perusal of the catalogue will show that many families have had representatives in successive generations upon its rolls, and that to-day the sons and the grandsons of pupils of the past may be found among its members.

The Latin School has always been a democratic institution. Its privileges have been confined to no class. The minister's and the tallow-chandler's sons have sat side by side on its forms, and engaged in friendly rivalry in school-room and on play-ground, and equally enjoyed its privileges. In his speech as Chairman of the dinner of the Latin School Association in 1879, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., says: "In my division there were ten or twelve boys, representing nearly every class of society in the city—the son of Harrison Gray Otis (who was then considered the most aristocratic person in the city), and the son of Marshal Prince; and with them were boys who were children of the humblest residents. They were all together on one level; no one was thought better than another except as he was a better fellow or a brighter student." Its honors have been given for merit, and all its pupils have had the same chance to gain them. And as the result of its training the School had "a boy who could fly a kite better than any Japanese, a boy whose signature upheld the United States for two months, a boy who represented this country at the Court of St. James at a most trying time, and a boy who was the greatest of the arbiters at Geneva."

Her first masters might have seen Shakspeare act in his own plays; and, perhaps, whiled away the dullness of their wilderness recitations by repeating to the Puritan boys the fun of his hig, hag, hog; or telling the stories of the Calibans with which he peopled the Western worlds. We may well enough suppose that such vanities as that helped to exile our first master from the comforts of young Boston to the desolate home to which he was sent on the Piscataqua. He was an exiled exile—an exile of the second power.

Our venerable Maude just preceded Harvard and Milton at Cambridge; and we may imagine John Milton in the deputy Grecian form of St. Paul's school, London, hearing our Ezekiel Cheever, then in the fourth form, translate his Erasmus; or repeat his "as in praesenti." So venerable may be one's classical genealogy! Here around us are men* whose Latin and Greek makes but five leaps from the scholarship of the Reformation to our day!—men who learned of Hunt, who learned of Lovell, who learned of Williams, who learned of Cheever, who with Milton studied not only "Erasmus his Colloquies," but his Syntaxis from some one to whom he had himself explained his plan of education.

May 25th. This day the Selectmen in psuance of a vote order of the inhabitants of the towne dated the 9th of March last did renew unto Mr. Samll. Shrimpton his lease of Deer Island for the terme of 18 years, to commence from the 1st of March, 1693-94 (when his present lease will cxpire) at the rent of 14ld mony p. ann., to be paid on every 1st day of March yearlie to the use of the Free schoole.

Coming down, our historian will find that our village is, indeed, not unlike "that Rome"—illa Roma—whose history is ours; whose literature and learning bred ours. While the Doctors of Christ's and Magdalen at Oxford were fighting James II and his quo warrantos, were not our Cheever and his associates elsewhere, worried in like wise by James's Gov. Andros, so that they like their English brethren hailed the Revolution as their emancipation?

Who shall imagine the process by which five and twenty years after, "our kind master," as Franklin calls him, so instructed the young Benjamin in the Latin Accidence that after eight months the boy ceased therefrom; and in his after years wrote as a consequence those severe attacks upon the study of the classics, which, to this moment makes it dangerous to give a copy of Franklin as a present to an inquiring boy. Heresies these—let us say in passing—which he tried afterward to extenuate, by leaving the Latin School as one of the objects of his dying bounty; as it will be in its annual festivities, the latest herald of his name.

Later down, the historian will fairly exult in describing the School room of the last century, divided in its allegiance, its affections, and its politics, between Master Lovell, the father, the Tory:—and Master Lovell, the son, the Whig:—as they sat, one at each end of the long hall, each pouring into infant minds as he could from the classics of the Empire, or the historians of the Republic, the lessons of absolutism or of liberalism. Let him imagine the boys thronging Faneuil Hall, when our Master Lovell dedicated it! Little recked he the future,—for he consecrated it to loyalty to the house of Brunswick! Years after, let him imagine the boys of that day dividing into two camps, one unwilling, going to school April 2, 1771, because old Master Lovell would give no holiday; the other eager with patriotism and fun, defying his authority, that they might go to the Old South, to hear the young Master Lovell deliver the first memorial Oration of the Bloody Boston Massacre.

Who shall describe—now that our venerable friend* has gone, who was chief actor?—the deputation of our school boys who waited on General Haldiman, of a winter's morning, to complain that their inalienable rights had been taken away, when his servant had strewed ashes across the coast which passed the School house? Who describe their exultation when the hireling was sent out to remove his obnoxious interruption. It was the first victory of the Revolution.

And alas! we have lost also the lips† which told of the morning of the 19th April:—when Percy's brigade paraded for the last time in full ranks, so as to cut off a little Otis's access to the School house:—so that he arrived only in time to see the excited Master's face—as he marshalled the class who never saw him again, and cried "War's begun, —and school's done. Deponite libros." Percy's brigade, stretched across the head of School Street, stopped our Otis on his way to our School. Did that Otis forget it, when in his English oration at Commencement in 1783, he was the first Harvard Orator to prophesy the future greatness of the independent America?

And when school was done, our boys—we might also say our girls‡—had their part to play. Where did John Hancock practice that writing flourish, than which none is better known—we might say more revered—but on our first form when he had come back from the Holbrook's or Carter's "Intermediate" of his day? On the Declaration, led off by his name, ours are one-ninth of the signatures. And the curious may yet trace in the careful name of Franklin, in the gentlemanly writing of Hooper and in the clear legibility of the others, those traits which we have even lately heard our venerable writing master§ describe in the second copy of his large hand as the

Boston style of Writing

Whose sympathies were engaged in the hot day of Bunker Hill, when the English general in the first attack found his artillery silent, and inquiring found that the six-pounders were furnished with twelve-pound shot? After having sent back to Boston to correct the blunder, only to have it renewed; as he unwillingly ordered grape instead of balls to be used against the entrenchments, he cursed his officer of ordnance; saying that he knew he was not at his post; no, most likely he was making love to the schoolmaster's daughter—Miss Lovell!—truer daughter of her country than of her tory father, the Judith of our mythology; she shall be remembered as the Schoolmaster's Daughter of the 17th of June, if the day ever comes when our history shall be written.

The Boston Town Records read as follows :

“The 13th of the 2d moneth, 1635. Att a Generall meeting upon publique notice. . . . it was then generally agreed upon that our brother Philemon Pormort, shalbe intreated to become scholemaster, for the teaching and nourtering of children with us.”

This vote was the beginning of the School which has ever since been maintained by the town, and is now known as the Public Latin School.

Mr. Pormort “accepted the trust, and was supported partly by donations of liberal friends of education, and partly by the income of a tract of land assigned to him at Muddy River” (Brookline).

Of his powers as a teacher nothing whatever is known. The only testimony that can be considered direct, to prove that under his care the classical languages were taught in the School, is the fact that John Hull, who was one of his pupils, knew Latin. It is not a violent inference, however, to suppose that they were—as his assistant and successor, Daniel Maude, who was perfectly competent to teach those languages, was appointed without any implication that he was to fulfill other duties than Mr. Pormort had done.

Mr. Dillaway, our oldest surviving Head Master, says:—

“This being the only public school in the town for about half a century, it is reasonable to infer that the elementary as well as the higher branches were taught. Its principal object, however, from its establishment to the present time, has been to prepare young men for college. ‘Out of small beginnings,’ says Bradford, ‘great things have been produced; and as one small candle may light a thousand, so the light here kindled hath shone to many, yea, in some sort, to our whole nation.’ He must have had in his mind the first Boston school, which has been perpetuated in the present Latin School. Its origin was simple and unpretending; its advantages as an educational institution in its early days hardly to be compared with those of the humblest country school of the present time; and yet what a burning and shining light it has become! For nearly two and a half centuries it has been training statesmen whose wisdom has guided our nation. It has given us such men as Benjamin Franklin, whose statue stands on the spot where his brief school-days were spent; Samuel Adams, the distinguished patriot, whose statue has been recently erected; Cotton Mather, one of the best scholars of his time; Judge Hutchinson; Governor Leverett and his grandson, a President of Harvard College; Wm. Stoughton, Chief Justice of Massachusetts; James Bowdoin; and many others whose eminent public services are on record."*

Of the age, birthplace, character or education of Mr. Pormort, we know nothing from any documents we have yet discovered. On the 28th of August, 1634, he was admitted, with Susanna his wife, a member of the First Church.† In the records of that church we find the baptism of his son Lazarus, March 1st, 1636, and of his daughter Anna, April 15th, 1638.

We find Mr. Pormort's name in connection with the Hutchinson controversy, the history of which has been published in a form which makes it quite unnecessary for us to discuss it here,‡ but in no other transactions of the colony, excepting those which related to the School, and, in one or two instances, in the affairs of Muddy River. In this celebrated controversy he did not sign any of the earlier petitions or other documents drawn up by Mrs. Hutchinson's adherents; but when, in 1638, the Rev. John Wheelwright led a colony of her friends to found the town of Exeter, N. H., Pormort enrolled himself among their number, and his name appears attached to the document by which they established themselves in an independent state.

Without entering into an investigation of the errors or the blame of the Hutchinson controversy, the facts of the case, as far as Pormort appears connected with them, seem to be that he was upholding with such men as Vane and Wheelwright, the rights of conscience and religious liberty, against more absolute and formal views. In his love of that liberty he pressed more deeply into the wilderness which he had vainly sought in his hope for it. He had constancy enough, and sincerity enough of opinion to leave his first western home for a wilderness, though nothing but a strong sense of duty could have called him.

The dismissal of these colonists, thus really driven into exile by the harshness of the people of Boston, from the First Church was amicable in form, and is dated January 6th, 1638.*

The documents by which the colony of Exeter was established are dated October 4th, 1639.†

Mr. Pormort's administration of the Latin School was, therefore, probably about three years, extending from April, 1635, to the close of 1638. He seems to have left Exeter, and gone to Wells, but, before 1642, to have returned to Boston. We find no record of his death.

In August, 1636, a subscription was made "by the richer inhabitants,‡ toward the maintenance of a free schoolmaster for the youth with us," and Mr. Daniel Maude was chosen to the office.

No doubt, many of the subscribers were parents of Mr. Maude's pupils, but as there is no list of our scholars in his time, we can only conjecture this.

Mr. Maude was a Non-Conformist Puritan minister,* who arrived from England probably Aug. 17, 1635. At this time he was about fifty years old. He was a graduate of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, where he took his degree of Bachelor in 1606, and of Master in 1610.†

Mr. Maude was admitted freeman at the general election, May 25, 1636, the year after his arrival, and on the second of August following was appointed, as has been mentioned above, teacher in the Latin School.‡ It is uncertain whether Mr. Pormort resigned his office before leaving for Exeter, and was succeeded by Maude; or whether the latter was for a time associated with him and then his successor; or (as an incidental reference some ten years after seems to imply that Mr. Pormort, who had then returned to the town, had resumed his office, and was alone in it), his substitute during his absence. But, from the phrase in the terms of the subscription, "being now also chosen thereto," it would seem that Maude attended to the duties of this office, together with Pormort.

In 1641 the people of Dover, N. H., petitioned the Massachusetts government to extend over them its supervision. The petition was granted, and in this connection it is mentioned by Johnson,§ that

At that time subscription in the books of the University was not required—the requisition which has since kept so many students from the English Universities, not being made till 1616.

By the Book of Possessions this lot is thus described :

As laid down on Lamb's Map this location is on the western side of Tremont Street, not far from the present site of the Suffolk Savings Bank.

§ Edward, in his "Wonder Working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England."

"it pleased God to fit stones by the continual hearing of the word, and called to the office of Pastor one Mr. Maude, both godly and diligent in the work."

Without any intimation to the contrary, we feel justified in supposing that Maude continued in office as our schoolmaster until he accepted this call and removed, with his wife Mary, to Dover in the end of 1641, or the beginning of 1642. The influence of his character upon the church in Dover, where he remained until his death in 1655, was long felt, and most happy. Johnson says he was godly and diligent; and Hubbard that he was a good man, of serious spirit, and of a quiet and peaceable disposition. We have no other notices of his life. So far as we can learn, he left no children.

Maude was a member of the same English College as John Harvard, who has given the name to our College at Cambridge. It is interesting to learn that the Master of the Latin School, and the benefactor of the infant college had this common ground of sympathy while together here in Boston.

There is no reason to suppose that the course of instruction followed by our first two Masters differed much from that pursued in the English schools in their time,* where the established period of school education in the classics preparatory to the college was about seven or eight years.

A Master of Arts of Emmanuel, his learning recommended Maude to a place which he filled well. It was his good fortune, and, perhaps the credit of it is to be assigned to him rather than to his predecessor or colleague, to engraft on the infant School the learning and scholarship of the most ancient institutions; and while its Master, three years after its foundation, he saw the foundation of the College which gave the name of his own Alma Mater to the town where it was first planted. To that College he sent its first pupils, and secured for his and our School the noble reputation of being the first seminary for classical learning in our regions of the Western World.

The catalogue of Pormort's and Maude's pupils, if such there ever were, has been lost, and we can probably never ascertain who of the

* Thomas Lechford, a London lawyer, (who had been two years in this country, and had returned dissatisfied to London, probably because in a hard working colony he had found little to do) the author of "Plain Dealing," well known to antiquarians as a book which handles the colony harshly and unkindly, wrote to Winthrop in 1640:

"Consider how poorly your schools goe on. You must depend upon England for help of learned men and schollars, bookes, commodities infinite almost."

early sons of the colony belonged upon it, but as, during the period in which they had charge of the Latin School, there was no other school in Boston, it is probable that all the Boston boys who graduated in the earlier classes of Harvard College received their preparation under them. Accordingly, in the absence of more definite information, the committee who prepared the first edition of our Catalogue, placed the names of these boys on their lists as probable pupils. To those they have given we have added* a few more, graduates of the College, whom we have found from the History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, were likewise Boston boys.

The successor of Mr. Maude was Mr. Woodbridge, supposed to have been the same as the first minister of Andover, mentioned in Mather's Magnalia. Nothing more is certainly known of him,† and the only reference we find to him is in the Boston Records, when at a meeting:

"This 2d of 10th mo., 1644. Its ordered that the Constables shall pay unto Deacon Eliot for the use of Mr. Woodbridge, eight pounds due to him for keeping the Schoole the Last yeare."

In, or before, 1650 Robert Woodmansey‡ became "Scholemaster," and we find the following in the records.

* Appendix A.

† The question has been lately raised whether Benjamin Woodbridge, his brother, the first graduate of Harvard College, is not more likely to have been the teacher; but Mr. Sibley, the Librarian of the College, for many years the editor of the Harvard Triennial Catalogues, and compiler of the biographies of the earlier graduates, is of the opinion that the title "Mr." on the records points to some one other than a mere Bachelor of Arts, who would probably have been called Sir.

‡ From the record of a meeting on the 16th of 1st month, 51-52, we learn that Mr. Woodmansey lived in a house, the property of the town, which stood near the school-house, a single lot being between them, and in giving permission for the use of this intervening lot, the vote includes the following reservation;

"alsoe if the towne shall see cause to inlarg the skoolhouse at any time hereafter, the town hath reserved libertie soe to doe.

On the 27th 4: 53 It is ordered that fourty shillings shall be payd unto Mr. Robtt Woodmansey as part of his repayres of his house.

14: 1: 55. At a meeting of the towne upon publick notice.

It is ordered that the select men shall have liberty to lay outt a peece of Ground outt of the townes land, which they give* to the building of a house for instruction of the youth of the towne.

29: 10: 56. Itt is ordered that care bee taken to pay Rich. Gridley for building the schoole house chimney.

At a meeting 31 of 6th 1657 the following vote is passed:

Mr. Robert Woodmansey is allowed to have the rent due from Leuit. Richard Cook for these two yeares past.

* Undoubtedly gave is intended.

11th 1: mo: 1650. . . . It is also agreed on that Mr. Woodmansey, the Schoolmaster shall have fiftie pounds per annum for his teachinge the Schollers, and his proportion to be made up by ratte.

Mr. Woodmansey had for an assistant Capt. Daniel Hinchman* or Henchman, of whom we have given a full account under his name in the list of Ushers.

Mr. Woodmansey † probably died about 1666 or 1667, since Benjamin Tompson was "made choice by the select men" 26: 6: 67 "for to officiate in the place of the scholemaster for one yeare. Mr. Hull being appointed to agree, for tearmes, what to allow hime per annum."

Benjamin Tompson was born at Braintree in 1640, and graduated at Harvard College in 1662.

The first graduate of the College who had charge of the School, he discharged his part of the debt which the younger owed to the older institution for the early training of so many of her sons. He was the earliest native epic poet of New England. The epitaph on his tomb stone in the burying-ground at Roxbury calls him a learned schoolmaster and physician, and the renowned poet ‡ of New England.

This reference is to the lot of land previously mentioned which had been granted to Richard Cook for a rent of thirty subsequently reduced to twenty shillings per annum.

‡ In his History of American Literature (vol. ii p. 21.) Prof. Moses Coit Tyler thus speaks of him as a poet.

This poet's best vein is satire,—his favorite organ being the rhymed pentameter couplet, with a flow, a vigor, and an edge obviously caught from the contemporaneous verse of John Dryden. He has the partisanship, the exaggeration, the choleric injustice, that are common in satire: and like other satirists, failing to note the moral perspectives of history, he utters

After three years he was superseded by Ezekiel Cheever, the worthy Englishman who came to bring back to the School the worth and associations of a former generation;—the man whose name for more than a century associated itself with the first lisps of the classics which our fathers attempted;—who for seventy years trained the infant statesmen and scholars of the land. Of his reign we have memoranda for a fuller account than of any of the earlier epochs of our history.

Ezekiel Cheever was born in London, Jan. 25, 1614. But little is known of his early life.* That he was entered at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, is shown by the following entry on the Register:

over again the stale and easy lie, wherein the past is held up as wiser and holier than the present.

Though New England has had a life but little more than fifty years long, the poet sees within it the tokens of a hurrying degeneracy, in customs, in morals, in valor, in piety. He turns back with reverent and eyeless homage, to the good old times of the Founders, when the people dwelt “ Under thatch'd huts, without the cry of rent,

And the best sauce to every dish—content;”

“ Deep-skirted doublets, Puritanic capes,
Which now would render men like upright apes
Was comlier wear, our wiser fathers thought,
Than the cast fashions from all Europe brought;”

when, at table,

“ An honest grace would hold
Till an hot pudding grew at heart a cold;
And men had better stomachs at religion,
Than I to capon, turkey, cock, or pigeon;
When honest sisters met to pray, not prate,
About their own, and not their neighbors' state;”

Alas, those flawless times—that never were—those “ Golden times, too fortunate to hold,

Were quickly sinned away for love of gold;”

and in retribution, God is sending upon New England the wrath and anguish of the Indian wars.

“ Not ink, but blood and tears now serve the turn,
To draw the figure of New England's urn.”

 In William Hubbard's "Indian Wars," is a prefatory poem signed "B. T." that is undoubtedly Tompson's, and that has some sprightly and characteristic lines. ***

* Mr. John T. Hassam of our Committee has written a monograph on Ezekiel Cheever, reprinted from the New England Historic Genealogical Register, which gives an exhaustive sketch of his life, character and usefulness, to which, and to the life of him by Henry Barnard in the American Journal of Education, vol. 1, p. 297, we would refer for further accounts of that portion of his life which was not connected with our School.

He came to Boston in 1637. The next spring he went to New Haven, where he remained some time as a teacher, and probably wrote "The Accidence," an elementary work in Latin* which passed through eighteen editions before the Revolution, and is thought to have done "more to inspire young minds with the love of the study of the Latin language than any other work of the kind since the first settlement of the country." From New Haven he removed in 1650 to Ipswich, thence in 1661 to Charlestown, and remained there about nine years. From Charlestown he came over to Boston, and the Boston Records thus chronicle the event:†

The 22d 10th mo. 1670, "At a Meetinge of the honrd: Gouvernr: Richard Bellingham Esq Major Generall John Leueret, Edward Tynge Esq Majestrates Mr: John Mayo, Mr: John Oxenbridge Mr. Thomas Thatcher & Mr. James Allen Eldrs., Capt. That this answer, natural under the circumstances, was not allowed to operate to the disadvantage of Mr. Tompson, is shown by the following:

And it was further agreed that the said Mr. Cheeuers should be allowed sixtie pounds p, an. for his seruice in the schoole, out of the towne rates, & rents that belonge to the schoole—and the possession & vse of ye schoole house.”

On the 30th of the same month, it was “Ordered to Mr. Benjamin Tompson schoolmaster ten pounds out of the Towne treasury beside his yearly salary to be Ended the 25th of this January.”

No picture of Mr. Cheever is known to be in existence, and of his personal appearance we have no description, except that he wore a long white beard, terminating in a point, and when he stroked his beard to the point, it was a sign for the boys to stand clear.

He was about fifty-six years old* when he took this School; but living to an advanced age, he trained here, during thirty-seven years, not a few of New England's most distinguished men.† He was the first Master who died while holding the office.

Some account of his manner of teaching is given in Mr. Hassam's monograph, from the autobiography of the Rev. John Barnard,‡ of Marblehead, one of his pupils, who was born in Boston, Nov. 6, 1681, and thus speaks of his early days at the Latin School;

In the spring [1689], of my eighth year I was sent to the grammar-school under the tuition of the aged, venerable, and justly famous Mr. Ezekiel Cheever. But after a few weeks, an odd accident drove me from the school. There was an older lad entered the school the same week with me; we strove who should outdo; and he beat me by the help of a brother in the upper class, who stood behind master with the accidence open for him to read out of; by which means he could recite his [] three and four times in a forenoon, and the same in the afternoon; but I who had no such help, and was obliged to commit all to memory, could not keep pace with him; so he would be always one lesson before me. My ambition could not bear to be outdone, and in such a fraudulent manner, and therefore I left the school. About this time arrived a dissenting minister from England, who opened a private school for reading, writing, and Latin. My good father put me under his tuition, with whom I spent a year and a half. The gentleman receiving but little encouragement, threw up his school, and returned me to my father, and again I was sent to my aged Mr. Cheever, who placed me in the lowest class; but finding I soon read through my [], in a few weeks he advanced me to the [], and the next year made me the head of it.

Though my master advanced me, as above, yet I was a very naughty boy, much given to play, insomuch that he at length openly declared, 'You Barnard, I know you can do well enough if you will; but you are so full of play that you hinder your classmates from getting their lessons; and therefore, if any of them cannot perform their duty, I shall correct you for it.' One unlucky day, one of my classmates did not look into his book, and therefore could not say his lesson, though I called upon him once and again to mind his book; upon which our master beat me. I told master the reason why he could not say his lesson was his declaring he would beat me if any of the class were wanting in their duty; since which this boy would not look into his book, though I call upon him to mind his book, as the class could witness. The boy was pleased with my being corrected, and persisted in his neglect, for which I was still corrected, and that for several days. I thought, in justice, I ought to correct the boy, and compel him to a better temper; and, therefore, after school was done, I went up to him, and told him I had been beaten several times for his neglect; and since master would not correct him I would, and I should do so as often as I was corrected for him; and then drubbed him heartily. The boy never came to school any more, and so that unhappy affair ended.

Though I was often beaten for my play, and my little roguish tricks, yet I don't remember that I was ever beaten for my book more than once or twice. One of these was upon this occasion. Master put our class upon turning Æsop's Fables into Latin verse. Some dull fellows made a shift to perform this to acceptance; but I was so much duller at this exercise, that I could make nothing of it; for which master corrected me, and this he did two or three days going. I had honestly tried my possibles to perform the task; but having no poetical fancy, nor then a capacity opened of expressing the same idea by a variation of phrases, though I was perfectly acquainted with prosody, I found I could do nothing; and therefore plainly told my master, that I had diligently labored all I could to perform what he required, and perceiving I had no genius for it, I thought it was in vain to strive against nature any longer; and he never more required it of me. Nor had I anything of a poetical genius till after I had been attending College some time, when upon reading some of Mr. Cowley's works I was highly pleased, and a new scene opened before me.

I remember once, in making a piece of Latin, my master found fault with the syntax of one word, which was not so used by me heedlessly, but designedly, and therefore I told him there was a plain grammar rule for it. He angrily replied, there was no such rule. I took the grammar and showed the rule to him. Then he smilingly said, 'Thou art a brave boy; I had forgot it.' And no wonder; for he was then above eighty years old.

Ezekiel Cheever died in Boston, Aug. 21, 1708, and his death is thus referred to by Governor Hutchinson: * "August 21st, this year, died Ezekiel Cheever, venerable not merely for his great age, 94, but for having been the schoolmaster of most of the principal gentlemen in Boston who were then upon the stage. He is not the only master who kept his lamp longer lighted than otherwise it would have been, by a supply of oil from his scholars."

Judge Sewall in his Diary † thus describes the death of the venerable Master:

Augt. 12 [1708].—Mr. Chiever is abroad & hears Mr. Cotton Mather preach; This is the last of his going abroad: Was taken very sick like to die with a Flux. Augt. 13. I go to see him; went in with his son Thomas and Mr. Lewis. His son spake to him, and he knew him not. I spake to him, and he bid me speak again: Then he said, Now I know you, and speaking cheerily mention'd my Name. I ask'd his Blessing for me & my family. He said I was Bless'd, & it could not be Revers'd. Yet at my going away He pray'd for a Blessing for me.

Feria quinta, Augt. 19.—I visited Mr. Chiever again, just before Lecture; Thank'd him for his Kindness to me and mine; desired his prayers for me, my family, Boston, Salem, the Province. He rec'd me with abundance of Affection, taking me by the Hand several times. He said, The Afflictions of God's people, God by them did as a Goldsmith, Knock, knock, knock; knock, knock, knock, to finish the plate: It was to perfect them not to punish them. I went and told Mr. Pemberton, who preach'd.

Feria sexta, Aug. 20.—I visited Mr. Chiever, who was now grown much weaker, and his Speech very low. He called, Daughter! When his daughter Russel came He ask'd if the family were compos'd. They apprehended He was uneasy because there had not been Prayer that morn; and solicited me to Pray; I was loth, and advised them to send for Mr. Williams, as most natural, homogeneous: They declin'd it, and I went to Prayer. After, I told him, the last Enemy was Death; and God hath made that a friend too; He put his hand out of the Bed, and held it up, to signify his assent. Observing he suck'd a piece of an Orange, put it orderly into his mouth and chew'd it, and then took out the core. After dinner I carried a few of the best Figs I could get, and a dish Marmalet. I spake not to him now.

Feria Septima, Augt. 21.—Mr. Edward Oakes tells me Mr. Chiever died this last night. Note. He was born January, 25, 1614. Came over to N. - E. 1637. to Boston: To New - Haven, 1638. Married in the Fall, and began to teach School: which Work he was constant in till now. First, at New - Haven; then at Ipswich; then at Charlestown; then at Boston, whether he came 1670. So that he has Labour'd in that Calling Skillfully, diligently, constantly, Religiously, Seventy years. A rare Instance of Piety, Health, Strength, Serviceableness. The Wellfare of the Province was much upon his Spirit. He abominated Perriwigs.

Augt. 23, 1708.—Mr. Chiever was buried from the School-house. The Govr, Councillors, Ministers, Justices, Gentlemen there. Mr. Williams * made a handsom Latin Oration in his Honour. Elder Bridgham, Copp, Jackson, Dyer, Griggs, Hubbard, &c., Bearers. After the Funeral, Elder Bridgham, Mr. Jackson, Hubbard, Dyer. Tim. Wadsworth, Edw. Procter, Griggs, and two more came to me, and earnestly solicited me to speak to a place of Scripture, at their privat Quarter - Meeting in the room of Mr. Chiever. I said, 'twas a great Surprise to me; pleaded my inability for want of memory, Invention. Said doubted not of my ability; would pray for me. I pleaded the Unsuitableness, because I was not of that Meeting. They almost took a denial. But said one would come to me next night. * * * *

His funeral sermon was preached by his former pupil, the Rev. Dr. Cotton Mather, and we give the larger portion of it in the Appendix,† together with a Poetical Essay in his memory, from the same source.

His will, dated Feb. 16, 1705-6, written with his own hand when he was 91 years old, "in good health & understanding wonderfull in my age," is on file in the Suffolk Probate Office. It was offered for probate Aug. 26, 1708, by his son Thomas Cheever and his daughter Susanna Russell, his wife Ellen Cheever, the other executrix, being deceased. His estate was appraised at £837: 19: 6.

During his time the number of pupils had so increased, that often there were a hundred in the School. As it was difficult for a single master to instruct so many, it had been customary for him to employ an assistant at his own expense, but, about 1698, the Town seems to have recognized the need of an assistant, and made provision for supplying it:

"At a Publick meeting of the Inhabitants of Boston," March 13, 1699, it was "Voted, That an assistant be Provided to be with. mr. Cheever, in the Ezekiel Lewis, for his Salary as an assistant to his Grandfather mr Ezekiel Cheever in the Latine School, not Exceeding forty pounds p year.” At a meeting of the Selectmen, Aug. 28, 1699, “ Psuant to a vote of the Town May. 8th. Mr. Ezekiel Lewis was agreed wth, and admitted an Assistant to his Grandfather, Mr Ezekiel Cheever in the Latine free school, his salary at psent to be forty pounds p year.”*

At a Town Meeting held at the Town House in Boston, April 27, 1703, it was “ Voted that the Selectmen do take care to procure some meet person to be an assistant to mr Ezekiell Chever in the Government of the Lattin Schooll and to allow him a Sallery not exceeding forty five pounds p annum, untill farther Order from the Inhabitants at some other meeting.”

May 13, 1703, “Sundry of the ministers in this Town haveing recomended mr Nathll Williams to be a fitt person to be joyned wth mr Chever in the Governmt of the Lattin School, ordered that sd mr. Williams be Treated wth abt the Same.” (Selectmen’s Minutes, i. 72.)

At a town meeting, June 1, 1703,† “Upon a debate abt ye Settling a Sallery upon an assitant to mr Chever in the Governmt of ye Lattin School Voted that the Same be referred to the determination of the next Town meeting, & that notice thereof be incerted in the warrant for the calling such meeting.”

At a town meeting, held June 25, 1703,† “The Town by their vote do declare their approbation of mr Nathaniell Williams to be an assitat to mr Ezekiel Chever in Governing and Instructing the youth at the Lattin School. Voted that mr Nathaniel Williams be allowed the Sum of Eighty pounds for the year ensuing in case he accept and perform the aforesaid service. And it is left to the Selectmen to agree wth him accordingly.”

At a meeting of the Selectmen, July 26 [1703] “Deacon John Marryon is desired to provide a desk & seat in the Lattin School for mr Williams.” (Selectmen’s Minutes, i. 74.)

Nov. 29, 1703. “Ordered that mr Nathanll Williams be paid his Sallery as the same doth become due he haveing entered upon the Service of the Free School the 12th day of July Last.” (Selectmen’s Minutes, i. 80.)

At a town meeting, March 10, 1701, it was “Voted. That the Request of mr Ezel Lewis for an addition to his Salary be refered to the Next Genll Town Meeting” (Town Records, ii. 239). At a town meeting, May 12, 1701, “Whereas Mr Ezekiell Lewis Assistant to Mr Chever in the Government of the Lattin free school, hath represented unto the Town that the Sum of forty pounds p annum, is not Sufficient for his coumfortable Subsistance. The Town by their Vote have granted that hence forward he be Allowed Forty five pounds p annum, dureing his being continued in that Station” (Town Records, ii. 240). The Selectmen’s Minutes (i. 21, 37, 60) contain orders for the payment of his salary Nov. 24, 1701, March 2, 1701-2, and Aug. 31, 1702.

July 11, 1704. The Town Clerk was ordered to 'Signifie unto mr Nathaniell Williams the Selectmens desire that he continue in his service for the Town at the Latten School, at the same rate.' (Selectmen's Minutes, i. 87.)

At a town meeting Mar. 12th, 1704-5, it was voted that mr Nathaniell Williams be paid at the rate of eighty pounds p annum for his service at the Latten School for the year currant and for the year next ensuing. (Town Records, ii, 275, 279.)

After the death of Mr. Cheever, Mr. Nathaniel Williams, who graduated at Harvard College in 1693,* and, as we have seen, had been for some time his assistant, was appointed his successor.†

Mr. Williams is supposed to have been educated at our School, and if so, was the first pupil to become its Master. He was originally ordained as an evangelist for one of the West Indian Islands; but finding the climate there unhealthy, soon returned to Boston. During his stay in the West Indies he had studied medicine, and after his return to Boston engaged in practice as a physician. When he took charge of the Latin School his friends, who had employed him in this capacity, persuaded him not to relinquish this profession. Accordingly he continued to practice in many families, and after he relinquished the charge of the School, on account of his infirmities, which he did in 1734, he passed the remainder of his days in that occupation.

"He was called the 'beloved physician,' and was so agreeable in his manners, that when he entered the chambers of the sick, 'his voice and countenance did good like medicine.' Amidst the multiplicity of his duties as instructor and physician, in extensive practice, he never left the ministerial work."‡

During Mr. Williams's mastership, the following important passages occur in the Records of the Town:

At a meeting of the Free holders and other Inhabitants of the Town of Boston duly qualified and warned according to Law, being convened at the Town House on monday the 19th of December 1709:

. . . . That a Committee be chosen to consider of the affaires relateing to the Gramer Free School of this Town, & to make report thereof at the Town meeting in March next.

Voted. That Seven persons be chosen to be of ye Sd Committee.

Voted. That Waite Winthrop Esqr, Samll. Sewall Esqr., Elisha Cook Esqr, Elisha Hutchinson Esqr, Isa Addington Esqr, John Foster Esqr, and Mr. Ezekiel Lewise be ye sd Comittee to consider abt ye School.

At a meeting of the Free holders and other Inhabitants of the Town of Boston duly qualified and warned according to Law, being convened at the Town House the 13th day of March 1709-0.

. The Committee chosen by the Town the 19th of December Last, to consider the Affaires relating to ye Free Grammar School of this Town, having now made their report unto ye Town as followeth vizt.

Wee have discoursed with mr Williams the present master of whos: qualifications and fitness for that imployment we tak: for granted every body must be abundantly Satisfied. He expresses a good Inclination to the worke, and his resolution intirely to devote him Selfe, thereto, If the Town please to Encourage his continuance therein by allowing him a competent Sallary, that he may Support his family, and Granting him an Assistant. He is Very Sensible of the Advantage of the Assistance Lately afforded him, both with respect to his health and also as to ye Schollars.

We are of opinion the worke of that School do's necessarily require the Attendance of a master and an Usher, and it seems Impracticable for one person alone, well to Oversee the manners of So great a number of Schollars (oft times more then a hundred) to hear their daily Exercises, and Instruct them to that degree of profitting, which other wise may be wth an Assistant.

We Recommend it to the Town to Encourage mr Williams's continuance in the School by advanceing his Salary to the Sum of One-hundred pounds p Annu, which we thinck to be a modest demand, and to grant him the Assistance of an Usher, at the Towns charge. In which we have ye concurrent Opinion and Advice of ye Revrd Ministers.

We further propose and recommend*, as of Great Service and Advantage for the promoting of Diligence and good literature, That the Town Agreeably to the Usage in England, and (as we understand) in Some time past practiced here, Do Nominate and Appoint a Certain Number of Gentlemen, of Liberal Education, Together with some of ye Revd Ministers of the Town to be Inspectors of the Sd Schoole under that name Title or denomination, To Visit ye School from time to time, when and as Oft, as they shall thinck fit to Enform themselves of the methodes used in teaching of ye Schollars and to Inquire of their Proficiency, and be present at the performance of Some of their Exercises, the Master being before Notified of their coming, And with him to consult and Advise of further methods for ye Advancement of Learning and the Good Government of the Schoole.

* In this recommendation, and the subsequent action thereupon we have the origin of our present School Committee.

And at their Sd Visitation, One of the Ministers by turns to pray with the Schollars, and Entertain 'em with Some Instructions of Piety Specially Adapted to their age and Education. The Inspectors, also with the master to Introduce an Usher, upon such Salary as the Town shall agree to grant for his Service, all which is submitted to Consideration.

Voted. That the Town will proceed to Consider the Said Report in the Several Articles thereof.

Voted. That Mr. Nathaniel Williams's Salary be advanced to One hundred Pounds p' Annum to Encourage his continuance: in the School.

Voted. That an Usher at the Town's Charge be allowed to Assist Mr. Williams in the Sd School.

Voted. That the Town doth agree to mak : choyce of Inspector according to the aforesaid proposalls.

Voted. That Inspectors be chosen to Serve for one year ensuing.

Voted. That five persons be chosen to attend ye Sd Service.

Voted. That the Honble Waite Winthrop Esqr, Samll Sewall Esqr, Elisha Cook Esqr, Isaac Addington Esqr, and Thomas Brattle Esqr are desired to Attend the Sd Servic: as Inspectors agreeable to the Sd proposalls.

Voted. That the said Inspectors are desired to Introduce an Usher into ye Sd School, and to Agree with him for a Recompence for his Service, not Exceeding Forty pounds p Annum.

Voted. That the Sd Inspectors do agree wth mr Thayer for his past Service in that Worke & allow him for ye Same not exceeding the aforesaid Rate of Forty pounds p Annu.

About a year later we find the following on the Records :

At a Meeting of the Free-holders and other Inhabitants of the Town of Boston, duly qualified and Warned according to Law, being Convened at the Town-House the 12th day of March 1710-11.

. A Memorial offered to the Town at this meeting by the Select men being as followeth vizt.

Whereas according to the Information of Some of the Learned, who have made Observation of the easie & pleasant Rules and Methods used in Some Schools in Europe, where Scollars, p'haps within the compass of one year, have attained to a Competent Proficiency So as to be able to read, and discourse in Lattin, and of themselves capable to make Considerable progress therein: and that according to the methodes used here Very many hundreds of boyes in this Town, who by their Parents were never designed for a more Liberal Education, have Spent two, three, four years or more of their more Early days at the Lattin School, which hath proved of very Little, or no benefit as to their after Accomplishmt.

It is therefore proposed to the Town that they would Recomend it to those Gentlem whom they shall chuse as Inspectors of the Schools, Together with ye ministers of the Town, To Consider whether in this Town (where the Free School is maintained cheifly by a Town Rate on the Inhabitants) That Supposing the former more Tedious and burthensome methode may be thought the best for such as are designed for Schollars (which is by Some questioned). Yet for the Sake & benefit of others, who usually are the greater number by far in Such Schools,—Whether it might not be adviseable that Some more easie and delightfull methodes be there attended and put in practice, And to Signifie to ye Town their thoughts therein, in order to the Encouragemnt of the same.*

Mr. Williams lived for about four years after resigning his office of Master† and died on the 15th of January, 1738.‡

A short sketch of his life and character, which will be found in the Appendix‡ was given in the funeral sermon upon him, preached at the South Church, by the Rev. Thomas Prince, the pastor.

During Mr. Cheever's mastership the increase of the Town required new schools, and, as early as 1682, measures were taken to supply the need. In 1711, soon after Mr. Williams became the Master of our School, a free Grammar School was established at the North End, of which Mr. Recompense Wadsworth was chosen the first Master. In 1768 Mr. Samuel Hunt was chosen Master of that School, which subsequently became the Eliot School, and his transference, with many of his pupils, to our School, in 1776, makes a close connection between the two, and justifies the few pages which we have given to that School in our Catalogue.

Among his assistants Mr. Williams had for a time the celebrated Jeremy Gridley, who was succeeded in 1730 by Mr. John Lovell, a graduate of Harvard College in 1728. When Mr. Williams

* This paper is printed with the spelling conformed to modern usage, in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, xx: 4, from what is probably the original paper presented by the Selectmen, and now in the possession of the Overseers of the Poor of Boston, which bears the heading "Proposals to the Inhabitants of the Town of Boston relating to the Grammar Free School," and concludes: "Mar. 10th 1710. Ordered by the Selectmen to be laid before the Town."

† During the period of Mr. Williams's mastership we find the following entries, having reference to our School, in Sewall's Diary, vol. iii:—

March 8 [1719-20.] Col. Fitch express'd himself as much prizing Mr. Granger's Accomplishments to Teach Writing; never such a person in Boston before. Resolves to send his son to him; has told him he will do so. Professes himself of the Church of England. As far as I could gather, He and Capt. Noyes would be glad he might Teach in the new South-School-house.

March 29 [1719-20.] The Inspectors of the Grammar Schools met at the Council-Chamber; Sewall, Davenport, Cooke, Savage, and with Mr. Williams the Master, approv'd of Mr. Benjamin Gibson, Bachelour, to be the Usher in School-street. Mr. White came in, and ratified what we had done. Dr. Clark told me he was for it, a little before the Meeting.

JOHN LOVELL.

resigned, Mr. Lovell was promoted to be Head Master, and for "nearly forty-two years discharged the duties of that important station with great skill and fidelity."* The list of his pupils embraces many of the most illustrious men of the time. He had, and probably deserved, a high reputation for learning; but was severe and rough, a rigid disciplinarian, and thoroughly feared by his pupils.† In the Harvard Memorial Hall is his portrait, by his pupil Nathaniel Smibert, "drawn," says Judge Cranch, "while the terrific impressions of the pedagogue were yet vibrating on his nerves. I found it so perfect a likeness of my old neighbor that I did not wonder when my young friend told me that a sudden undesigned glance at it had often made him shudder."

We have given some anecdotes of Mr. Lovell under his name in the list of Masters, on pages 6 and 7 of the Catalogue, and, therefore, will not repeat them. As there stated he was a rigid loyalist, and, when Boston was evacuated, retired to Halifax, and remained to the close of his life. His son James, for a long time his assistant, was an equally strong patriot.

There is an interesting account of the School in Mr. Lovell's time in the following letters from Harrison Gray Otis, Mayor of Boston in 1829, 1830 and 1831, who was one of his pupils.

December 17th, 1844.

GENTLEMEN,—I send you as requested some reminiscences connected with the old Latin School in Boston. I was a pupil—first of Master Lovell, afterwards of Master Hunt. I perfectly remember the day I entered the School, July, 1773, being then seven years and nine months old. Immediately after the end of Commencement week, I repaired, according to the rule pre-

† While these pages were going through the press, a gentleman of this city discovered among some old family papers, the following letter, which he handed to the Committee, and which we print, both for the coincidence and because it shows that the habit of disparaging teachers is not a peculiarity of the present generation, but was among the practices of the past as well. The writer was a pupil of our Class of 1757.

[From Wm. Savage to Samuel Savage.]

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, May 2, 1803.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—On the 30th ultimo I was favored with your very kind and truly acceptable letter of 14th March. What you say of John has relieved my mind of much anxiety. I wish him to improve himself in his own language in preference to any other, and then learn French; this language should be acquired as early as possible. . . . Do not let him proceed from any one given point until he is master of it, for another. What have I lost by the superficial instruction at that old rascal Lovell's School, and that puppy his son James. . . .

scribed for candidates for admission to the lowest form, to old Master Lovell's house, situate in School Street, nearly opposite the site of the old School House. I was early on the ground, anticipated only by Mr. John Hubbard, who lived near—it being understood that the boys were to take their places on the form in the same routine that they presented themselves at the house. The probationary exercise was reading a few verses in the Bible. Having passed muster in this, I was admitted as second boy on the lowest form.

I attended school from that time until April, 1775, (the day of Lexington battle), being then on the second form. The school was divided into seven classes. A separate bench or form was allotted to each, besides a skipping form, appropriated for a few boys who were intended to be pushed forward one year in advance. The books studied the first year were Cheever's Accidence, a small Nomenclature (sic), and Corderius' Colloquies. The second year, Æsop's Fables, and towards the close of it, Eutropius and Ward's Lilly's Grammar. The third year Eutropius and Grammar continued, and a book commenced called Clarke's Introduction. In the fourth year, the fourth form, as well as the fifth and sixth, being furnished with desks, commenced "making Latin," as the phrase was, and to the books used by the third form Caesar's Commentaries were added. After this were read in succession by the three upper classes, Tully's Orations, the first books of the Æneid, and the highest classes dipped into Xenophon and Homer. School opened at 7 in summer and 8 in winter, A. M., and at 1 P. M. throughout the year. It was ended at 11 A. M. and 5 P. M., at which hours the greater part went to writing-school for an hour at a time—but a portion remained and took lessons in writing of "Master James," son of the Preceptor, and some young girls then came in to school.

The discipline of the School was strict but not severe. The Master's—Old Gaffer, as we called him—desk was near the south-west corner of the room; Master James's desk was in the north-east corner. I remember to have seen used no other instrument of punishment but the ferule in Master Lovell's day. Gaffer's ferule was a short, stubbed, greasy-looking article, which, when not in use, served him as a stick of sugar candy. The lightest punishment was one clap, the severest four—the most usual, two, one on each hand. The inflictions of the old gentleman were not much dreaded; his ferule seemed to be a mere continuation of his arm, of which the centre of motion was the shoulder. It descended altogether with a whack, and there was the end of it, after blowing the fingers. But Master James's fashion of wielding his weapon was another affair. He had a gymnastic style of flourishing, altogether unique—a mode of administering our experimentum ferules that was absolutely terrific. He never punished in Gaffer's presence, but whenever the old gentleman withdrew, all began to contemplate the "day's disaster," and to tremble, not when he "frown'd," for he did not frown, nor was he an ill-tempered person, but rather smiled sardonically, as if preparing for a pugilistic effort, and the execution as nearly resembled the motion of a flail in the hands of an expert thrasher as could be acquired by long practice. School broke up at 10 A. M. on Thursday,—a relic of an old custom to give opportunity to attend the “Thursday lecture,”—which was I believe never improved in my day. School opened with “attendamus” to a short prayer. It ended with “deponite libros.” The boys had a recess of a few minutes to go into the yard—eight at a time. No leave was asked in words; but there was a short club of a yard in length which was caught up by some boy, round whom those who wished to go out clustered, and were drilled down to eight. The club was then held up near Master’s nose, who nodded assent, when the eight vanished club in hand. Upon their return there was a rush to seize the club which was placed by the door, and a new conscription of eight formed, and so toties quoties.

The old Master was a loyalist, and admitted, as was said, to the coteries of Gov. Gage. Master James, on the contrary, was an ultra whig. He remained in town after the siege commenced, was imprisoned on a charge of corresponding with the Americans—carried off by the British I think to Halifax, and came back after a long absence. I do not remember his vocation during the first year after his return, but think he was once returned to Congress. On the accession of Genl. Washington to the Presidency, he received the appointment of Naval Officer, which he retained to the last. His father went off with the British troops and died abroad.

On the 19th April, 1775, I went to school for the last time. In the morning about seven, Percy’s brigade was drawn up extending from Scollay’s building thro’ Tremont Street nearly to the bottom of the Mall, preparing to take up their march for Lexington. A corporal came up to me as I was going to school, and turned me off to pass down Court St. which I did, and came up School St. to the School-house. It may well be imagined that great agitation prevailed, the British line being drawn up a few yards only from the School-house door. As I entered School I heard the announcement of “deponite libros” and ran home for fear of the regulars. Here ended my connection with Mr. Lovell’s administration of the School. Soon afterwards I left town and did not return until after the evacuation by the British in March, 1776. Then I entered the same School under Master Hunt, with whom I remained until I entered College in 1779. In regard to the general discipline of the School in Mr. Hunt’s time it was much the same as in Mr. Lovell’s, and as to details there are many now on the stage who can furnish them.

Another letter on the files of the Committee gives some additional information, and is as follows:—

Boston, 18 Dec., 1844.

MY DEAR SIR: The only Latin School (except the North End School) that I remember was that which stood on the site of that which has lately been pulled down, and on which is erected the Horticultural building, now being finished. I have no remembrance that the exterior walls of the old School were ever removed, but of this am not positive. The interior was very much altered and enlarged. The old school-room occupied the entire lower story, and there were no chambers or partitions. I have no recollection of any school-house in the rear of the King's Chapel, and am confident there was none.* The house next adjoining the wall of the Chapel cemetery east was an ancient stone building of grotesque architecture, which, when I went to school was occupied by the British, or (I believe), German Genl. Haldiman, who commanded under Gage. The same house afterwards and, probably within your remembrance, was owned and inhabited by John Lowell, Esq. Next easterly to this was the house of old Master Lovell. It was there "The modest mansion stood." The Chapel burying ground extended north on Tremont St. to the line it now occupies, and in the house forming the north boundary liv'd Doctor Cannor† (sic) the Rector. The square east of the Rector's House, and north of Master Lovell's and Haldiman's, was county land‡ occupied by the jail and accessible only from Court Street.§

* Mr. Otis doubtless meant there was none within his recollection, as the fact that the old School-house was in the rear of King's Chapel is as well established as the location of the Chapel itself.

† Rev. Henry Caner, who was inducted Rector of King's Chapel, April 11, 1747.

‡ On a map of this locality in 1722, this county land, mentioned by Mr. Otis, is represented as having trees upon it.

§ The entire square bounded by what are now School, Tremont, Court and Washington Streets, is said by tradition, derived from Chief Justice Sewall, to have been selected by Isaac Johnson (the husband of the Lady Arabella) for his lot; and further that by his desire he was buried at the southwest end of that lot, "which gave occasion for the first burying-place to be laid out about his grave." That this is a matter of some doubt, is generally agreed, and it would seem conclusive from the remarks of the Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Vol. xvii. (1879-80) p. 128, that neither Johnson nor his wife was buried here; but the burying-place is that adjoining the King's Chapel. The southeast corner lot of School Street, where the old bookstore now is, was early occupied by the house and garden of Edward Hutchinson, whose property extended a little distance up the street; next on this street was Thomas Scottow's house and garden. A part of this, which is substantially the present City Hall lot, he sold to the Town in 1645; on this was built the first School-house. Our Master, Mr. Woodmansey, lived in Scottow's old house. Between the teacher's house and the School-house, in 1652, Richard Cooke was permitted to build, on payment of a ground rent, which went for the teacher's salary. Interesting facts concerning other early tenants and residents on this street will be found in the Second Report of the Record Commissioners, p. 75. Opposite Hutchinson, and nearly opposite the foot of School Street, lived Governor Winthrop. Next to Hutchinson, on Washington Street, called in Suffolk Deeds (i. 60) "the high streete," was the house and garden of Maj. Gen'l Robert Sedgwick, and, in 1645, an "ordinary," then in possession of James Pen, a man of high consideration, and a ruling elder in the church. In a court running towards the present Court Square, which we suppose to be what is now Williams Court, stood an old tenement occupied by a poor woman, whose drunkenness was the cause of the "great fire" of 1711. North of Gen. Sedgwick's was another house and garden, belonging to Valentine Hill, and from a building on this estate it is probable that the first number of the Boston News Letter was published in 1704. North of this lot, as we learn from Suffolk Deeds (i. 60) was the house of Philemon

The nearest School to the Latin School was on the east end of Scollay's building,* forming a part thereof, and since cut off to open the communication from Tremont St. to Cornhill. It was a public Town School, called Proctor's School, though in my time kept by Master Carter. The boys of the two Schools often met in Tremont St. and dealt out their gibes in passing each other—for example :—

Carter's boys shut up in a pen
They can't get out but now and then;
And when they get out they dance about
For fear of Latin School gentlemen.

There was another public writing school in [now] West Street, on land now in whole, or part, being Amos Lawrence's garden. Mr. Holbrook was Pormort, our first Master; though we have not found it mentioned in the Book of Possessions, it is certain that he did own land in this immediate vicinity. Next was the First Meeting House, which occupied the land where Rogers Building now stands. In the rear of this, and north of Hill, was Richard Truesdale's house and garden, and later here resided Benjamin Faneuil, brother of Peter. On the corner lot, where Sears Building is, was the house and yard of John Leverett. On Court Street, formerly Queen Street, and long called Prison Lane, next to Leverett was the house, barn and yard of Richard Parker, which was bounded east by the Market place (see Book of Possessions, Second Report Record Commissioners, p. 96). Where the Court House now is was the old prison, behind which was a garden. The prison itself was an old building of stone, described by one of its tenants as "the nearest resemblance to a hell upon earth," its outer walls three feet thick, its unglazed windows barred with iron, the proximity of which does not seem to have prevented the Latin School boys from breaking the windows in the Chapel, (see A Vindication, etc., Andros Tracts, ii. 63), as charges for repairing them are of frequent occurrence on the early books of the Chapel. Next to the prison was a house early occupied by Richard Tapping, and later by Critchley, who married the widow of Wm. Dinely, to whose heirs belonged the corner lot, on which in Gov. Shirley's days was the house of the famous Boston merchant, John Wendell. Adjoining this, where the Historical Society's building, and a part of the Museum building stands, was the house and garden of Henry Messenger, a joiner. Then came the burying ground and the King's Chapel. The Chapel was then a "little wooden building, with three windows on each side, and three at the flat, back of the Church. It had a tower about as high as the present one, surmounted by a tall mast, at whose top was a weather-cock, and half way up a large gilt crown." (Foote's Annals, p. 205.) Tremont Street was then a quiet "back streete leading from Prison lane to the almshouse." (Fifth Report Record Commissioners, p. 73.) On the west side was an orchard, and houses in which at various times were the residences of Cotton, Oxenbridge, Maude, Bellingham, and Sir Henry Vane. The Common then extended nearly to School Street. Daniel Maude first lived on the east side of Tremont Street, a little south of School Street.

* This school was that mentioned in the Town Records (1698-9, Jan. 30) as "Lately Built in the Prison Lane on the side of the hill, Over against the Land of Capt. Samll Sewell." The hill was that so long known as Cotton Hill, and the exact location of the School-house can easily be found from the entry of Dec. 20, 1698, immediately preceding that just quoted. From the Second Report of the Record Commissioners (p. 111) we learn it was built in 1683-4, as a free writing school; John Cole was its first master, and about 1700, Richard Henchman. (See Drake's Boston, p. 512.) Near it Gov. Endicott seems to have lived until his death.

the teacher. To this school I went in private hours [from 11 A. M. and 5 P. M.] to write and cypher. The North End public writing-school was kept by Master Tileston as far back as I can remember.

As to Mr. Hunt I have no reason to disparage his capacity as a Teacher, nor his qualities as a man. He and I kept a most even account, error excepted in one case only on his part, and we parted on excellent terms. Any further explanation shall be promptly afforded, whenever you favor me with a call.

Very truly and resp'y,

(Signed)

H. G. OTIS.

It was Lovell's boys who had the memorable interview with General Haldimand to protest against the destruction of their coast, an account of which has been given on page 88 of the Catalogue, under the name of Jonathan Darby Robins, of our Class of 1766, one of the participants in it. A contemporary account is given in a letter of John Andrews,* which we insert here:—

Sunday, January 29th. [1775]

* * * * Shall close this by giving you a small anecdote, relating to some of our School lads—who as formerly in this season improv'd the Coast from Sherburn's hill down to School street. General Haldiman improving the house that belongs to Old Cook, his servant took it upon him to cut up their coast and fling ashes upon it. The lads made a muster, and chose a committee to wait upon the General, who admitted them, and heard their complaint, which was couch'd in very genteel terms, complaining that their fathers before 'em had improved it as a coast from time immemorial, &c. He ordered his servant to repair the damage, and acquainted the Governor with the affair, who observed that it was impossible to beat the notion of Liberty out of the people, as it was rooted in 'em from their childhood.

Among Mr. Lovell's assistants was Mr. Nathaniel Gardner, who left school in 1735 and college in 1739. He was a fine scholar, a poet, and a wit, occasionally a preacher, and always a merry companion. There is a Latin poem extant written when he was in the School, (dated 1754,) of some hundred verses, in which he describes to his friend Beveridge the round of duties in the School, and the books studied, of which we give a specimen in the Appendix.†

Mr. James Lovell was assistant to his father for many years. He was a staunch patriot, and delivered the first Oration in commemoration of the Boston Massacre, in the South Meeting House. He was imprisoned in Boston Jail for his political faith,‡ and subsequently carried by the British troops to Halifax, where he remained six months before he was exchanged.

After Lovell's departure, the School was closed for a short time* until, in June, 1776, Samuel Hunt, an old pupil of the School and a graduate of Harvard College, in 1765, was transferred from the North to the South Grammar School, and remained at its head for about thirty years.† He did not have, by any means, an easy time. Conscientious and rigid in discipline, he was occasionally involved in difficulties with the parents of his pupils, and did not always coincide with the School Committee.‡ He had reason, too, to complain of his treatment by the town, which did not carry out its contract. He rightly supposed himself to have been established in his office for life,

* It has generally been supposed that the School remained closed until the 8th November, 1776, and under that impression the Latin School Association celebrated the centennial anniversary of the reopening of the School, Nov. 8th, 1876, but statements in papers of Master Hunt, recently recovered, show that pupils were admitted in October and November, before November 8th, which renders it probable that the School was opened earlier.

"The writer remembers Master Hunt as a frequent visitor at Mr. Bingham's bookstore. The Committee removed him after several years' service under the new system, and the injustice of the removal was the burden of his conversation. He taught private pupils several years after he left the public service, was a venerable-looking man, and is well represented by his grand-children, one of whom has been distinguished as a teacher of the same School."—*Wm. on a good salary, with certain perquisites and a house to live in. A grant of money was afterwards substituted for his perquisites, but later his house was taken away and no return made to him.

After some controversy between him and the Committee, he resigned in 1805, on a pension secured for him by the exertions of the Committee, and moved first to Watertown, and later to Kentucky, where he died.*

An interesting description of the School in those days is given in the following letter from Dr. James Jackson, the well-known physician, a pupil under Mr. Hunt :—

DEAR SIR,—It is about sixty years, since in May or June, 1785, I first went to the Latin School under Master Hunt. It was not in School Street, but in old Faneuil Hall that I first attended this School; for the old School-house was undergoing repairs that summer. Having just moved into this town, my three older brothers and myself were sent to the School at an unusual time of the year, and I was so young that I was not put into any class until the regular period, July, when I was placed in the first class, or first form, as we sometimes called it. Those were great days for me; I felt

* In the diary of Dr. Bentley of Salem, an usher in our School from 1776–1778, occurs the following entry :—

“Oct. 28th, 1813. We have confirmation of the death of my old schoolmaster, Samuel Hunt, Esq., aged seventy-one. He died Sept. 8, at Lexington, Kentucky. He was for many years Preceptor of the Grammar School in Boston. In 1767, he succeeded Master Peleg Wiswall (who died that year, aged eighty-four), and he continued Preceptor of the North Grammar School till the Revolution. As Master John Lovell retired to Nova Scotia, a Refugee, upon the evacuation of the town of Boston by the British troops in 1776, Mr. Hunt succeeded him, and I united with him as an usher, as his health obliged him to journey. Upon his return and establishment, I went and opened the North School in 1778, which I afterwards left, and went to Cambridge in 1780. [Wm. B. Fowle, to whom we are indebted for this extract, says: The Diary says 1800, but this is evidently a clerical error. Dr. Bentley graduated in 1777, and was appointed tutor in 1780.]

“Dr. Cotton Mather tells us that ‘Ezekiel Chever came to Boston, Jan. 6, 1670, and remained thirty-eight years, and died Aug. 21, 1708, in the ninety-fourth year of his age.’ He was succeeded by Nathaniel Williams, who graduated at Cambridge, N. E., 1693. He was in the School from 1703 to 1734, having Mr. Lovell as his assistant, and died Jan. 1738, aged sixty-three. Mr. Lovell was placed at the head of the School when Mr. Williams resigned in 1734. He was graduated in 1728, became assistant in 1730, and upon the death of Mr. Williams had the direction of the School till he left Boston in March, 1776, above forty-two years. Mr. S. Hunt succeeded, and continued till 1804, thirty-seven years from his induction. He had not the critical acumen of Chever, nor the talents of the physician and divine which united with the eloquence and science of Williams, nor the literature of Lovell; but he was successful in teaching the rules he adopted, and in preparing his scholars so that they were distinguished by the extent of their elementary knowledge. He was too apt to complain when all were obliged to suffer, and alienated the men who succeeded to his old friends but had no estimate of his worth or his services. He was obliged to resign to a man who did not long retain the public favor.”

elevated, and thence remember the time very well. I remained in the School till December, 1788, when I removed from Boston.

The Latin School was then divided into seven classes, and the pupils spent seven years in it, usually entering it from seven to nine years of age. During this time, however, or after arriving in the third class, I believe they went twice a week, half a day, to an English public, or private, school, where they were taught writing and arithmetic, etc.

The class to which I belonged was a large one, but leaving it early, and not remaining in town to be conversant with my classmates, I have lost the recollection of most of them. Francis Welch, Esq., is the only one living now whom I know. The late Judge Peter O. Thacher was of my class, and my great crony while in it.

Master Hunt was at the head of the School before, and for many years after, I was in it. Mr. Payson first, and afterwards Mr. Dingley (afterwards Dr. Dingley of New York), were ushers.

We began our studies with Cheever's Latin Accidence, a book which I have always held in great veneration; next came "quid agis," which you will know means Corderius, his dialogues, if you had the happiness to study the book. This book was made easy by the English translation of its short sentences, in columns opposite the Latin; and I am satisfied that this easy introduction to the reading of a foreign language is the most eligible mode, at least for little boys. Several small works followed, among which I have always held in sweet remembrance Erasmus's Colloquies, more especially the Alchemist and the Shipwreck. I have never since heard of a shipwreck in every detail without bringing to mind this colloquy, which I must have read as early as 1786 or '87. It is not now in a studied recollection only, but most frequently, that this remembrance of those school days, of many particulars in my studies, as well as in my sports, have come back to me with great delight.

In general, I recollect that we were well-drilled in the grammar, so called; made familiar with the inflexions of words and with the rules of syntax; required to be exact in the pronunciation of words, and in the accent and quantities, though not following all the rules now deemed most correct; and were put early to "making Latin," at first in the easiest and simplest methods. The principle of emulation was in high respect in those days; we contended for places at every recitation; and I must say that neither then, nor in other Schools afterwards, nor at College, did I ever discover the evil effects which are ascribed to the influence of this principle at the present day by gentlemen whom I respect very highly. They may be right; but I know my friend Peter Thacher and I were almost always next to each other, and were changing places every day, and that we were the best of cronies, all the time, in school and out. The same was true as to others, under my close observation, in this and other Schools, and in College. At least, generally, neither envy nor hatred was engendered between the nearest rivals; but, on the contrary, a sincere friendship was maintained between them in many instances.

To these desultory remarks I wish to add something respecting Master Hunt. He certainly was not well spoken of among his boys, when I was in his School, and if their judgments were to be relied on, he was not among the excellent. But the same was true in respect to most of the schoolmasters I knew when a boy. It seemed to be matter of course to find fault with the Master. And, at College, the excellent Prest. Willard was spoken of in terms that were opprobrious by the pupils under him; so that it was not till my Junior year that I discovered that he was not a cold, austere, heartless despot, but on the other hand, a man of great sensibility, truly tender-hearted, a lover of justice, but not given to severity. Master Hunt was a passionate man; and certainly committed errors from this cause. But these were occasional. In general he was kind, and he was, I think, greatly interested in the welfare and improvement of his scholars. While I was in his School he was frequently adopting temporary measures to excite an interest in their studies among his pupils. Often he would come into school and write with chalk some Latin sentence on the wall. Labor omnia vincit, is one of the earliest of these which I recollect. At one period he took half a day in each week for a general examination. He began with the first class, going thro' the books they had studied, and went up to the seventh, the highest, calling on each boy to answer some question, to translate a sentence, to parse a word, or to scan a line. He would always make us repeat the rule in syntax and in prosody.

In this way the earliest studies were recalled to the oldest scholars, and the youngest formed some notions of the whole matter to be studied. The School was in perfect silence during this time, and all were acquiring some knowledge. When the interest in this plan began to flag he dropped it, and so as to other temporary practices. At another period he called on the two highest scholars to choose sides, and the whole School was divided between them. Then questions were put, as in the other case, and the contest was which side should give the most correct answers. The interest attending these contests was very great; and I do not recollect that they ever gave rise to bickering, or ill-feelings of any sort. Sometimes the old Master would take occasion to speak in commendation of his former pupils; and most especially of Harry Otis, as he was not irreverently called in those days, for he was just commencing the active business of life. Mr. Otis had not then shown that he was the most eloquent of popular orators in our town: he was not yet at the head of the bar, nor yet the most prominent leader in our General Court in a high-minded and patriotic party. But at that day Master Hunt distinguished him as the first among the scholars he had educated, noting his industry and accuracy as a student, as well as the great talents which, in his anticipations, destined him to be one of the great men of the land. We boys had reason to rejoice in this high and just estimate of our venerable friend; for when Mr. Otis became Major of the Boston Light Infantry, Master Hunt gave us a half-holiday whenever that company "turned out," in honor of the Commander; always endeavoring by his remarks to incite us to imitate the hero in his industry at least. I make this statement as creditable to the sagacity of Mr.

Hunt, showing that he was not a mere pedagogue; and of his readiness to avail himself of everything which would incite in his pupils the love of good learning.

You will not doubt, my dear sir, that it is nearly sixty years since I was at our great School. Old men tell long stories and run into little details. Let them pass. I sat down desirous to show you that I remembered the School with great pleasure, and always have, and I regret that I did not go through its whole course of studies; and also desirous to do credit to Master Hunt, of whom, since I arrived at years of discretion, I have always thought well. I think his pupils did not do him justice, and that some occasional sallies of passion were remembered by them, while many excellent, daily services, performed with a good spirit and honest purposes, were overlooked.

I am, your friend and servant,

Pemberton Square,
Oct. 4, 1844.

JAMES JACKSON.
To BENJ. A. GOULD, Esq.

William Biglow, who had for some time previous been a teacher in Salem, succeeded Mr. Hunt. Whatever his qualifications as an instructor, he was no more successful as a disciplinarian than his predecessor. He is said by those who remember his government to have been harsh and severe. The boys rebelled at his rule, and resisted his authority.*

In his speech at the dinner of the Boston Latin School, in 1876, Ralph Waldo Emerson thus speaks of Mr. Biglow:—

When I entered the Latin School, nine or ten years old, William Biglow was master. The School-house was very old and shabby, and it was decided to pull it down and rebuild it on the same ground. In rebuilding, the scholars were removed to the old wooden block on the Milldam,† and soon after to a lot on Pemberton Hill. You need not seek for the places for you cannot find them. One was where the Boston & Maine Depot now stands, and the other was where Scollay's Building stood, now called Tremont Row.

The new School-house was rebuilt where the Parker House now stands. In Mr. William Biglow's reign the boys discovered his habit of drinking, and one day when he was giving orders to the boys on one side of the School there was a sudden shout on the opposite side. He turned around amazed to them, and instantly the boys on the eastern side roared aloud. I have never known any rebellion like this in the English Schools to surpass it. I think the School was immediately dismissed and I think Mr. Biglow never entered it again. I remember that on the following morning the prayer was simply these words: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Rufus Dawes, another pupil of Mr. Biglow, in an article entitled Boyhood Memories, in the Boston "Miscellany," for February, 1843, thus describes the School of his day :

. The public Latin School (before the days of Mr. Gould, who was another Luther to these places), presented the oddest sight conceivable. What a pity the old house could not have been suffered to remain ; for it was the Harrow of Harvard University ! There were to be seen such names as "ISAAC COFFIN" carved on the forms ; (the old admiral had been one of Master Lovel's scholars), and other pen-knife memorials of generations passed away. Sir Isaac loved to talk about the old school-house, and laughed heartily when I told him that I had the "Gradus" of his boyhood, ornamented with his pen-drawings of ships, the keepsake which he gave my father when he ran away to join the British navy. Those drawings show that "the boy is father of the man," and how the under-current of the mind works out the character, regardless of the drift at the surface ; for he was an excellent scholar, and was to have had the "first part" on leaving school.

Somewhere about 1811, the public Latin School was under the charge of a man, whose soubriquet was "Sawney," an extremely original and eccentric character, who lorded it over four or five classes of the most intractable and turbulent fellows, sixty or seventy in number, that ever met together to have Latin and Greek hammered into them. Yet among them were some "spirits finely touched," who were destined to shine with "the bright, particular stars" of the intellectual firmament. I will point out one of them :—

It is 8 o'clock A. M. : and the thin gentleman in black, with a small, jointed cane under his arm, his eyes deeply sunken in his head, has asked that spiritual-looking boy in blue nankeen, who seems to be about ten years old, to "touch the bell,"—it was a privilege to do this ; and there he stands ! that boy—whose image, more than any others, is still deeply stamped upon my mind, as I then saw him and loved him, I knew not why, and thought him so angelic and remarkable—feeling toward him more than a boy's emotion, as if a new spring of brotherly affection had suddenly broken loose in my heart. There is no indication of turbulence and disquiet about him ; but, with a happy combination of energy and gentleness, how truly is he the father of the man ! He has touched the bell, and while he takes his seat among his fellows, he little dreams that in after-times, he will strike a different note, and call around him a school of the transcendental philosophy. He is RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

After a prayer, the morning exercises commence ; Sawney, with the jointed cane in his hand, prepares to hear the lessons, studied over night. A boy has committed some indiscretion, and the ratan, rushing through the air, descends on his shoulders.

"I wont be struck for nothing !" screams the urchin.

"Then, I'll strike you for something," replies Sawney, while the ratan whizzes again about his ears.

"Mind out, how you hit me on the cheek!" exclaims the same fellow, at the top of his voice.

"Do you call that your cheek!" rejoined Sawney, imitating a malignant smile, and, at the same time, cutting the boy in the immediate neighborhood of the breech, "then turn your other one, you scamp!"

While this thrashing, and the altercation between the thrasher and the thrashed are going on (and they generally go together), the other side of the room yells out a hideous shout in full chorus, much in the style of the New York milkmen of Winnebago celebrity; and while from this choir some one performer more conspicuous than the rest is singled out for a flogging, the other side, in its turn, screams like a wounded elephant, or a steam-engine. Thus for some minutes, Sawney has to travel backward and forward, thrashing this side and saluted by that, alternately; till at last he stops short in the middle of the room while the tumult stops short likewise. "I'll tell you what it is, my fine fellows," says he, reconnoitring the enemy, and peering through his rough eyebrows at them, with mock ferocity:

"If you'll be good, I'll thank you!
If not, I'll spank you!"

He generally gave such orders in rhyme, and now delivers himself of this elegant distich in the queer sarcastic manner so peculiar to himself. At this the boys explode in one simultaneous burst of laughter; which through the successive stages of cachinnation, titter and snuffle, finally subsides beneath the influence of ratan.

The exercises are now resumed. "Go on!" says Sawney. "Bangs! what is an active verb?"

"An active verb," replies Bangs, "is a verb which expresses"—

"Well! what does an active verb express?"

Bangs twists and turns, and looks imploringly, first at his right hand class-mate and then at his left; but neither can prompt him, if he knows; as probably he does not.

"Well!" continues Sawney switching the air with his cane, "well, mutton-head, what does an active verb express?"

After a little delay,—“I'll tell you what it expresses,” he resumes, bringing the stick down upon the boy's haunches with decided emphasis, “it expresses an action and necessarily supposes an agent, (flourishing the cane, which descends again as before,) and an object acted upon. As castigo te, I chastise thee: do you understand now, hey?”

"Yes, sir! yes, sir!" replies the boy, doing his best to get out of the way of the ratan. But Sawney is not disposed to let him off so.

"Now tell me when an active verb is also called transitive."

"I don't know, sir," drawls Bangs, doggedly.

"Don't you?" follows Sawney; "then I'll inform you. An active verb is called transitive, when the action passeth over (whack, whack!) to the object. You (whack!) are the object. I am (whack!) the agent. Now take care how you go home and say that I never taught you anything. Do you hear?" (whack!)

"Don't hit me again on the ear!" shrieks Bangs, shaking his head at the master, and doubling up his fists under the form. But a few more whacks undouble them again, and reduce him to a sullen obedience.

"The class in Viri Romæ!" exclaims Sawney.

Some dozen boys now flutter their dog-eared books, and prepare for their customary hiding.

"Smith second, begin!"

Smith second licks his lips, but not exactly as boys do when they hear the Governor's proclamation for Thanksgiving of a Sunday afternoon in the "meeting-house,"—that annual death-warrant to the turkeys; but he licks his lips, notwithstanding, and begins—

"Hæc clades—hæc clades—" alas, he can get no further.

"Well!" says Sawney, "translate; what is the English of hæc clades, I should like to know?"

"Hæc clades," resumes Smith second, "these things."

"The next!" cries Sawney, in disgust.

The next, knowing no better than the first, is nevertheless thankful to Smith second, for having said something, and he evidently believes the afore-said to be pretty good authority, for he very promptly insists on his translation, by repeating after him—

"Hæc clades—these things."

"The next!" exclaims the master, restlessly.

But they all follow in the wake of Smith second, and insist upon "these things" to the last one—who happens to be the first and the only one who knows anything about the lesson.

"Hæc clades," says LEVERETT, afterward the accomplished Principal of the same School, "this overthrow"—

"Right!" exclaims the master; "go on!"

"And now," calls Sawney, the recitation having been gone through with, "come out here, you hæc clades fellows;" and then taking one after the other, holding on to his collar, he whirls him around, in a primitive kind of waltz, beating time on the boy's back with his cane, while he sings, "hæc clades—these things," to the tune of Yankee Doodle. "Now take your seats," says he, rather fatigued with the exercise he has heard and the exercise he has taken; "and if this don't operate, I'll double the dose." Then calling one of the boys aside, he sends him down to "Richardson's" for a mug of "cider and pearl-ash."

Refreshed with this accustomed beverage, Sawney's himself again; and casting his eyes round the room, he discovers some idle fellows trapping flies and securing them in cages cut in the forms, and nicely grated with pins. The ratan is among them instantly. The flies soar away to the ceiling, and Sawney's imagination soars in company.

"I'll tell you what it is," sings the pedagogue bard:

"If I see any boy catching flies,
I'll whip him till he cries,
And make the tears run out of his eyes."

In the Virgil class, a translation (Davidson's) was always handed round for the use of the boys, who notwithstanding this indulgence, hardly ever took the trouble to study more than their respective sentences; for as the recitation invariably commenced with the head of the class, each one could calculate pretty nearly which passage would come to himself. A new tutor, however, finding this out, one day threw the class into confusion by beginning with the fag end. That gentleman, now a distinguished clergyman, undertook in a very praiseworthy, though then unpopular manner, to effect somewhat of a reform in the School, so far as he was concerned; and the scenes that were enacted in consequence would be almost incredible in these days of better order.

In the absence of the principal, the discipline of the new tutor produced a complete rebellion. Not content with disputing every inch of ground in the conquest he attempted, they shot at him with pop-guns; and, during the recess, filling their pockets with stones, they hurled them about the room till the floor was like the upper part of a sea-beach. One boy actually stepped out on the floor, and challenged him to a game of fisticuffs. He got a thrashing for it of course, but it only made matters worse. However, in a day or two, Sawney returning, there was a general dusting of jackets, and comparative order was restored.

Sometimes, of a warm summer afternoon, nothing whatever was done in school, and Sawney beguiled the hour by calling to his desk every boy in rotation, and questioning him as to the profession or occupation he intended to pursue in after life. The boys, generally, made sport of this; for while one would say that he meant to be a minister, and another a lawyer, most of them proposed such employment for their manhood as candle-snuffers and lamplighters; and he had always a word of advice or a joke for each, according to his avowed intention.

If the boys desired a half-holiday on the occasion of a "muster" or the like, they had nothing more to do than to unhang the bell-rope and hide it away, and the vacation was the bribe, and the only inducement that could be brought to bear upon them, to restore it.

Before a public examination, there was a general preparation and cramming for the occasion. A very few pages of the book we were to be examined in were marked off and regularly drilled into us day after day; and the boys were so often "taken up" at a particular place during the preparation, that no one could doubt an instant of the exact passage he would be called on to show off in before the "fathers of the town." I very well remember that one boy, having been drilled pretty thoroughly in the declining of "duo," was inadvertently called on to decline "tres," before the assembled wisdom. He faltered, looked toward Sawney at first completely dumb-founded; then in utter despair faltered out, "That's not my word, sir!" The mistake was instantly corrected, and the boy did "duo" to admiration.

Such, far from being exaggerated, are some of my boyhood memories of schools; and were it not for wearying the reader, (for how can I be sure of his interest?) I could tell of even stranger things; as for instance, of nearly three months' vacation at one time, while the teacher was out of health, and the boys, in the mean time, frolicked at their will, their unconscious parents flattering themselves that all was going on well. But let it pass, with the fun we had with the old tailor who worked below, and "all that sort of thing!"—for it ended sadly in the death and funeral of the good and highly intellectual teacher, at whose obsequies the illustrious BUCKMINSTER officiated in the old Hancock House.

After about nine years, during a large part of which, as will be seen from the School Committee Records, he was involved in more or less controversy with the board, Mr. Biglow resigned his office. Some further account of him will be found under his name in the list of Head-Masters on page 8 of the Catalogue. The Committee then determined to choose as Master in his place a young man whose inexperience in teaching would have a compensation in his not being so wedded to any particular mode of discipline or instruction, as to be prevented from adapting himself to the requirements of the School.

The choice which they made, on the advice of President Kirkland, of Benjamin Apthorp Gould, then a member of the senior class at Harvard College, proved most fortunate for the School, which, under him, regained public confidence. Mr. Emerson, in his speech above referred to, thus tells the manner in which Mr. Gould was introduced to the School:

The School Committee, Mr. Bulfinch, the famous architect who built our State House and the Capitol at Washington, Mr. Thacher, Mr. Wells, and the rest of the Committee if there were more, or their friends, came to school and introduced Mr. Benjamin Gould as the new Master. Mr. Thacher addressed us, and expressed every confidence in the high merit of Mr. Gould as a scholar and a gentleman, and congratulated the boys upon his appointment. As soon as the Committee took their hats and turned from the door, the boys began to buzz their opinions of the new Master in low tones. Mr. Gould turned towards them and lifted his finger to command silence, which was instantly accorded, and from that moment he ruled. He was an excellent Master, and loved a good scholar and waked his ambition.

Mr. Gould in his first year incited the boys to found a school library, which was immediately begun and grew rapidly. He valued good speaking, and Saturday morning was devoted to declamation. He did not forget his pupils when they entered college, but came to see them there, and especially if he found that they were losing ground in any department of study. Mr. Gould one day informed the School that there was a rumor that the British government was going to send a hostile fleet to Boston harbor, and that a gentleman had desired that the boys of the School should give one day to assist in throwing up defences on Noddle's Island, and that all who were ready and willing to go should be at the bottom of Hanover street the next day at nine o'clock, when a boat would be in waiting to carry them to the island. The whole school went. I went: but I confess that I can't remember a stroke of work which I or my school fellows accomplished. Whether the news of this action on the part of the Latin School reached England and decided their government to sue for peace, I have never learned.

The Honorable Robert C. Winthrop, also a pupil of Mr. Gould, in his speech* as presiding officer at the dinner of the Latin School Association in 1877, speaks of him as "the excellent and true-hearted Benjamin Apthorp Gould, as genial as he was gifted, who swayed even the ferule, which he rarely used, with singular dignity and grace—more often patting the hand lovingly with it by way of warning, than dealing blows by way of punishment; an admirable Head-Master, to whom we were all attached. Of each of these Masters,† indeed, we could say with Goldsmith:

'Yet he was kind, or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault.'"

At the dinner in 1879, the Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D. D., the presiding officer, thus spoke of his relations with the School:

I am sure I have every reason to be grateful to the Latin School and its Masters for what they did for me, for the influence they have exerted on my life. I am sure the benefits of the public school can hardly be overrated. I was a poor, puny, insignificant child when I went to the Latin School, brought up at home, knowing nothing about boys; but I soon learned a great deal about them. Good Master Gould used to flog us in a noble way, but it was over very soon. We had to learn our Latin Grammar, we had to commit it to memory; the first year was devoted to Latin Grammar. I can repeat passages from the Latin Grammar which I learned fifty years ago, and which I have never had occasion to use from that day to this.

In order that the School might better satisfy the wants of the community, the School Committee, on the appointment of Mr. Gould, introduced some changes in the rules and discipline, which he thus describes in his article in the Prize Book, already referred to:—

* The whole speech, which contains many interesting reminiscences of his school-days and mates, is printed in the third volume of Mr. Winthrop's Works.

† He had previously spoken of Dr. J. Greely Stevenson and Dr. Joseph Palmer.

“ * * Among the most important changes which took place was a regulation that boys should be admitted but once a year, according to the ancient usage of this School, to prevent thereby the continual interruption of classes; that no boy should be allowed to be absent except in case of sickness, or some domestic calamity; that no certificate or apology should in any case be received for tardiness, but that whoever should come after the hour should be deprived of his seat for that half day, and bring from his parent or guardian a satisfactory excuse for absence, before he could be again admitted to his place. This salutary regulation was adopted from a conviction that it is better for an individual to lose a half day's instruction, than that the School should be interrupted after the exercises have commenced.”

These and other judicious regulations, together with the personal exertions and high-minded policy pursued by the School Committee, gradually restored the confidence of the community to the School. In August of 1814, thirty boys were admitted; in the August following, fifty; and in 1816, as none were in the mean time deemed fit to enter college, the number had so increased as to render an additional room and assistant necessary. The reading school was therefore removed from the middle story of the school-house, and the room appropriated to the use of the Latin School, which had hitherto been confined to the upper floor. As the number of scholars continued to increase yearly, additional instructors and additional rooms were provided as occasion required.

In 1828 Mr. Gould resigned to go into business, and was succeeded by his assistant, Frederick P. Leverett, the author of the Latin Lexicon bearing his name.

The Hon. William M. Evarts, one of his most distinguished pupils, thus speaks of his life in school under him in the speech which he delivered at the dinner of the Latin School Association in 1876:—

My life at school was a very happy one. I know nothing more regular, more scholarly, and, in school days, more completely limited to learning and reciting lessons. Four times a day, back and forth, I passed from School Street to Pinckney Street, varying the route a little by passing the Park Street corner of the Common, or going around Beacon Street. Four times a day, every week day, accompanied almost always down or returning by one or more schoolmates; and as far as I recollect there was very little thought of influence over the scholars, behind that of instruction and discipline in learning. I cannot recall any influence upon the souls or morals that was exerted by the School, except by the association of ingenuous boys of good social position and influence at home. I should think the School was wholly occupied with the teaching of lessons and the hearing of them, and with instruction in composition and in declamation. We have had in this country some schools that have brought to bear upon the children committed to them more of that high and important and enduring influence,—what we all associate with the name of “Arnold” in England. No doubt a school like the Latin School, where the boys all live at home, and where every influence, moral and religious, is secured to them, precisely that kind of influence and authority that I have referred to is not expected, and may not be imparted; but from what I have heard said here to-night, I imagine that since my time there has perhaps been more of that influence on the part of Masters over the scholars than during my period. There was not very much need of punishment, and I don’t think punishment was administered when it was not needed during my experience with the School. * * * * *

As for the service of education, I suppose there will always be a controversy whether discipline or acquisition is the principal object. To my mind it has always been clear that discipline was the main object of education. As I have felt in my own experience as a scholar, and have always endeavored to teach my boys, that if a young person can be taught well what they don’t wish to do at all, then you may trust them to do pleasant and easy things that they prefer; and if they lose this as a fundamental discipline in those school days, there is no hard discipline, even in real life, that can repair the mischief that they have suffered. It would seem to me, therefore, that discipline we had at the Latin School. I certainly was taught to say in the most perfect manner the longest list of Latin names and prepositions that I didn’t wish to learn at all, became intimately acquainted in their whole pedigree and relation with large nouns and words that I never expected to meet in my subsequent life at all; but having learned that, I could learn other things very easily. Now the first thought, as it seems to me, of so many graceful seminaries for girls and boys is, that the teachers not only do the teaching, but do the learning as well. I never could see any good reason for making so many Latin grammars. I wish my boys could have such a grammar as I did, and if they learned it as well as I did, they would have learned a great deal more towards the mystery of Latin than from the improper instruction in the large grammars that they now have.

Mr. Leverett resigned in 1831 to take charge of a private school, and was succeeded by Charles K. Dillaway, a pupil of the School in 1818, a graduate of Harvard College in 1825, and from 1827 Usher or Sub-Master in the School. Under him, as will be seen by the Catalogue, the number of pupils increased, large accommodations were required, the standard of the School was maintained, and more graduates were sent to college.

Mr. Dillaway still lives in a ripe old age, held in warm esteem by the generations of the School, both the few survivors of his pupils, and those who have succeeded to their places. He is, and has been since 1860, the president of the Latin School Association.

In 1836, on account of ill-health, he resigned and was succeeded by Mr. Leverett, who however died soon after his reappointment, and before assuming the office.

After the death of Mr. Leverett, Epes Sargent Dixwell, a pupil of the School in 1816, a graduate of Harvard College in 1827, and for a year Sub-Master of the School, was appointed his successor, and held the office until 1851, when he resigned, and established a private school.

Possessing the respect and love of his pupils, not a few of whom, like those of his predecessor John Lovell, have occupied, or still hold, with honor and dignity, positions of influence in church and state, he is passing the closing years of a rich and ripened manhood in the neighboring city of Cambridge; frequently visiting the scene of his early labors, and ready with voice and pen (as will be seen by the ode in the Appendix*) to contribute to the prosperity, the honor, and the success of the School.

As we have let the pupils of previous Masters testify to their recollections of the School, so we will let one of his, who has since acquired a distinguished position and a high reputation as an educator.

At the first dinner of the Latin School Association, President Eliot said:—

The present School Committee would not suffer Master Lovell to teach school in his fashion one session. We would not any of us send our boys to the Latin School of sixty years ago, if it could be restored to School Street.
* * * * I don't pretend to have been happy in the School, in the work of the School, as I think boys should be happy in the work of their school, and as I think and know that boys now are happy in the work of a good many schools.

* * * I will mention two reasons why we may stand by this School under all circumstances to help and perpetuate. The strongest feeling is a great admiration and profound respect for the purpose of the School, of training boys in more liberal ways, beyond the narrow limit of immediate utility, and of giving them knowledge of studies which shorten and cheer human life. It is the purpose of the School which raises it in our eyes.

* * * * And then there is another strong feeling which comes to my mind whenever the Boston Latin School is named. I mean the sentiment of intense local affection and pride. We all of us love this good city of Boston. * * * * * We know in this old town of Boston, which grew up about meeting-houses and school-houses, about some fort-crowned hills and a public Common,—that it is the character of its people that has determined its industries, and not its industries that have determined the character of its people. Well, now, such an institution as this Latin School of ours, so high in purpose, so unremitting in its work, has a profound effect in moulding and determining the character of this people. And, therefore, it is because we love Boston that we desire to see this School live and thrive, bearing the same honored name, having the same high purpose, and maintaining its original organization.

Mr. Dixwell was succeeded by Francis Gardner, a pupil of the Latin School in 1822, a graduate of Harvard College in 1831, and from that time to the day of his death, with the exception of one year spent in Europe, a teacher in the School. To describe Dr.* Gardner, or what he did, to a Latin School boy of the present or last generation, is a work of supererogation. No man was better known in Boston. His class-mate, Wendell Phillips, says, "He was, from mere boyhood and life long, eminently a just man, only claiming fair-play, and more than willing to allow it to others. I never knew the time, even in his boyhood, when he did not detest or depise a sham."

One of his pupils thus writes concerning him :—

This great Master, whatever else he lacked, had character, not of the fine-lined, sentimental kind, cut and polished as a well-proportioned statue, but in bulk, a massive bulwark protesting against all cant, superciliousness and untruth. All who came under his instruction during his more than forty years' connection with the School will testify to this, when they remember his devotion to truth in language and manner, which, if it seemed crude and austere in its simplicity, never deceived any man as to its intent, and was an ever-biding lesson to all under him of a man terribly in earnest, who believed in duty.

He died January 10, 1876. At a memorial service held by the Latin School Association, Prof. William R. Dimmock, one of his pupils, and subsequently a teacher under him, gave an address, since published by the Association, graphically delineating his character and enumerating his services to the School, from which the following extracts are taken :—

This was the uneventful life of Dr. Gardner: his daily course in and out of the same house for more than thirty years, at the same School for forty-three; the regular hours, till age began, at the gymnasium, and early in his life the daily walk to Roxbury Neck; the only relaxation looking in at the book-stores in search of something that he might use in his work; and, at one period of his life, groping among the piles of books at the Public Library; a simple, quiet life, that many men might pass, and yet leave nothing distinctive in their record.

. . . . In Latin he was a profound student his work in teaching lay largely through the medium of Latin; and hence to Latin his best work was given. But no one could hear him conduct a recitation in Homer without seeing how minute was his knowledge, and how careful had been his study of Greek. . . . I have never met any one who had studied the grammar of the (French) language so extensively and so thoroughly. . . . He had studied both German and Italian sufficiently for such uses as he had in view. . . . And how well he knew the English language. . . . His acquaintance with history was large He eagerly read anything upon the subject of his profession, and was always ready to welcome the thoughts of any man of real experience or knowledge. . . . His knowledge was exact and always ready for use. . . . He always studied subjects. . . .

That iron frame and those immense powers gave him great capabilities for work, for he never used them to fatigue. No ordinary toil or care could weary him. . . . Thorough and systematic in instruction, he trained his pupils to good habits of study, to mental accuracy, and solid foundations of learning.

. . . . The great object that he aimed at in his instructions was that the boys in their classical work should learn Latin and Greek, and not merely to translate certain selections from the languages. . . . He had a certain grim humor, and an odd quaintness of expression, that were very effective in his dealings with the boys, and often very amusing, as his favorite phrases, terse commentaries and keen sarcasm, were repeated and passed through the School.

At the time of his last illness Dr. Gardner was granted by the School Committee a leave of absence, which expired the very day of his death. He was thus the first Head Master to die in office since the death of Ezekiel Cheever.

From Dr. Dimmock's address and from the recollections of his pupils, a most valuable biography of Dr. Gardner might be prepared. Our limits forbid us to make any such attempt. It must not be thought, however, that all his pupils admired him. A man of such decided character necessarily had enemies as well as friends, and all who came under his instruction would not paint him in colors so glowing as those Dr. Dimmock has used. It is well to have had that, so creditable, side of his character, so strongly presented. It may be well not to attempt to present a reverse side.* Those who were pupils under him, however, will be glad to have preserved the half humorous, half serious sketch embodied in the poem delivered

FRANCIS GARDNER.
HEAD MASTER 1851 - 1876.

*The following communication appeared in a Boston newspaper, soon after the delivery of Dr. Dimmock's address:

REMINISCENCES OF FRANCIS GARDNER.

To the Editors of the Boston Daily Advertiser:

I think many of Dr. Gardner's pupils will agree with me that there has been much indiscriminate eulogy of that worthy man. Integrity of purpose, devotion to work, a manliness (which saved him from petty meanness, but not from irascible wrong headedness,) good sense and sound morality, most pupils will credit him with. He was a capital drill-sergeant, had the whole routine of the school work at his fingers' ends, his athletic build inspired a wholesome awe, and if his severity at times excited hatred, I think there were few scholars in my time, which lay in the first half of this century, who did not feel that under "Old Gardner's" rough exterior there was a kindly heart. I have heard different accounts from a later generation, which, if true, indicate a willful perversity of disposition quite unworthy of him.

His time being occupied in the round of lessons and recitations, he naturally took but little notice of his pupils individually, and rarely had any advice adapted to special needs. He was decidedly unjust in his estimate of the motives of certain boys, and actually discouraged some who meant well. But this arose from want of insight into varieties of character. Occasionally a cheering word would come out. I remember his saying frankly to one boy, who was not by any means up to the required standard in "Andrews and Stoddard," "You understand principles if you don't know rules," which, considering the sanctity of the rules, was almost a profanity, and might have had demoralizing consequences, but I think did not. Possibly his best boys may have had particular attention from him. Dr. Dimmock seems to have drawn an inspiration from him in which few others shared.

His dress was negligent and his manners and language homely. He affected a certain Yankeeism of speech, and I remember distinctly his pooch-pooching the fashionable distinction between the words "ride" and "drive," and defending the expressions "your folks" and "his folks." The question which all boys ask, "What is the use of Latin and Greek?" he met with "The wisdom of our ancestors." His manner of making the prayer with which School opened was not specially reverent; but misconduct at prayer-time was one of the worst offences, involving special communication with parents and the most serious consequences. One particular chapter in the Bible was read by him more frequently than any other, whether from preference or because the book opened there I never knew; and the text which speaks of the "abomination of desolation standing in the place where it ought not" always recalls him to my memory. He had a stock of catch-words and phrases, which he brought up from time to time and gave them accumulated significance by repetition. The story of "Eyes and no eyes," and of the old man who first threw grass and then stones, did excellent duty. Sometimes all regular work was suspended for general discussion. He had some theory about this and justified the practice. But occasionally he was artfully drawn into it by designing youths, who enjoyed the relaxation, and a whole morning would be consumed in talk. He was not always magnanimous to opponents, and having invited a free expression of opinion he would censure those who differed from him pretty sharply, and suggest that their moral and spiritual condition could be none of the best, if such were their views.

Of his scholarship I do not pretend to judge. I can only say that if he had any enthusiasm for learning he did not make us feel it. He gave us few glimpses of the attractions by another of his pupils at the dinner of the Latin School Association which we have placed in the Appendix.*

Dr. Gardner was Master of the School during the years of the Rebellion, and many of his pupils went to do gallant service under their country's flag, but a statement of the relations of the School to the army may well be deferred to a later portion of this sketch.

Augustine Milton Gay, a graduate of Amherst College in 1850, one of the Masters of the School, was made Head Master in June, 1876; but he was taken ill soon after the close of the summer vacation, and could only attend to his work for a short time each day until November, when he died suddenly.

For the next six months the School was under the charge of Moses Merrill, a graduate of Harvard College in 1856, who was appointed Head Master in June, 1877. He was appointed an usher in the School in 1858, and has been connected with it ever since, so that he is thoroughly acquainted with its traditions and imbued with its spirit; under his control the aims of the School have been as high as ever, and it is to-day faithfully discharging its task of thoroughly fitting boys for College.

The history of the Masters is, in a certain sense, a history of the School; but the credit the School has acquired belongs not alone to those who have been at its head, but largely to those in subordinate capacities who have carried out their plans and seconded their efforts. It would be invidious to single out any of these for special mention. Their names are recorded upon the subsequent pages of this volume, and it is to commemorate all, to whose united efforts the reputation and honor of the School is due, that its publication has been undertaken.

of classical literature. I cannot recall a single remark of his with anything in it to stimulate our curiosity in philology, or any criticism from an æsthetic point of view. Opinions differ as to the matter of making studies interesting, but I can hardly think if Dr. Gardner had been as intellectual a man as, for example, the author of the Day Dreams of a School-master, not to mention more celebrated scholars, that something of his own fondness for the study would not have crept into his instructions. Mr. Dixwell, then the Head Master of the School, threw a certain amount of interesting illustration and anecdote into our recitations, and seemed to be a more literary man and fonder of books as books than Dr. Gardner.

So that I look back upon him chiefly as a routine teacher, admirable of his kind, and strong in all that relates to character. I think he meant to do his best for us, and that we owe him much. May Boston always keep his memory green in her civic annals as that of one of her most honest and useful servants.

* Appendix K.

Under the names of Lovell and Hunt some account has been given, in letters of their pupils, of the branches taught and the modes of instruction in the School; a proper history requires that we should now mention the subjects taught, and the methods of teaching in vogue in later times.

Among Mr. Hunt's papers was found a pamphlet bearing the signature of John Scollay, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, entitled "the System of Public Education, adopted by the Town of Boston, 15th Octob. 1789." It was evidently given him to be his guide in regard to the duties and responsibilities of his position, his "marching orders," so to speak, and as an interesting contribution to the educational history of the City, (being probably the only copy in existence, or certainly one of a very few copies,) we have thought it worthy of insertion in full in our Appendix.*

The first article of this pamphlet provides,

That there be one School in which the rudiments of the Latin and Greek languages shall be taught, and scholars fully qualified for the Universities. That all candidates for admission into this School shall be at least ten years of age, having been previously well instructed in English Grammar; that they shall continue in it not longer than four years, and that they shall have liberty to attend the public writing Schools at such hours as the visiting Committee shall direct.

Appended to this System are a series of "votes of the Committee appointed to carry it into execution," of which the first is:—

That the Latin Grammar School be divided into four Classes, and that the following Books be used in the respective Classes.

Then follows the list of books already mentioned in the note on page 41, and the vote concludes thus:—

That those Boys who attend the Latin School be allowed to attend the Writing Schools in the following Hours, viz. The 1st Class from half past Nine o'clock, A. M. till Eleven, or from half past Three P. M. as shall be found most convenient, and the 2d Class in the same manner for the first half of that year.

December 7th, 1789, it was Voted, that the first Monday in January, 1790, be the time assigned for putting into operation the new system of Education as adopted by the Town, and regulated by this (viz. the inspecting, referred to in a previous vote,) Committee.

December 21st, 1789, it was Voted, that the Instructor of the Latin School be entitled the Latin Grammar Master; * * *

* See Appendix L.

After Mr. Gould became the Master, further changes were made, by which the curriculum was much increased. In his article in the Prize Book, from which we have already freely drawn in these pages, he himself gives an account of the subjects studied, and the methods used in imparting instruction:—

The scholars are distributed into six separate apartments, under the care of the same number of instructors; viz. a Principal, or Head Master, a Sub-Master, and four Assistants. For admission, boys must be at least nine years old; able to read correctly and with fluency, and to write running hand; they must know all the stops, marks, and abbreviations, and have sufficient knowledge of English grammar to parse common sentences in prose. The time of admission is the Friday and Saturday next preceding the Commencement at Cambridge, which two days are devoted to the examination of candidates. The regular course of instruction lasts five years; and the School is divided into five classes according to the time of entrance.

When a class has entered, the boys commence the Latin Grammar all together, under the eye of the Principal; where they continue until he has become in some degree acquainted with their individual characters and capacities. As they change their places at each recitation, those boys will naturally rise to the upper part of the class, who are most industrious, or who learn with the greatest facility. After a time a division of from twelve to fifteen boys is taken off from the upper end of the class; after a few days more, another division is in like manner taken off; and so on until the whole class is separated into divisions of equal number, it having been found that from twelve to fifteen is the most convenient number to drill together.

In this way boys of like capacities are put together, and the evil of having some unable to learn the lesson which others get in half the time allowed, is in some measure obviated. The class, thus arranged for the year, is distributed among the assistant teachers, a division to each. This is preferred to keeping them together; for they are in the room with two divisions of higher classes, there being always three divisions in each apartment, and by the example of older boys they more readily correct their childish foibles and fall in with the habits of the School. And further, as writing is not taught in the School, the younger classes for the first two or three years are dismissed at eleven o'clock, an hour before school is done, that they may attend a writing school. It is therefore necessary that one division of a class that stays till twelve should be in each room, to afford the instructor employment from eleven to twelve o'clock. This, therefore, is an hour of uninterrupted instruction to a single division in each room, after the other two have been dismissed.

When this distribution is made, the boys continue for the year in the apartment in which they are first placed, unless some particular reason should exist for changing them; or when the higher divisions attend the Sub-Master for instruction in Geography and Mathematics, to whom these departments are committed.

This method of studying each branch separately, is adopted throughout the School. The same individuals do not study Latin one part of the day, and Greek the other, but each for a month at a time; and so with mathematics, except that the lesson for the evening, which is usually a written exercise, or a portion of Latin or Greek to be committed to memory, is in a different department from the studies of the day. In this way the aid of excitement, from the continuity of a subject, is secured, and a much more complete view of the whole obtained than when studied in detached portions, and the grammar of neither language permitted to go out of mind. * * *

At the close of every month the boys in each apartment undergo a rigid examination in all the studies of that month. This is conducted by the Principal, with whom only the first class remains permanently, in the presence of their particular teacher, and such other instructors of the School as find it convenient to attend. These monthly examinations are sometimes attended by the sub-committee of the School, and are open for parents, and any other persons interested. If any class, or any individuals, do not pass satisfactory examination, they are put back, and made to go over that portion of studies in which they are deficient till they do pass a satisfactory examination. The rank of each scholar and his seat for the succeeding month are determined by this examination, unless an account of places for each recitation of the month has been kept, in which case they are determined by a general average. The boy at the head of the first division of the first class is monitor for the month. The monitor writes in his bill a list of all the classes, in the order in which they are now arranged; and notes, each half day, such as are absent. The absences of each individual for a month, or a year, may be known by reference to this bill.

Boys commence with Adam's Latin Grammar, in learning which they are required to commit to memory much that they do not understand at the time, as an exercise of memory, and to accustom them to labor. There are some objections to this, it is true, but it has been found extremely difficult to make boys commit thoroughly to memory at a subsequent period, what they have been allowed to pass over in first learning the grammar. It takes from six to eight months for a boy to commit to memory all that is required in Adam's Grammar; but those who do master the grammar completely, seldom find any difficulty afterwards in committing to memory whatever may be required of them. * * * *

The examples under the rules of syntax are the first exercises in parsing. The Liber Primus is the first book after the grammar. No more of this is taken for a lesson than can be parsed thoroughly. This and the grammar form the studies of the first year. To these succeed Græciæ Historiæ Epitome, Viri Romæ, Phædri Fabulæ, from Burman's text, with English notes; Cornelius Nepos; Ovid's Metamorphoses, by Willymotte; with particular attention to scanning and the rules of prosody. Portions of Ovid are committed to memory in the evening that were translated in the day, and verses selected from them for capping, which is a favorite exercise with boys. Valpy's Chronology of Ancient and English History, Dana's Latin Tutor, for writing Latin, and Tooke's Pantheon, with the books already mentioned, comprise the studies of the second year. The Greek Grammar is now commenced, if it has not been before, Cæsar's Commentaries and Electa ex Ovidio et Tibullo. Then follows the Delectus Sententiarum Græcarum, a most excellent little book for the commencement of Greek analysis.

And here particular care is taken that no word be passed over till all the changes of which it is susceptible be gone through, and the rule given for each. Much depends on the manner in which boys are introduced to a new study. They like what they can understand. Hence it not unfrequently happens, that lads properly initiated into Greek, soon prefer it to Latin and every other study. The Col. Gr. Minora follows next, with Sallust and Virgil; and these, with the writing of translations in English, from Latin and Greek, form the studies of the third year. The exercises in the Latin Tutor continue till the book is entirely written through once or twice. Much time and labor are saved in correcting these exercises. The head boy gives his exercise to the teacher, and takes that of the next below him, who, in his turn, receives his next neighbor's, and so on, through the class. The boy at the bottom reads the English, a sentence at a time; and the teacher reads the same in Latin, from the exercise in his hand, marking with a pencil such words as are wrong. Where the sentence admits of variety, each form is given. The boys in the mean time mark all words differing from what is read, by placing the figures 1, 2, 3, etc., under them. When the exercise has all been read, and each boy has marked the errors of his next neighbor, the one who has fewest takes the head, and so on. This exercise is returned to be corrected, and has a second reading with the next new exercise. Thus in fifteen minutes the task of an hour and a half is performed. The attention in the mean while is effectually secured by the interest each boy has in noticing the mistakes of his neighbor, and the liability of having all marked to his own account, which shall appear on second reading not to have been noticed in the first. But this method, of course, can be adopted only so long as the Latin words are given in the exercise book.

When the Latin Tutor can be converted into correct Latin, Valpy's Elementaræ Latine succeeds it. This book is a very valuable auxiliary in teaching to write Latin, and an important addition to our school books. It consists of a free translation of select portions of the most approved Latin authors, with many judicious and critical remarks on the rules of construction, and the use of words, with a key, separate from the book, to be kept by the instructor, where the original passages may be seen by the learner, and compared with his own Latin. When boys can write Latin prose grammatically, they are required to make nonsense verses, or to put words into verses with regard to their quantity only. When the mechanical structure of different kinds of versification is familiar, they have given them a literal translation, of a few verses at a time, taken from some author with whose style they are not acquainted, which is to be turned into verses of the same kind as those from which it was taken; and then compared with the original. Bradley's Prosody is used for this exercise. Afterwards portions of English poetry are given, to be translated into Latin verse. Original verses are then required, which with themes in Latin and English, continue through the course. Considerable portions of all the Latin and Greek poets used in school are committed to memory as they are read; particularly several books of Virgil, all the first book of Horace, and parts of many others; the third and tenth Satires of Juvenal entire; all the poetry in the Græca Minora; and many hundreds of verses in Homer. This is an important exercise to boys; and without it they can never write Latin prose or verse with the same facility as with it. It is in this way that the idioms of any language are gained, and in writing verses the quantity and proper use of most words employed by the best writers are instantaneously determined by recalling a verse in which they occur. Cicero's select orations, De Officiis, De Senectute, De Amicitia, Horace Exp., Juvenal and Persius Expur. Greek Primitives, Xenophon's Anabasis, Maittaire's Homer, Greek Testament, Wytttenbach's Greek Historians, together with the aforementioned exercises, and Geography, Arithmetic, Geometry, Trigonometry, and its uses, Algebra, etc., form the studies of the last two years.

The study of arithmetic is commenced the latter part of the third year, or the beginning of the fourth, with Colburn's "First Lessons." Recitations in this are made two or three times each half day by those who are studying it. The boys are not expected to commit to memory the answers to the several questions, but to find them repeatedly before the recitation that their answers may then be given with more facility; and, in order that the operations, by which they solve the questions, may be strictly intellectual, numbers are often announced by the instructor different from those in the book, and only the form of the questions is adhered to. After the question is announced, a sufficient time is allowed for each individual of the class to find the answer, and then one is called upon; the question is passed through the class, whether the answer be given right, or not, and all whose solutions are right, go above those, whose are wrong. After all the questions in a section have been understood, and solved, each boy is called upon to state the general method of their solution, or the rule for working them. This rule, thus made by the boys, not given them, when corrected as to phraseology by the teacher, is written in a manuscript book, and committed to memory. The same system of advancing from particular examples to the general rule is observed in teaching Lacroix's Arithmetic and Euler's Algebra; Synthesis being considered preferable to Analysis, in these studies. The class, with their slates, come to the recitation forms, a question is proposed, which each is required to solve; others, more and more difficult of solution, depending on the same principles are announced; each boy on finding his answer passes his slate to the one above him; and thus no one can correct his solution on the authority of a better scholar. All whose sums are right, take precedence of the others. After the solution of numerous questions proposed in as many different forms as possible, they are furnished with the rule, and required to commit it to memory. The blackboard is also used, to show the method of arranging their work with the greatest economy of space and labor.

In Geometry the diagrams of Euclid are taken off, first on paper, with figures instead of letters, that nothing may be committed to memory without being understood. When they have been demonstrated from the paper, they are afterwards drawn by the pupil on the blackboard, with figures; when the proposition is demonstrated without a book, or any aid to the memory whatever. Worcester's Geography is the text book in that branch; and here constant and particular use is made of the maps. The boys are required to find upon them the rise and course of every river, the situation of each town, etc., in their lesson; and beside getting the text of the book, to answer any question which may arise upon the map of the country whose geography they are studying.

Beside the books already mentioned, use is made of the following, viz.: Neilson's Greek Exercises for writing Greek, Schrevelius's Greek Lexicon, Hedericus, Scapula, Morell's Thesaurus, Walker's Classical Key, Lempriere's Classical Dictionary, Adam's Roman Antiquities, Entick's and Ainsworth's Latin Dictionary, etc.

On Saturdays the whole School comes together in the hall for declamation. The four upper classes speak in turn, a class on each Saturday. The youngest class attends this exercise, but does not take part in it. After a boy has spoken, and the presiding instructor has made such observations as he sees fit, any individual of the class that is speaking has a right to correct any errors in pronunciation, or any violation of the text, that may not have been pointed out; and if none of the class does this before another boy is called out it may be done by any boy in the school. This leads to much attention to the subject of pronunciation; and great acuteness is often discovered by very young boys. This is the only day in the week in which all the instructors and scholars unite in any religious or literary exercise.

On these occasions, boys are promoted from a lower to a higher division, or a higher class, who have distinguished themselves, by maintaining their place for a given time at the head of the division in which they recite. In this way, a scholar sometimes gains one or two years in the five of the regular course. Cards of distinction, to such as deserve them, are also given out once a month, in presence of the whole School.

We have allowed Mr. Gould to tell at this length, of the studies and methods of the School, because the impression made by him upon its character and discipline was so strong that, except for variation in the text books, this description would answer for almost any time in the forty years subsequent to his mastership, and the pupils of those years will there find, recalled to themselves, the manner of their own recitations and the discipline of the School, with which they were familiar.

In 1860 we find the following regulations and course of study, which differ but little from the requirements of the decade preceding:—

Each candidate for admission shall have attained to the age of ten years, and shall produce, from the master of the school he last attended, a certificate of good moral character. He shall be able to read English correctly and fluently; to spell all words of common occurrence; to write a running hand; understand mental arithmetic, and the simple rules of written arithmetic; shall be able to answer the most important questions in geography; and shall have a sufficient knowledge of English Grammar to parse common sentences in prose. A knowledge of Latin Grammar shall be considered equivalent to that of English.

Boys shall be examined for admission into this School only once a year, viz: on the Friday and Saturday of the last week of the vacation succeeding the Exhibition of the School in July.

The regular course of instruction shall continue six years; and no scholar shall enjoy the privileges of this School beyond that term, unless by leave of the Sub-committee. But scholars may have the option of completing their course in five years or less, if willing to make due exertion; and shall be advanced according to scholarship.

The books and exercises required, during the course of instruction in this School, are the following:—

SIXTH CLASS.

1. Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar. 2. English Grammar. 3. Reading English. 4. Spelling. 5. Mental Arithmetic. 6. Mitchell's Geographical Questions. 7. Declamation. 8. Penmanship. 9. Andrews's Latin Lessons. 10. Andrews's Latin Reader.

FIFTH CLASS.

1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, continued. 11. Viri Romæ. 12. Written Translations. 13. Colburn's Sequel. 14. Cornelius Nepos. 15. Arnold's Latin Prose Composition.

FOURTH CLASS.

1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 12, 13, 15, continued. 16. Sophocles's Greek Grammar. 17. Sophocles's Greek Lessons. 18. Cæsar's Commentaries. 19. Fasquelle's French Grammar. 20. Exercises in Speaking and Reading French, with a native French Teacher.

THIRD CLASS.

1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 12, 13, 15, 16, 19, 20, continued. 21. Ovid's Metamorphoses. 22. Arnold's Greek Prose Composition. 23. Felton's Greek Reader. 24. Sherwin's Algebra. 25. English Composition. 26. Le Grandpere.

SECOND CLASS.

1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 15, 16, 19, 20, 22, 23, 24, 25, continued. 27. Virgil.
28. Elements of History. 29. Translations from English into Latin.

FIRST CLASS.

1, 7, 15, 16, 19, 20, 22, 23, 25, 27, 28, 29, continued. 30. Geometry.
31. Cicero's Orations. 32. Composition of Latin Verses. 33. Composition in French. 34. Ancient History and Geography.

The following books of reference shall be used in pursuing the above studies :—

Leverett's Latin Lexicon, or Gardner's Abridgment of the same.
Liddell and Scott's Greek Lexicon; or Pickering's Greek Lexicon, last edition.
Worcester's School Dictionary.
Anthon's Classical Dictionary.
Smith's Dictionary of Antiquities.
Baird's Classical Manual.

No translations of the foregoing Latin and Greek authors are allowed in the School; nor any Interpretation, Keys, or Orders of Construction.

The following are the holydays and vacations granted by the School Committee to the Latin School: viz., every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon throughout the year; Christmas Day, New Year's Day, the Twenty-second of February, May Day and Fast Day; Artillery Election; the Fourth of July; Thanksgiving Week; the week immediately preceding the first Monday in March; one week, commencing on the Monday preceding the last Wednesday in May; the two days of public exhibition at Harvard University; and the remainder of the school-year following the Exhibition in July.

The changes of the next decade were described very fully by the present Head Master of the School, Mr. Merrill, at the dinner of the Latin School Association in 1877, and we insert that portion of his remarks which had special reference to them :—

* * * There are persons in the community, and it may be that there are some here, who believe that the School is not a useless incumbrance upon the tax-payers, and yet are perplexed by some of the statements, derogatory to its usefulness, put into circulation from public and private sources. Therefore I feel compelled to present to you as briefly as possible a history of the School since 1870, and make known its present condition and aims. There is a quiet but disagreeable rumor abroad that it has lost its proud name of superiority among the preparatory schools of the country, and has been outstripped by its younger and more fortunate rivals. In the first place I shall attempt to prove that for six years it was not a "preparatory school," and, in the second place, if the rumor be founded in fact, there is no occasion for any alarm, distrust, or discouragement now. It must and will regain its vantage-ground, if left to pursue its way without further interruption. No institution of learning can pass through the abrupt changes in its curriculum, methods and teachers, which the Latin School has passed through since 1870, without suffering a diminution of power and thoroughness in scholarship.

What these changes have been I will briefly state, and I invite your especial attention to the following order offered to the School Board and adopted September 8, 1868 :—

Ordered, That a committee of nine be appointed to consider the subject of establishing an institution of learning in which the English and classical studies may be pursued; that said committee shall have public hearings to which eminent educators shall be invited; that said committee, if they deem it expedient, shall prepare a full and liberal course of study, to be submitted to this board which shall include Latin and Greek, one or more modern languages, English literature, mathematics, music, and other sciences; that if the need for such an institution is shown, said committee shall consider the expediency of merging in it the Latin School and the English High School, and of establishing in the new school a special course of study for those who desire to fit for a university education; that in reference to such special training for the university, said committee shall make inquiry as to the methods of teaching the ancient languages in use upon the continent of Europe, as well as in the best English and American schools.

It will be observed that the object of this order was to destroy the identity of the Latin School. It was at first proposed to establish a free academy, or Boston College, for advanced instruction in the language and sciences. When this project was abandoned it was proposed to unite the Latin and English High Schools. Long and patient hearings were given by the committee to several of the most prominent teachers of New England, of whom two were instructors in the Latin School—Dr. Gardner and Mr. Gay. The committee solved the difficulty by recommending that the two Schools be combined in one under the name of "Latin and High School." This report, which is quite long and condemns the method of teaching Latin and Greek in vogue in the Latin School, was made May 11, 1869. No action was taken upon it, and it was recommitted June 8. The whole subject of High School education was referred to a special committee of seven, February 8, 1870, no action having been taken on the reports of the previous committee of nine. The new committee, as well as the old, was composed of some of the most intelligent and cultivated gentlemen of the board, and who, without question, had at heart the best interests of education in this city. Such being the case, it has always been inexplicable to all practical teachers with whom I have conversed on the subject, under what infatuation the following curriculum was adopted for the School in the summer of 1870. I accounted for it at the time in the supposition that there was a determination to introduce into the public school system of Boston a German gymnasium, pure and simple, whether the concomitants of such an institution could be introduced or not.

Sections 1 and 10 of the regulations of the Public Latin School, adopted at that time, are as follows:—

SECTION 1. The purpose of this School is to give thorough general culture to boys intending to pursue the higher branches of learning or preparing for professional life.

SECT. 10. The studies pursued in the several years of the course, and the list of authors used, are here given:—

Sixth Class.—Harkness's Latin Grammar (Rudiments); Harkness's Latin Reader; Viri Romæ; Fables of Phædrus; Scott, Goldsmith, Campbell, Wordsworth, Cowper, Tennyson, Leigh Hunt; Ancient History of the East; Review of General Geography; Geography of Asia; Arithmetic reviewed and completed; Eaton's Arithmetic, Crittenden's Calculations; Elementary Algebra through simple equations, one unknown quantity; Ray's Elementary Algebra; Zoology; Drawing; Penmanship; Music; Gymnastics.

Fifth Class.—Nepos; Justin; Old English Ballads; Sterne, Mrs. Thrale, Beattie, Cowper, Hawthorne, Tennyson, Longfellow, Morris, Hazlitt; History of Ancient Greece; Geography of Europe and Africa; Otto's French Grammar, first part, with exercises; Elementary Algebra to the Binomial Theorem, Ray; Geology (winter), Botany (spring and summer), Dana and Gray, with specimens; Drawing; Music; Gymnastics.

Fourth Class.—Cæsar, De Bello Gallico; Ovid, Metamorphoses; Quintus Curtius; Virgil, Æneid I, II; Cicero, De Amicitia, De Senectute; Greek Grammar (Rudiments); Greek Lessons; Xenophon, Anabasis begun; Ælian, Extracts; Lucian, Dialogues; Plutarch, one life; Gray, Addison, Moore, Burns, Irving, Bryant, Hood, Hawthorne, Shelley, Rogers; History of Ancient Rome; Revision of Geography of Asia, Europe and Africa; Geography of America and Oceanica; Le Grand Pere, with applications of Syntax; Exercises in translating and writing from a French treatise on Natural Science; Plane Geometry; Chauvenet's Elementary Geometry; Geology and Botany, as in previous year; Drawing; Music; Gymnastics.

Third Class.—Latin Prosody; Virgil, Æneid III, IV, V—Eclogues; Cicero, Archias, Marcellus; Sallust, Catiline; Horace, a few Odes; Terence, Andria, Adelphi. Homer, Iliad; Isocrates, Panegyric on Athens; Plutarch, Morals (one part); Lucian, Art of Writing History; Milton, Pope, Irving, Thompson, Collins, Prescott, Coleridge, Keats, Burke, Wordsworth, Holmes, Tyndall; History of the Middle Ages, from the fifth century to the fourteenth; Physical and Political Geography of Europe in minute detail; French Comedy; Translation; Recitation; Writing French; Exercises in translating and writing from French Scientific Treatise; Krauss's German Grammar, with Exercises in German; Pure Algebra begun; Algebraic Doctrine of Logarithms; Loomis's Algebra, Bremiker's Logarithmic Tables; Plane Trigonometry begun; Chauvenet's Trigonometry; a French Treatise on Physical Philosophy and Mechanics; Drawing; Music (optional); Gymnastics.

Second Class.—Latin Verses; Virgil, Æneid VI, VII, VIII—Passages from the Georgics; Cicero, Verres, Catiline, Dream of Scipio; Horace, Odes, Epodes, Epistles; Tacitus, Agricola; Livy, one book; Quintilian; Greek Prosody; Homer, Iliad; Euripides, Alcestis; Demosthenes, Olynthiacs, Philippics; Plato, Crito, Apologia; Milton, Pope, Dryden, Spencer, Thackeray, Lamb, Tennyson, Lowell, Whittier, Ruskin, Shakespeare; History of the Middle Ages, and of modern times, from the fourteenth century to the middle of the seventeenth; Physical and Political Geography of Asia, Africa, America, Oceanica, in minute detail; Racine, Corneille, Moliere, Rousseau; French Essays; Conversation in French; Krauss's Grammar, with German Reader; Plane Trigonometry finished, with applications; Chauvenet, Solid Geometry; Chauvenet's Elementary Geometry; Physics; Mechanics; Astronomy (French Treatise); Drawing; Music (optional); Gymnastics.

First Class.—Virgil, Parts of Æneid; Cicero, De Republica; Tacitus, Annals; Livy; Horace continued, with Ars Poetica; Plautus; Lucretius, Extracts; Greek Verses; Homer, Odyssey; Thucydides, first book; Demosthenes, Philippics, De Corona; Sophocles, Œdipus; Aristophanes, Birds, Clouds; Macaulay, Junius, Emerson, Marvell, George Herbert, Byron, Carlyle, Robert Hall, Channing, Ben Jonson, Bacon, Shakespeare; Modern History, from the accession of Louis the Fourteenth of France; Geography reviewed; Geography in relation to climate, soil, manufactures, commerce; Cosmography; French, as in previous year, a French Historical, or Scientific author; German prose writers and poetry; Spherical Trigonometry; Chauvenet's Trigonometry; Review of Trigonometric Formulæ, Higher Algebra, etc., Loomis's Algebra; Chemistry; Astronomy; Music (optional); Gymnastics.

It will be admitted that the School was no longer a preparatory school.

The age for admission was raised from ten to twelve years. Twelve boys only were admitted to the regular course of study in 1870—the first year of this experiment. All these left school or were graduated before 1876—the time for fully completing the course. Consequently there was no graduating class for that year. Had there been no modifications in the requirements for admission and in the curriculum in 1871, there would have been no class, or a very small one, to graduate in 1877. At this time also—i. e., in 1870—the departmental method of instruction was introduced. All the teachers were raised to the grade of Masters, and the quota of pupils for each instructor was reduced to twenty-five. The expenses of the School increased enormously. The discipline immediately declined—attributable more to the position taken by the Head Master, after these changes, than to any other cause. I speak no ill of the dead. If Dr. Gardner were with us to-night he would confirm my statement and defend his course. He declared that he would not, and, true to his declarations, he did not, aid the subordinate teachers in their attempts to control their classes. To use his own words, "Each man must paddle his own canoe." In some instances disorder and insubordination reigned. That Dr. Gardner was not in sympathy with the change in sentiment in regard to these methods and objects of education is too well known to require affirmation. He believed that the day of sound learning was rapidly passing away. Evidences of his declining health became apparent, and he was in a chronic state of despondency and discouragement which continued until feebleness prevented any further participation in the active duties of life. The inevitable result of this state of things was a decline in that strict discipline and thorough scholarship which had been characteristic of the School from time immemorial.

Another result, very serious for the time being, but not so permanent in its effects, was a distrust in the community in regard to the efficiency of the School, and a dislike for it (I think hatred too strong a word), arising from causes already stated, as well as from the unpopularity of the Head Master in certain quarters, and the exorbitant expenses, amounting to nearly $250 a year for each pupil. The present tuition is $117.

Mr. Gay took charge of the School in November, 1875, as Acting Head Master, during Dr. Gardner's illness; succeeding him in June, 1876. The new board of education was organized at the time, I think the very day, of Dr. Gardner's death. One of the first acts of Mr. Gay and the board, relating to the Latin School, was the preparation and adoption of a course of study to supersede that of 1870, which had never been repealed, but modified, of course, from year to year; and such a course as would restore the School to its time-honored aims and purposes, the preparation of boys for college, especially for Harvard. While many gentlemen took a deep interest in this work, we are indebted to President Eliot more than to any other person for our present excellent curriculum. A year's experience shows that, with very slight and unimportant modifications, it is entirely practicable. It meets with general commendation, and many parents have expressed the desire to place their sons in a School which afforded a course of study so admirable in all respects. This course was adopted by the School in September, 1876, one month previous to my appointment as acting Head Master. Mr. Gay was greatly interested in its adoption, and felt that the School was entering upon a new and more efficient career. But his state of health was such that he could spend with us but two or three hours each day, and at the end of the first month his visits ceased altogether. He died November 2. Thus within the period of a single year two Head Masters terminated their labors in the School and passed from this life to another. Though we reverently and submissively bow to these dispensations of God's providence, yet such a loss and the consequent changes must necessarily prove detrimental to the highest welfare of the School. Both have gone to their rest after a life of entire consecration to their profession, and there are many ready to rise and bless their memory. Requiescant in pace.

It has been shown that the School had no definite aim from the year 1870 to the time of Dr. Gardner's decease, or perhaps better, the unattainable aim of "general culture." The highest of aims you will say, perhaps. I grant it. But the pupils, or their parents, desired to avail themselves of the advantages of the Latin School for only one stage in this pursuit of "general culture," namely the preparation of their sons for college. They preferred the University for the more advanced stages.

Our "general culture" plan included a preparatory, and a good part of a university, course in certain branches. A school without a definite aim cannot be successful, any more than a man without an aim. Our School, under the "general culture" plan, was undertaking too much, and more than the public desired. But, thanks to the Committee on High Schools, aided by the late Head Master, Mr. Gay, and the Board of Supervisors, to the President of Harvard University, and to all others interested in the welfare of our school, that day has past. The School has now a definite aim, and "general culture" is no less a part of it than before. * * * *

I firmly believe that, notwithstanding all the mistakes and disappointments of the last six or seven years, which the teachers were powerless to avoid or prevent, the Latin School is as dear to-day to the citizens of Boston as any other institution of learning within its limits, and that they are as ready to extend and perpetuate its usefulness by money, sympathy and cheering words as our fathers were when it was a select school, principally, as it has been intimated, for the rich and exclusive. The changes in the School have not been so great as the changes in our population. And I am willing to admit that our pupils do not all bear the names, nor are the lineal descendants, of our glorious old forefathers who came over here in the Mayflower; some even bear names of those who have come over in vessels of a later date. But I am confident in the opinion that you cannot find in any public or private school in this country four hundred and thirty lads more cultivated or more intelligent than those in the Boston Latin School of to-day. * * * * They are treated as gentlemen, and they are gentlemanly in return; they are taught to respect themselves by the confidence placed in them; their statements are received as true unless there are the strongest reasons for doubting them. * * * * It is the aim of the teachers to inculcate principles of morality, honor and patriotism, pure living and high aspirations, as well as to give the best possible intellectual training. Sectarianism is carefully avoided, but we do not hesitate to present the divine precepts and example of our Lord as well as the virtues of Socrates and the patriotism of Regulus and Hannibal. No parent need fear contamination in the Latin School beyond what might happen wherever boys are assembled together.

The School contains 430 boys, divided into eight classes. It has one Head Master, three Masters, six Sub-Masters and three Ushers. It has special instructors in German, French, drawing, music and military drill. It is not a select, but it is a public school, supported by the tax-payers of Boston, and is open to all boys who wish to prepare for college.

The departmental system is still adhered to in the four upper classes, and I believe with advantage. * * * * Each teacher cheerfully takes the responsibility of the progress and final results of his own department. The four lower classes, consisting of seven divisions, are placed in charge of teachers who take them along in all branches, except music and drawing.

All the instructors have been selected with great care by the committee, and, most of them have already met with the highest success as teachers in our New England colleges and best preparatory schools; the younger men are doing well. The methods of instruction have been changed in some branches, especially in Latin, geography and French. The whole School seems to be well classified, based upon the records of last year's work, and a rigid examination in all studies given to each pupil at the close of the year.

Mr. Capen, the Senior Master, who spent an entire vacation in Germany a few years since, in examining the methods of instruction in the best schools for secondary education, asserts, without fear of contradiction, that the methods in our School are as nearly like those of the best German gymnasiums as they possibly can be without transplanting the entire German system to America. When he presented for their inspection the course of study of which I have already given you some extracts, they looked at him with surprise, and asked him if we accomplished all that. * * * *

I will close with a brief statement of what the School has done for those who left us the past summer. If the verdict must still be only ten per cent. of what is accomplished in some foreign schools, it certainly is a very fair percentage toward the requisitions of the best American colleges. Thirty-four young gentlemen from this School applied for admission to higher institutions of learning, and not one was rejected—twenty-three to Harvard, four to Amherst, one to Yale, one to Dartmouth, one to Williams, one to Wesleyan, one to Boston University, one to West Point and one to the Agricultural College in Amherst; two more have entered immediately upon the study of medicine and law, and still another could have received his certificate of admission to college, but preferred to wait another year—making in all thirty-seven. Two of these students were fitted in one year in the classics. One pupil of the third class, after three or four months of private instruction, was admitted to one of our New England colleges. A very fair per cent. of these applicants were admitted without “conditions,” though not so large as will be, we trust, in future years.

The following year, speaking of the requirements for admission to college, and the work done in the School to prepare the pupils to meet them, he said further :—

Many of you may not be aware of the important changes which have recently taken place in the requisitions for admission to our higher institutions of learning and the course of study pursued after admission, and the effects of these changes upon the preparatory schools. * * * *

Twenty-five years ago, and for several succeeding years, the requisitions for admission to college embraced four subjects in Latin, four in Greek, three in mathematics, ancient and modern geography, and elements of ancient history, in all thirteen subjects. French, English composition, physical geography and physics (or one optional branch of three in natural science), have since been added, so arranged with the others as to make sixteen subjects. In French, the candidate is required to translate at sight a passage of easy prose; in English composition, he is required to write a "piece of English, correct in spelling, punctuation, grammar, division by paragraphs, and expression"; the subject for the composition is taken from certain specified works of standard English authors. There has also been a marked increase in the amount of Latin, ancient history, algebra and geometry required. * * * *

From these facts there can be but one inference about the test for admission applied to the sons of to-day compared with the test applied to their fathers when they knocked at the college doors. The sons may not be required to know twice as much as the fathers knew to gain admission—it is certain they do not—but the test, if rigidly applied, is doubly severe.

The last Harvard catalogue contained a new method in the requisitions. * * * * It prescribes a minimum requisition in four groups of subjects, viz.: Latin, Greek, mathematics, physical and natural science; a maximum in at least two of these groups. Fully one-half of the examination in Latin and Greek prose is the translation at sight of passages like the authors studied. The amount required to be read in the preparatory school is considerably less in Latin and somewhat less in Greek. But the candidate cannot, in my opinion, be suitably prepared for the examination without translating nearly or quite as much in both languages as before, and the test, as applied by the new method, demands a more careful and elaborate analysis of the text, though less of the minutiae of the grammar. * * * *

These changes are not arbitrary; they are the inevitable result of the sentiment that has arisen, or been developed, in the last quarter of a century in regard to the methods, scope and objects of a finished education. Unless we are ready to show that this sentiment is erroneous, it would be absurd to assert that these changes are a mistake. Whatever difficulties we have to meet and overcome, we are certainly taking progressive steps in the cause of education. In fact, the very difficulties indicate progression, and not declension. If the standard is higher the attainments will be greater. But it is an undeniable fact so far as the Latin School is concerned, that what is undertaken to day is not so thoroughly done as when less was required, because very little more time, if any, is given to accomplish it. The increase of time has not been proportionate with the increase of requirements. I would not lessen the requirements, but allow the additional time necessary to do well the work imposed: and this brings me to the consideration of the most important part of my subject, to which I would call your especial attention.

What advantages do the boys of to-day enjoy, that their fathers did not, to meet the severer test of higher education? Do they have better teachers? If such were the fact it would not be becoming in us to assert it; we will not claim it. Do they have better means of acquiring information? If the student's acquisitions depended upon this, something might be granted in favor of the present day; but I have not yet become a convert to the belief in any "royal road to learning." Do they have more time? I think not. In the Latin School Saturday has become a holiday; the summer vacation is extended from six weeks to ten or eleven weeks; gymnastics, or military drill, music and drawing, which do not enter into the examination for admission to college, occupy four hours a week; four hours are given to English literature and physical science, and additional hours to mathematics and French, which were formerly given to Latin and Greek. Much that is superfluous or fruitless in the earlier requirements has been omitted, it is true, but the essentials still remain.

Another fact is pertinent here. It used to be a common remark that the Latin School graduates had little to do during the Freshman year. This was undoubtedly true. * * * * But that day is past. The Freshman is required now to enter a new and almost untried field of labor, and to do work as difficult as in any year of his whole course. If well informed on one or more subjects, that fact is ascertained by the examination for admission, and he is placed in an advanced division. Therefore, it will be seen that students no longer do a part of the college work in the preparatory school. The preparation, however perfect, becomes the basis of more advanced and difficult work in the college. This is as it should be. Furthermore, the college offers to the new candidate examinations for advanced standing in Latin, Greek, mathematics and modern languages, and, if successful in any one or all of them, he will be placed in advance of his less proficient competitor. I do not think this difference in the grade of scholarship at Harvard and elsewhere is fully understood or appreciated, even by graduates, as late as ten years ago.

Notwithstanding this increase in the requisitions for admission, the growth in the college curriculum, the pruning of the school year with us, and the introduction of exercises in the weekly round of school duties not absolutely necessary for the examination, yet with many parents the desire remains that entrance to the college be gained in the shortest possible time, too often regardless of the state of preparation.

No additional legislation is required to meet the difficulties of the case, because the regulations of the School Board provide for a course of eight years, to begin at nine years of age. We find, however, by experience, that candidates of that age cannot pass our examination and carry along the work of the first year with success, except in rare instances. Ten seems to be a more suitable age for admission, and eighteen for graduation, and to this there is little objection. But the great majority of our graduates do not enter the school at ten, but come later—from twelve to eighteen—and, whatever their ability, or previous acquisitions, desire to get ready for college in one, two, or three years. Pupils oftentimes leave or are withdrawn from the school when they are told, after trial, that they cannot be prepared for college in the time that they have assigned for this part of their education. * *

It appears to me that there can be but one deduction from these facts. A more thorough and complete preparation than ever before is absolutely necessary, both for a successful admission to college and for the successful prosecution of the studies after such admission. To accomplish this more time must be given to it than in the past, and sufficient time to meet the increasing demands of higher education.

A few words in conclusion about the present condition of the School. As you will see by the catalogue, the number of the pupils is 428, or about the number of last year. Since September 1 about forty lads have been refused who wished to become pupils. Dr. Gardner rarely refused an applicant. Such a policy this year would have carried the number to nearly 500 pupils. Would this indicate success? I think not. Numbers alone are not requisite for the highest degree of prosperity. And yet no boy has been refused who seemed to give any promise of continuing long at the School or possibly completing the course and entering college. I have been compelled to postpone the admission of a few applicants till there should be vacancies in the classes which they are qualified to join. Every room in the two buildings granted to our use is occupied, and some rooms are over-crowded. But we are toiling patiently on to the time when there will be room enough and to spare. It is expected that the new School-house, situated on the square bounded by Warren Avenue and Dartmouth, Montgomery and Clarendon Streets, will be ready for occupancy in September, 1880. Till then we must be subjected to many inconveniences. Tempus veniat. There are twelve Masters and junior masters engaged in the regular instruction of the School, faithful and earnest men, who were among the best scholars in their respective classes in the preparatory and collegiate courses of study, and many of whom had gained an enviable name as instructors in colleges and high schools before coming to Boston. Owing to their firm, discreet and courteous management the School is in a good state of discipline. Its moral tone is excellent, of which I have had several proofs this term. The pupils appear to be impressed with the idea that the School is a place for work and manly behavior. So far as scholarship is concerned, our instruction has not been satisfactory. Will it ever be? Can it ever be? Growth in knowledge, like growth in piety, seems to remove one farther from the goal of perfection the more one struggles to reach it. Still, we shall persevere in striving to give the pupils as thorough a preparation and as broad a culture as is in our power, and not be discouraged by defeats and disappointments.

A marked change in the methods of instruction was made when a separate department was assigned to each teacher, instead of his instructing, as had hitherto been the case, one class in all its branches of study. In the Appendix* we insert a tabular view of the exercises, arranged for the year 1876, just after this change had taken place, and about the time of the changes referred to in Mr. Merrill's speech of the next year.

After the decease of Dr. Gardner and Mr. Gay, considerable discussion arose in respect to their successor. The School had once more failed to possess the entire confidence of its alumni and the community. This was the result of various circumstances and had been for some time growing. A correspondent of one of the daily papers thus writes of it:

Ten years ago several members of the School Committee came to the conclusion that the Public Latin School had fulfilled its mission, and advanced several proposals with regard to its future. First, that its existence should be terminated at once; second, that it should be merged in the English High School; third, that it should be made a branch of, and subordinate to the High School. This attempt to destroy the School signally failed, and in truth was more in the nature of a personal attack upon the then Head Master than an honest desire for reform. Fortunately for the School and the city no one of these proposals was adopted; but, unfortunately, for the last six years of its history, a plan was adopted that has proved itself impracticable, and even impossible, of execution.

The curriculum of the School has ever been one of severe and rigid discipline in the ancient classics, based upon the established opinion of learned men that there was but one course of study suitable to lay the foundation of a thorough and liberal culture. When we recognize the eminence of past graduates of this School and of the other classical schools of the country, who were educated on this plan, even the most ardent advocates of new methods must hesitate to call it false and absurd; yet it undoubtedly is true that the devotees of classical education recognize that the requirements of the times necessitate a modification of the old methods of instruction in the classics, and see the necessity of introducing into the curriculum the rudiments of modern languages and various other branches of study.

The course of instruction at the School for the last six years has endeavored to revolutionize rather than reform the School. Its aim was in the direction of a union of the High and Latin Schools, to produce a sort of brevet university of the mongrel kind, in which any or all species of learning might be had in lots to suit. * * * * The last six years have proved the impracticability of this plan, the best evidence of which is that it has failed to fit pupils satisfactorily for the requirements of our colleges, that it has not been approved by the teachers, or found acceptable to parents or scholars. This year an entirely new curriculum has been adopted, based on the old classical system, eradicating from it the parrot grammatical part, which was the bane of the old system, and teaching the ancient languages rather in the method and spirit of a modern tongue. This system also reduces the time formerly given to the higher mathematics, and adds a modicum of French, history, the sciences and English literature.

It will be seen that 1876 begins a new era in the history of Boston's most venerable and most celebrated literary institution. It has been most wisely decided to continue it as a distinctly classical preparatory school, with a new and improved curriculum, in which a careful training in Latin, Greek, and mathematics, and in the rudiments of the French and German languages is to form the base, with general instruction in the elements of the natural sciences.

history and English literature, grammar and rhetoric, together with instruction in drawing and music. This course is to be pursued not with reference to educating the pupil for business—that is the proper and peculiar work of the English High School, a task which it has most acceptably accomplished in the past, and which requires a curriculum which shall anticipate a part of the work provided for by the college. But the work of the Latin School is to prepare the student to enter college with the kind of instruction which shall best enable him to pursue a college course. In a word, its work is to feed the professions, and so long as Boston needs clergymen, doctors and lawyers, it is right and proper that she should see to it that a free school is provided, so that her humblest citizen may secure to his children a classical, college education, and that poverty may be no insurmountable obstacle to talent.

Not only does this new curriculum, founded on the advice of President Eliot of Harvard, and other leading educators, go into operation this year, but a new system of government is to be tried. A system of corrections and penalties for misbehavior has been introduced. By it constant communication is kept up between the parents of the offender and the Head Master of the School, and the parent distinctly understands what the boy's offence is, and what penalty is inflicted, and what will be the next step in the boy's punishment. Thus the parents can never be taken unawares, and are compelled to co-operate with the government of the School in disciplining their children. This plan is an improvement on the old, severe, and often unwise and cruel methods of government, and must tend to elevate and improve the morale of the institution.

At the present time the course of instruction and the text-books employed, as given in the Annual Catalogue for 1883, are:—

COURSE OF STUDY.

FIRST YEAR.—CLASS VI.

Latin.—1. Regular forms; Latin into English, with some unprepared translation. 2. Writing Latin from dictation. 3. Vocabulary; English into Latin, oral and written exercises.

English.—Reading aloud from (a) Hawthorne's Wonder Book and True Stories; (b) either Tom Brown's School Days at Rugby, or Charles and Mary Lamb's Tales from Shakspeare; and (c) History of the United States. 2. Reading aloud and recitation of, some of Whittier's and Longfellow's poems. 3. Language lessons, including (a) the study of the principles of English Grammar; (b) oral and written abstracts of the history and other reading lessons; and (c) Spelling in connection with the written exercises.

Geography and History.—1. Physical and Political Geography, with map drawing, of (a) the United States; (b) the countries of Europe; (c) the remaining countries of North America. 2. History of United States read. [See "English."]

Natural or Physical Science.—(To begin March 1). Physiology and Hygiene (oral instruction).

Mathematics.—Arithmetic, oral and written; 1. Review. 2. Metric System. 3. Percentage, including commission, profit and loss, and other simple applications.

Oral Geometry : Forms and simple truths.

SECOND YEAR.—CLASS V.

Latin.—1. Forms and Syntax. 2. Translation of easy Latin, and Caesar's Gallic War, Books I-II. 3. Translation of Latin at sight. 4. Writing Latin from dictation; committing passages to memory. 5. Vocabulary, turning English into Latin, including sentences like those in Caesar.

English.—1. Reading aloud from (a) Hawthorne's Tanglewood Tales; (b) Autobiography of Franklin; Familiar Letters of John and Abigail Adams, etc.; and (c) History of England. 2. Reading aloud, and recitation of, some of Holmes's, Bryant's, and parts of Scott's poems. 3. Language lessons of Class VI to be continued.

Geography and History.—1. Physical and Political Geography, with map-drawing of (a) the countries of South America; (b) the West Indies, etc.; (c) the countries of Asia and Africa; (d) Australia, Malaysia, and other islands of the Pacific. 2. Reading from English History.

Natural Science.—(To begin March 1.) Zoology (oral instruction).

Mathematics.—Arithmetic, oral and written; 1. Percentage continued, including simple interest, discount, "problems" in interest, partial payments, and compound interest. 2. Compound numbers. 3. Ratio and proportion. 4. Powers and roots. 5. Mensuration, with oral Geometry.

Miscellaneous.—Penmanship. Military drill and Gymnastics.

THIRD YEAR.—CLASS IV.

Latin.—1. Caesar's Gallic War, Books III-IV; Ovid, about 1,000 lines, and Virgil's Aeneid, Book I, including some study of prosody; unprepared translation. 2. Writing from dictation; committing passages to memory. 3. Vocabulary; English into Latin, including retranslation of passages from Caesar.

English.—Reading aloud from (a) Church's Stories from Homer; (b) either Dana's Two Years before the Mast or Irving's Sketch Book; (c) Plutarch's Lives of Famous Greeks. 2. Reading aloud, and recitation of, some of Lowell's, and Gray's, and parts of Goldsmith's poems. 3. Oral and written exercises, including (a) abstracts of Plutarch's Lives, and (b) compositions, chiefly narratives or descriptions, on subjects drawn from reading lessons.

French.—1. Pronunciation; forms of regular verbs, etc.; oral reading and translations of easy French; unprepared translation. 2. Writing French from dictation. 3. Vocabulary; English into French, oral and written exercises.

Geography and History.—1. General reviews of Geography, with special attention to (a) astronomical and physical phenomena; and (b) the political and commercial relations of different countries. 2. (a) Plutarch's Lives of Famous Greeks read; (b) History of Greece, with historical Geography.

Natural Science.—Zoology (oral instruction).

Mathematics.—Algebra, including the generalizations of Arithmetic.

Military Drill and Gymnastics.

FOURTH YEAR.—CLASS III.

Latin.—1. Aeneid, Books II-IV; Sallust's Catiline; easy passages from Cicero; unprepared translations. 2. Committing passages to memory. 3. Vocabulary; English into Latin, including retranslation of passages from Sallust and Cicero.

Greek.—1. Forms. Greek into English, including the translation of about 25 pages from Xenophon's Anabasis; unprepared translation. 2. Writing Greek from dictation. 3. Vocabulary; English into Attic Greek, oral and written exercises.

English.—1. Reading aloud from (a) Plutarch's Lives of Famous Romans; (b) Addison's papers in the Spectator. 2. Reading aloud, and recitation of, Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome, and some of Tennyson's, Emerson's and Wordsworth's poems. 3. Written abstracts; compositions; translations from a foreign language.

French.—1. Oral reading; oral and written translation of some modern prose work; unprepared translation. 2. Writing from dictation; committing passages to memory. 3. Vocabulary; English into French, oral and written exercises.

History.—History of Rome, with historical Geography.

Natural Science.—Botany.

Mathematics.—Algebra, including the generalizations of, and applications to, Arithmetic.

Military Drill and Gymnastics.

FIFTH YEAR.—CLASS II.

Latin.—1. Cicero, four orations; Vergil's Bucolics, and review of Aeneid, Books I-IV; translation at sight. Committing passages to memory. 3. Vocabulary; English into Latin, including oral and written exercises based upon passages from Cicero.

Greek.—1. Anabasis, Books I-IV, or its equivalent; sight translation of easy passages from Xenophon's works. 2. Writing Greek from dictation; committing passages to memory. 3. Vocabulary; English into Attic Greek, including sentences like those of Xenophon.

English.—1. Reading and study of (a) one play of Shakspeare: and (b) a part of the English required for admission to college. 2. Recitation of prose and poetry. 3. Writing translations from a foreign language; and compositions.

French.—1. Oral reading; oral and written translation of some modern prose and poetry; translation at sight. 2. Committing passages to memory. 3. Oral and written exercises in French composition.

History. History and Geography of Greece and Rome completed.

The earliest Latin School house was just behind the present location of King's Chapel, and the name of "School Street," a contraction of the older "South Latin Grammar School Street," is a continual reminder that here, for the first two centuries of the town and city of Boston, stood its first and chief School.*

The first School house was undoubtedly as simple and plain a building as the first Meeting house, the Master probably living in a portion of it, and keeping the School in the remainder, as we find that was the case when Mr. Woodmansey was Master in 1650-67.* A conjectural drawing of the building has been made, which represents a two-story building, with an old-fashioned roof, rude and plain, but it is uncertain whether this represents the original or the second building.

Probably the School ceased to be held in the Schoolmaster's house during Mr. Cheever's mastership (1671-1708), for in Mr. Hassam's monograph on Cheever we have an account of the erection of a new house for Mr. Cheever's occupancy, in which no provision for the School appears, and a little later we find the following on the Town Records :

"At a Town Meeting held in the Town House in Boston, March 13, 1703-4, it was, Voted that a New School-house be build instead of the Old School House in wch mr Ezekieil Chever Teacheth and it is Left wth the Selectmen to get the same accomplished."

June 27th, 1704, the Selectmen voted to proceed to the erection of the new School-house authorized by this vote, advising with Mr. Cheever and Mr. Williams in regard to it.

On the 24th of July of the same year they made a contract with Mr. John Barnard for the erection of a School-house, "forty foot long, twenty-five foot wide, and eleven foot stud."†

A portion of this School-house must have stood very near the present location of the statue of Franklin. A plan of Boston, dated 1733, gives a representation of this School, with a double roof, a chimney, windows, and doors, very much resembling the picture already given of the earlier edifice.‡ The same picture gives a view of the old King's Chapel building, and of Mr. Lovell's house.

From the Records of King's Chapel we learn :—

March 14th, 1747-8. A petition§ of the Minister, Wardens and Vestry of King's Chapel was presented to the Town Meeting stating, that owing to the ruinous condition of that church, it was desired to

* See note p. 23.

† The full text of this vote, as well as of those preceding, and of those passed in regard to the erection of the house for Mr. Cheever's dwelling will be found in Appendix D.

‡ This representation would seem to be incorrect, because the new School-house, constructed in 1748, on the opposite side of the street, by the King's Chapel congregation, which was by the terms of the contract to be built like the old, was of but one story, or at most one and a half, as will be seen by the representation of it which we give beyond.

§ The full text of this petition, and of the action of the Town in Town Meeting upon it, is given in the second volume of the Annals of King's Chapel by the Rev. Henry W. Foote.

reconstruct it in the same place, and to make it somewhat larger and more commodious, and asking for that purpose a piece of ground at the east end of the Church, which was town property. The petition further prays the appointment of a committee to consider the petition, view the premises and report to the Town.

Dr. Greenwood, in his History of King's Chapel, gives the further history of the proceedings :—

The town chose a committee to confer with the committee of the church, and the result of the conference was a proposal that the church should have the lot occupied by the school-house at the east end of the old building, with the reservation of a passage way of ten feet wide into the burying-ground, on condition that the school-house should be rebuilt by the church on a convenient spot in the vicinity. Thereupon the petitioners bargained for a piece of ground at a short distance from the school-house, and also for another more expensive lot opposite the school-house, on the south side of School Street, as the former could not be purchased without the latter. But the Committee of the town, finding the latter piece a more desirable situation than the other, rose in their demands, and insisted that a school-house should be erected for them there. This came near to break off the negotiations, and compel the church to rebuild according to the old dimensions. But Governor Shirley and others came forward, and said nobly and sensibly, "that as the Building was designed for Posterity as well as themselves, it would hereafter be deemed very injudicious if an advantage of enlarging it into a convenient and regular building should now be lost for the sake of an increased charge."

In view of these things, we learn from the Records, that it seemed best that the Proprietors of King's Chapel should follow the advice of the committee, and substitute another petition containing the proposals agreed upon after this mutual consultation, and meanwhile should take a formal vote in regard to taking down and rebuilding that edifice; "for tho' People's Minds were generally known as to this matter, yet nothing publick or authoritative had been done about it." A meeting was accordingly held after evening service on Sunday, March 27th, when a vote to that effect was passed unanimously.

The further action on the subject we give as it appears upon the Town Records :—

pence in Consideration of said Grant;—The Gentn. who Petitioned for this Meeting being present, desired the town would not at this time proceed thereupon, but prayed they might have Liberty to withdraw their said Petition for the Grant of said Land, &c,—Whereupon It was Voted that the Petitioners have Liberty to withdraw their said Petition, and they accordingly withdrew the same.

April 11th, A. D. 1748. The Petition of the Minister Wardens and vestry of Kings Chapple in Boston in behalf of themselves and the Congregation that usually attend the Publick worship of God there, setting forth—

That said Chapel which has constantly been Improved for the Publick worship of God for about Sixty Years past is in many Parts of it Rotten and greatly decayed and almost rendered incapable for that Service any longer, and said Congregation out of Regard to the Honour of God and for their own Edification being very desirous that the Publick worship of God should be still Supported and Carried on in said Place, have determined to Rebuild said Church and make it somewhat larger more Comodious and Regular than it now is, but apprehend they shall be greatly Straitened for want of Ground at the East End of said Church to Effect the same.—Your Petitioners therefore pray the Town would be pleased to Grant to said Church 34 foot Eastward for the Body of said chapel and 10 foot for a Chancel in order to enlarge the same into a Regular and Commodious Building and whereas the Town has a School house upon Part of the Land which your Petrs. Request, It is therefore humbly proposed in consideration of the Grant hereby Request, That the Petrs. do Purchase and make over to the Town a Piece of Ground at the upper End of the Lane or Passage fronting the present School house of like dimensions with the present, the said Petitioners not to dig or open any Ground which the Additional Building shall cover, excepting to lay the Foundation, nor at any time to exclude those who have vaults or Tombs within the requested Limits to have free access to them.

Your Petrs. apprehend that the said Grant will be no detriment to the Town as the present School house is much decayed, in many parts defective, and will in a Short Space of time require to be New Built, and as the place now proposed for the School, neither has nor can possibly have any Contiguous Building being Eighty-eight foot long, and Seventy seven foot wide, has a free air, a pleasant assent and Capable of a Southerly Highway to it from Bromfield Lane which if it be thought necessary the Petitioners have a reasonable Prospect of Obtaining, is very near to School Street, and yet agreeably Retired, The Town will have a larger Piece of Ground to Accommodate the School, The Chapel aforesaid and other Neighbouring houses Will be less in danger from Fire and such accidents, The Town Receive a New Ornament in the Buildings proposed, and all to be effected at the Charge of the Petitr. and others such well disposed persons as shall think proper to Contribute to the same, for a clearer View of what your Petrs. hereby Request we Refer to the Platts of the Ground and the Buildings annexed.

Hoping the Town upon the considerations aforesaid will grant the said Petition,—was Read, and after some Debate thereon, It was Moved, Seconded and Voted that

Kings
Chappel Petition.

April 18th, A. D. 1748. The Committee appointed the 11th instant to prepare the form of a Vote, in answer to the Petition of the Wardens and Vestry of King's Chappel, praying for a piece of Ground in order to Enlarge the Church, Reported that they had maturely considered the Affair, and agreed to offer the following Draft to the Town, Viz—

That the Selectmen be Impowered to make a legal Conveyance in behalf of the Town to the Petitioners of the several Pieces of Land and of the Privilege hereafter mentioned, upon their first Complying with or Satisfying the Selectmen with Respect unto the Terms and Conditions herein Required of them Viz—a Piece of Land Fronting on School Street extending Thirty feet on said Street from the East End of Kings Chappel and includes the Passageway into the Burying Ground, and the Westerly part of the School-house and of the Yard thereto belonging measuring Thirty Seven feet back from the said Street together with the old School house and other Buildings belonging to it, being partly on the premises and partly on the Towns Land adjoining to be Removed when the Town shall Require it at the Expence of the Petrs. Also a Strip of Land Thirty feet in Length and four feet wide extending from the Northeast Corner of the old Chappel upon a Line with the North Side of said Chappel in order to Erect thereon part of the Walls of the proposed New Church, Also another Strip of Land of said Width adjoining to and turning upon a Right Angle with the former, thence running until it meets the larger Piece herein first proposed to be granted saving a passage way of Six feet wide in the last mentioned Strip, throu the Walls of the New Church in some convenient Place between the Northeast Corner and the Chancel herein after mentioned which Entrance shall be at least Six feet high leading into a Piece of Burying Ground belonging to the Town which piece measures Twenty five feet North and South and twenty feet East and West, Also Another piece of Land in form of half Oval adjoining Easterly upon the beforementioned proposed Grants and extending fifteen feet North, and as much South from the middle of the Eastermost Line thereof, and to extend ten feet further East in its extreme distance from said middle Point being for the proposed Chancel, provided there shall be Still left a Passage-way of at least Eleven feet in the Narrowest part between said Chancel and Mr. Cook's line into the Burying Ground; provided also that the Bodys of those who shall be known to lye in the said Strips of Land, or within the said half Oval Piece shall be decently taken up and buried in some other part of the Burying Ground with the consent of their Friends, and in such manner as they with the Selectmen shall agree to and direct or where no Friends shall appear they shall be Removed as the Selectmen shall direct at the Charge of the Petitioners.

Also a privilege to Extend their New Building over the aforesaid Piece of Burying Ground lying to the Northward of the present School-house and measuring 25 feet by 20 as before expressed; provided they do not carry the floor of the Church or otherwise Incumber the same within eight feet of the Surface of the Earth as it now lyes, and that no monuments or Grave Stones either within or without the Building be destroyed or if accidentally broken in carrying on the Work be repaired at the charge of the Petitioners; unless they shall agree with the Friends of those who may lye Buried in said Piece of Ground, or where no Friends appear with the Selectmen to Remove the Bodys in manner as is herein provided for the other Dead Bodys before mentioned then and in such case that the Selectmen be Impowered likewise to convey to the Petrs. said piece of Burying Ground and the Entrance into it herein before reserved.—

That in Consideration of the proposed Grants beforementioned the Petitioners shall procure and cause a legal Title to be made to the Town of a Certain Piece of Land over against the present Grammar School now in the Occupation of the Widow Green and others measuring $34\frac{1}{2}$ feet or thereabouts on School Street and running 97 feet back more or less, bounded on the West by Col. Wendell's Land, and Easterly on a passage way leading to the house where Mr. Gunter now dwells, together with the privilege of said Passageway forever, Saving to the Petitioners a Liberty of Removing if they see good the Buildings now upon said Land, when Required by the Selectmen, said Petitioners likewise to Erect upon said Land a new School-house of like dimensions and accomodations with the present and finish the same in like decent manner to the satisfaction of the Selectmen; unless the Petrs. should propose a Sum of money to the Acceptance of the Town, instead of Erecting the said Building.

All which is humbly Submitted in the Name and by order of the Committee.

Andr. Oliver.

Boston 18th April 1748.

Which Report being Read and a long Debate had thereon It was Moved and Seconded that the following Question be put viz—whether the Town have Power in this Meeting to Appropriate or Dispose of the Land on which the South Latin School stands to any other use than for a School, the Vote of the Town of the 14th 1mo 1635 as Entred in the Towns Records notwithstanding, and the same being accordingly put,—It was Voted in Affirmative.

And then on a Motion made and Seconded the following Question was put viz—Whether the Town have power to accept of the said Report of the Committee, the province Laws of the fourth of William and Mary, Entitled an Act for Regulating of Townships, choice of Town Officers, and Setting forth their Power, and the Twelfth of Queen Anne, Entitled an act directing how Meetings of proprietors of Lands lying in common may be called, which have been now read, notwithstanding, and It was Voted in the Affirmative.—and then it was proposed and Seconded, that the following Question may be put Viz—Whether the said Draft of a Vote as prepared by the Committee be Accepted.—Whereupon, it was moved that the Vote of Acceptance of said Draft may be Determined by a written Vote.—It passed in the Affirmative;—and thereupon the Inhabitants were directed to bring in their Votes in writing, and such of 'em as were for accepting of said Draft of a Vote as proposed by the Committee and passing the same as the Vote of the Town in answer to said Petition were desired to write Yea, and such as were not for accepting it to write Nay. And the Inhabitants proceeded to bring in their Votes, and the Votes being brought in and Sorted it appeared that there was Four hundred and two Voters and there was

Two hundred and five Yeas &

One hundred & Ninety Seven Nays

Whereupon, it was declared by the Moderator, that the said Form of a Vote was Accepted and Passed by the Town accordingly.

The account of this meeting, in the Records of King's Chapel, mentions an interesting attempt on the part of a prominent citizen, by means of cumulative voting, to secure the expression of public opinion in accordance with the wishes of the proprietors of the Church, which having been detected, was promptly rebuked, and fitly punished, for the full account of which we would refer the curious to the second volume of the Annals of King's Chapel, by the Rev. Henry W. Foote.

In the afternoon of the same day on which this meeting was held, Joseph Green, Esq., who lived a few rods behind the School-house, sent into the Latin School to Mr. Lovell, who heartily opposed the project of removing the School, the following epigram:—

“ A fig for your learning! I tell you the Town,
To make the church larger, must pull the school down.
Unluckily spoken, replied Master Birch,—
Then learning, I fear, stops the growth of the church.”

Dr. Greenwood adds:—“The end of the whole business was that the Church erected a School-house on the required lot, opposite the old one.”

"During the building of this School-house," continues the record, "they met with much vexation and Delay from the various Humours of the Selectmen and others, but especially from the continued Impertinence of Mr. Lovel, the Schoolmaster, indeed every man seemed to imagine he had a Right to dictate and prescribe his own Fancy in the Building, but the Committee endeavored to encourage their workmen to proceed thro' all opposition and to hearken to no alterations but what the projectors would become bound to pay for."

At much expense (the cost was £2,700 old tenor*), and after many vexatious delays, the new School-house was at last completed, on the opposite side of School Street, on the corner of what was then Cook's Court, now Chapman place (where a corner of the Parker House was subsequently erected), on the spot where it was to stand, for the larger part of a century, in part at least, since a portion of the wall then built was incorporated in the structure which about sixty years later superseded it.

As this School-house remained standing until 1810 or later, it might be supposed that its general appearance could be easily ascertained, but a most diligent search and inquiry has brought no representation to light, and the descriptions given by the few persons still living, who either went to school in it, or lived in the vicinity, so that they would be likely to be familiar with it, vary so much that no conclusion can be reached from them on the subject. We know, however, from the agreement made by the Selectmen with the proprietors of King's Chapel, that it was of brick, thirty-four feet front toward School Street, thirty-six feet deep on the passage and twelve feet stud.

In 1847, when the first edition of the Catalogue was prepared, an inquiry concerning this building elicited some descriptions from former pupils, which we give. As showing the uncertainty of human memory these testimonies are valuable. Those by whom they were given describe the building as of wood and as of brick; as red and black, and as white, in color; as one story, and as two stories in height; as having a yard and fence before it, as having no yard and no fence. Remembering that it was a reproduction of the old building on the opposite side of the street, we conclude that those who assign one story as its height are more correct than those who describe it as having two; who have, perhaps, confused their recollections of this building with those of the three-story edifice afterwards erected on the same site.

* This sum was not far from twelve hundred dollars at the present value of money. In 1745, the depreciation of the bills of credit had reduced the value of eleven or twelve pounds in paper, to one pound sterling, and when the redemption of this issue began in the fall of 1749, forty-five shillings paper were exchanged for a silver dollar.

Rev. Dr. E. E. Hale writes: "This house was built of brick. It must have been as wide as the late School-house and was nearly square. The architect of the cupola, Dr. Jenks tells me, and probably the whole building, was the same man who designed the cupola of Faneuil Hall; and the cupola was considered graceful in its proportions. The School-room was entered directly from the street. In the rear was a sort of projection, in which was a staircase which led to the attic, and in this attic the boys used sometimes to study. Dr. Jenks tells me he has often sat with Dr. Warren* at work at the window over the door on School Street.

* * * "We boys speculating on the fact that there was a cross on our School bell (in 1835) guessed that it once belonged to the old French Church in School Street. Can any one tell if it were the same bell that was in the old School-house, and whence did it come?"

Mr. Thomas Farrington, of our Class of 1788, says (in 1855):—

The School-house was higher in proportion to its width than the rough sketch with which Dr. Hale accompanied his inquiry, which formed the starting-point for our picture. The School-room was so high from the ground that a flight of six (?) steps was necessary to reach it. The door-way was very plain. The Master's desk was at the south end on the right side of the back door, which opened into a porch in which were the staircase and a door leading to the yard, which was small, with a board fence. The Usher's desk was in the northeasterly corner; between it and the door was a small, or short seat and desk, in which a few of the first class sat at times, as, I think, for want of room with the others; between this desk and the door came down a bell-rope. Then going round against the sun were the seats of the third and fourth classes, on the west side were the first and second, and on the east side were fifth, sixth and seventh classes; the lowest class was without desks and not elevated from the floor. The seats and desks were as plain and compact as possible; boys in those days were not so important members of, did not require, nor receive so much room and accommodation from, society as at the present day; which is evident to everyone who can compare from his own knowledge, that School-house with the present one.

The cupola was at the extreme front of the building. There were no trees on the School-house lot. The chimney was a rare one, if not singular. It was of brick, about a foot square, built in an iron frame that came down the ceiling in about the middle of the room, which was a high one, from ten to twelve (feet) high, I think nearly, or quite, the latter, with a sheet-iron sliding bottom, and the funnel of a large wood stove admitted on one side.

FIRST SCHOOL HOUSE ON SOUTH SIDE OF SCHOOL STREET.

Our next witness is Mr. Ebenezer Thayer of our Class of 1806, who died in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1883, while these pages were still passing through the press. His memory of the old School-house was perfectly clear, and we have been greatly indebted to him for assistance which has made it possible at this distance of time to present a picture so reasonably accurate. Mr. Thayer lived on Cook's Court, in the rear of the School-house. When attending School he probably entered through the yard, and came in at the back door, through the porch described by Mr. Farrington. He says:—

I recollect in going down to the School-house in the morning we entered by the gate, and the door of the porch was right before us, on entering which we turned to the right and entered the School-room door; on the left was Master Biglow's desk, on the right were two short forms occupied by the senior boys; then two long forms brought you to the Usher's desk—the back forms were two feet higher than the front, the windows so high that the boys could not “shin up” to see the soldiers passing.

The front of the building on School Street was about fifty feet high to the bell cupola, with a porthole near the ridge, which may be presumed to have been a dial for a clock. The width of the building front was probably thirty-eight to forty feet. (We know it was thirty-four.) The School-house lot was probably eighty feet deep, and the building sixty feet deep. (This is nearly double the correct depth.) The front of the School-house was about fifteen feet from the curb-stone; a flight of five or six steps rose to the front door. There were two windows, one on each side of the door, with sills fifteen feet from the ground (this is manifestly too high), the windows eight or ten feet high, and from top of the windows to the eaves about fifteen feet. (Again the figures are too great.) The roof was peaked. The building was all of brick.

Mr. Thayer furnishes a rough ground plan of the School-house and yard, which substantially accords with the description given by Mr. Farrington.

Dr. Watson, of our Class of 1805, who has also recently deceased, says:—

It was a brick building with a stone foundation, of the height of four or five feet, or more, from the ground. The front had two large windows, one on each side of a large front door in the lower story; and two smaller windows over the lower, in what may have been the second story, and I think the front door had a fan window over it. At the entrance there was a large stone, perhaps four feet square, for the landing-place, with three or four steps below it. On top of the roof there was a belfry, and a bell, the rope coming down into the School-room, immediately behind the front door. There certainly was another room, over the main School-room, which was sometimes used for recitations to the Usher, and rehearsals of "pieces," etc. I will only add that the front of the building did not abut directly on the street, but ten or twelve feet from it. There was a small yard in the rear, and a flight of stairs (in a small addition to the back part of it) led to the second story. There was a gate to the back yard* which opened into an alley, where there were three small houses, and at the upper part of it a stable, kept by one Zeph Spurr, whose son was at the School, I think, for a time.

Mr. Jona. Darby Robins, of our Class of 1766, said, about 1847:—

The School-house was of one story, with an attic above, a cupola, with the bell in front, as in the late School-house. There was but one school-room, in which the whole School assembled, though some of the boys, particularly those of the seventh form, were permitted sometimes to go upstairs into the attic room. This was reached by a staircase in the rear on the outside. The boys of the younger forms sat on benches, with a box underneath in which to put their books; but after the fourth form, when they began to make Latin, they had desks in front of them on which to write. There was a single entrance in front, and you then ascended two or three steps.

Hon. Edward G. Loring, of our Class of 1811-12, writes that his recollection of the School-house, when under Mr. Gould, is of a two-story building on the south side of School Street, with windows on a side alley. His class was in the second story. He cannot remember how the lower story was occupied, nor any architectural details of the building. He adds:—

There is a lurking impression in my mind that under Master Biglow the Latin School was a smaller building than under Master Gould, and that on the opposite side of the street, where the City Hall now stands, there was a square wooden building, where the schools for reading, writing, and arithmetic, were kept under Masters Snelling and Haskins, but these impressions are very vague and unreliable to myself.

From these varying descriptions we have had our drawing prepared, which, while not exactly agreeing with any of them, combines the characteristic features included in each.† When finished it was

*This back-yard, or play-ground, was a space about 20 x 40 feet, not a tree nor shrub therein; nor anything but a high-peaked fence, and a clumsy, rickety gate, with a six pound shot tied to it to keep it closed.—J. L. W.

† In addition to these old pupils of the School the Committee addressed a number of aged citizens of Boston, and several of the oldest surviving graduates of Harvard College, who having been at Cambridge while this house was still standing, might fairly be supposed to have passed it occasionally on their visits to Boston, even though School St. in these days was not so much of a resort for the Harvard student as it has become since Artemus Ward described the College as pleasantly located there; and the result of these applications is given below:

Mr. Joseph Head (Harv. 1807), in 1881 the oldest living graduate of the College, writes in that year, that the building was a one-story building of brick, partly black and partly submitted to most of these gentlemen for approval, and was generally acceptable. The Hon. Henry K. Oliver of our Class of 1810-11, on red, with gable end to the street, surmounted by a small circular cupola in which hung a small bell which was said to have belonged to the original King's Chapel. It was approached by six or seven steps, door of ordinary size in middle of front, with a single window on each side of door, and he thinks there was a cornice to both gable and eaves, but is not certain. It was replaced by a three-story building about the time of the incorporation of the city, about the year 1822. [Here, of course, he is in error as to time.] The mansion house of Moses Gill stood directly west of the old building.

A few days later, after seeing our rough sketch, he writes that it agrees very well with his recollection of the old house, but "I think the windows were smaller in proportion, and that there were at least five or six steps to the front door. The basement was higher in front and the ground sloped upward considerably to the rear."

Dr. Wm. Perry, of the Class of 1811, Harv. Coll., one of the four survivors of the class in 1881, writes in that year, that although he passed it daily during the closing months of 1812-1813 and part of 1814 his recollections of it are not very definite. "I can only say that the building was two stories high, by no means an imposing structure, wooden, I believe, and painted white. Its roof gradually descended from the front to the rear. It stood in a yard that appeared sufficiently large for the uses of the students, and was separated from the street by an iron fence."

Mr. Moses Williams, an aged citizen of Boston, writes, April 19, 1881: "I remember the building. It was a two-story wooden building, stood end to the street, and I have the impression that it stood a few feet back from the street, and that there was a flight of steps on the outside to the second story. The roof was not steep. The dimensions did not exceed forty by eighty feet. The roof had only a slight pitch. I have an impression that the land on which the School-house stood belonged to a Mr. Holloway (sic)* previous to the Revolution. He was a tory and went to England. His estate was forfeited for his life, but was, after his death, inherited by his nephew, Ward Nicholas Boylston. The old School-house was a cheap building, probably built at a small cost, on account of the uncertain title."†

In a later letter, after having seen the sketch, he writes: "The Latin School-house which I have in my eye as on the Boylston-Holway tory estate, was a two-story wooden building with a low pitch to the roof, too low to look well, and too narrow in its front on School Street to strike the eye pleasantly. The pitch of the roof was also too low for beauty and at one time there was an outside flight of stairs to the second story, giving it a very awkward appearance. I think this is an accurate description of the building which was on this confiscated estate in 1800, or in 1801 or 1802."

Mr. Wm. Thomas (Harv. 1807), writes in 1881: "It stood, as I remember, opposite or nearly opposite the School Street side of the Stone Chapel, and was about 30 or 40 feet back from the line of buildings on the opposite side of the street to the Chapel. I do not remember ever going from the sidewalk up to the building, but do remember noticing that not any doors of entrance were to be seen from the sidewalk,‡ so that I concluded the end of

* An error for Hallowell.

† Perhaps the agreement to have it correspond with the house on the opposite side of the street, from which the School had been removed, may be a better reason for its inexpensiveness.

‡ Dr. Watson writes that he can only account for this impression of Mr. Thomas's by "the supposition that he had in his mind the appearance of the public writing-school, Master Snelling's, which in those days was immediately opposite, occupying very nearly the position of the City Hall of to-day; it was a long wooden building with the entrance on the eastern side, and showing nothing but the ugly dimensions of its sides to a spectator on the sidewalk on School Street."

seeing it, said : "If the Latin School building was of but one story, that is it, but I thought it had two;" an opinion easily accounted for when we read Dr. Watson's description of the upper or attic room. Mr. John Rogers, of our Class of 1808, who was also a pupil attending in this School-house, pronounces it substantially the School which he attended.

Dr. Watson further describes the building :—

From the west side was a brick wall about four feet high (and, perhaps, a kind of lath rail above it) running down to the side-walk, and separating the School grounds from the next premises; there was no passageway between the western wall of the School and the eastern wall of the next house.* There were no windows in the western wall of the School-house. In front of the School there was a wooden fence of some kind and a gate opening between the two sides, from a very narrow side-walk of brick, always out of order.

On the 3d of May, 1749, Mr. Lovell was notified to remove his boys into the new building. Here the School remained until 1785, when it became necessary to make some repairs upon the building, and Master Hunt, for a time, taught in Faneuil Hall. About 1812 the building was presented to the street, and the doors of entrance were on the sides of the house, which could not be readily seen from the street."

A few days later Mr. Thomas writes, after having seen a rough sketch of the building, "I remember the windows on the end to be as numerous as the space could with any propriety justify. The panes of glass were small and of much older type than then prevailed in the town, and the framework and sashes of the window much heavier."

Mr. Thomas T. Spear writes in April, 1881: "The facade of the building was of granite and the rest was of brick," and sends a rough sketch of a two-story building. He has evidently confounded the school of Lovell with that of Gould.

*This next house was that of the Hon. Moses Gill, Lieut.-Governor of the Commonwealth. Mr. Thayer says it was a three-story house, but Dr. Watson says that as he recollects it, "it was a two-story house with an attic, a long covered piazza, which in winter time was entirely closed in. I think also that it was used as a hotel or stage house at one time."

This building was known earlier as the Boylston House. It was situated about fifty feet west of Cook's court, had a front of forty feet and a door in the centre. It stood about ten or twelve feet from the street, on which was a fence on a foundation of stone two feet above the sidewalk, surmounted by an open rail. It was three stories high, with dormer windows on the roof. On the westerly, or upper side of the house, was a passage way twenty to twenty-five feet wide, leading to the stable and gardens. This garden extended to Madame De Blois's house on Bromfield street.

In the rear of the School in Cook's court was a double dwelling house, 40 x 40, of two stories with dormer windows on all sides, and fifty feet of gardens on each side. The doors of the houses were on the north and south sides respectively, and were reached by a small yard leading from Cook's court.

The lot of land on which the School-house was built belonged to, Mr. Thayer thinks, and was probably given by Mr. Ezekiel Cook, who lived on the side of Cook's court, opposite the School, and was the owner of much land in the neighborhood.

SECOND SCHOOL HOUSE ON SOUTH SIDE OF SCHOOL STREET.

there seems to have been a fire in the building, and probably then, or a little later, the old building, with the exception of the western wall, was removed, and the new building, of three stories, with a granite front, which is represented in our next engraving, was substituted for it.

While this building was erecting, the School was kept for a time in an old barn in Cole Lane, now Portland Street (occasionally referred to as the Mill Pond), afterwards in Scollay's Building on Pemberton Hill; until, about 1812, the work was completed, and it returned to the old site and the new stone School-house.*

Of this building Mr. Dillaway says†:—"The interior had none of the luxurious furnishing of the present day. Its desks and seats were long, thick planks, much too hard for our jack-knives. And yet, plain as everything was, I don't think you could find a school in our city showing more earnest, successful study, or more real school-boy happiness, than we had in that building when Benjamin A. Gould was Head Master."

Originally the upper story alone was occupied by the Latin School, and the middle story was assigned to what was then known as a "reading-school," but the interest in the School, which for some years previously had been on the wane, gradually increased. In August, 1814, thirty boys were admitted; in the August following, fifty, and, in 1816, sixty were admitted. As none were in the meantime deemed fit to enter College, the number had so increased as to render an additional room and assistant necessary. The reading-school was, therefore, removed, and its room appropriated to the use of the Latin School. As the number of scholars continued to increase yearly, more assistant instructors and additional rooms were provided as occasion required.

* See an article by Geo. S. Hillard, in the Boston Book for 1850, giving reminiscences of this building.

† In his speech at the dinner of the Latin School Association in 1880. In a speech on the like occasion in 1877 he had thus spoken of the surroundings of the School-house:—

"The old School-house had none of the conveniences of modern times, and yet I think there was as much hearty work done there and as much enjoyment by the Scholars as in any of the palatial edifices of the present day. The surroundings of the School have changed immensely within fifty years. Allow me to mention some of them. In the square opposite the City Hall there were on the right and left brick buildings for lawyers' offices; then came the Court-house, which was a handsome building, certainly as far superior to the present Court-house as the Parthenon was superior to our School-house. Half a dozen rods behind the Court-house there was a jail. . . . Between the jail and the Court-house there was a large space which we boys made use of for foot ball and base ball."

It was found expedient likewise to appoint a sub-Master, with a higher salary and more permanent tenure of position than the assistants had. In 1822 the whole School-house was appropriated to this School and in the Catalogue appeared the names of two hundred and twenty-five scholars. About 1844 this building (of which the key presented to the Latin School Association by Mr. Dixwell, and now in the library of the new School-house, is the only visible token remaining) was taken down and Horticultural Hall erected on its site, which again, about 1865, gave place to an extension of the Parker House. Meanwhile a new building intended for the joint use of this School and the English High School, had been erected in Bedford Street, and to it the School was transferred on the 8th of July, 1844.

The boys assembled at 9 o'clock in the morning and simple services of dedication took the place of the usual school exercises.* His Honor Martin Brimmer, the Mayor of the City, presided, and prayer was offered by the Rev. Nehemiah Adams of the Essex Street Church, after which his Honor congratulated the friends present on the occupancy of the building and remarked that great pains had been taken by the Common Council to provide suitable accommodations for the School. The buildings lately occupied had been deemed unworthy of further use. In the location of the present School-house, retirement, quiet, and central position, had been secured. The construction of this new edifice might well be deemed an evidence of the increasing public interest in the welfare of our common schools.

The recent introduction into these Schools of the study of drawing, an acquaintance with which is frequently useful to business men, was mentioned as another indication of this interest. Mr. Brimmer said he hoped also that the Common Council would ere long supply means for the study of astronomy, for which an observatory had been raised on the present edifice; as he believed this study was eminently calculated to bring into exercise deep religious feelings, leading the young mind to contemplate the works of Deity. Other branches of education, would, doubtless, be provided for in the future as their need was made manifest.

In no other place of the same wealth has so much been done for the cause of common schools as in Boston. Of 19,000 children, 15,000 were educated at the public expense. No pains were spared to render this system of instruction successful. The lot of the youth of our city was most happy: of the many distinguished men who honor our country, few enjoyed in early life the advantages with which our children were furnished. All that was asked in return from the pupils was attention to their studies, industry, application and the maintenance of virtue—which would surely redound to their own credit and the honor of their country. In conclusion, the Mayor said he placed in the charge of the instructors and pupils this edifice. It was a temple dedicated to learning and virtue, to be watched over with care.

BEDFORD STREET SCHOOL HOUSE.

Hon. Wm. J. Hubbard, Chairman of the Sub-Committee of the High School, and Geo. S. Hillard, Esq., of the Sub-Committee of the Latin School, then successively addressed the boys and their friends, each speaking principally of the value of the Institution with which he was officially connected.

Mr. Hillard's address reminded the young men in beautiful and powerful language, of the real and intrinsic value of the studies they were pursuing; while he spoke with feeling of the pleasures and interests of his own school-boy recollections, and of the associations which the pupils would always have with these scenes of their earlier education.

Messrs. Dixwell and Sherwin, the Principals, replied to the gentlemen of the City Government in behalf of their Schools, giving assurances that they and their associates, stimulated by the means now provided for them through the munificence of the city, would labor with increased energy. Mr. Dixwell suggested to the alumni of the Latin School, the great value it would be to that institution, and the community, to have a classical library connected with it, together with other similar means and apparatus of classical study which might be provided by its graduates and friends. As a result of these suggestions a meeting of the alumni of the Latin School was held on the same day, at which the Boston Latin School Association was formed.

The building in Bedford Street was three stories in height, of brick, with a granite facade. On each of the two lower stories were two rooms, for either School, on the sides of the building—those for the Latin toward Rowe (now Chauncy) Street; in the upper story, two large halls extended across the building, that for the Latin School occupying the front on Bedford Street. A small room at the side of the hall contained the library of the Association, and beneath it was a similar room on the second floor. Subsequently the number of boys became so great that a room in the basement was furnished (this room was assigned to Master Merrill, when, in 1858, he entered the School as an Usher, so that he has literally worked up from the lowest place to his present position), and, in 1861, a fourth story was added to the building, in which the halls of the two schools were accommodated, while the old halls were changed into class-rooms corresponding with those on the floors beneath.

No one who was ever in the old Latin School hall will forget its appearance. At one end was the platform used for declamations, behind which in later times stood the marble statue representing the School, to which reference will be made later. On the Bedford Street side was the Master's platform, opposite to it being a plaster cast representing the shield of Achilles; above this, after the war of the Rebellion, hung the standard, of the old Roman pattern, presented by the School to the company* called the Latin School Company, and carried by it throughout its service, crossed by a "John Brown pike."

The walls were hung with photographs of buildings in ancient Athens and Rome, including a large picture of the Roman Forum, and the portraits of some of the Head Masters, Gould and Lovell and Dillaway, and, afterwards, Gardner; and on brackets or tables were cork models of the Colosseum and of ancient temples, plaster casts of ancient busts and statues, or curious antiquities illustrating the studies pursued in the School.

The engraving which we give, taken by the kind permission of the Messrs. Harper Brothers, from Harper's Magazine, in which it originally appeared, will recall pleasant memories to those familiar with this school-room, and give to others a fair idea of its general aspect.

Within a quarter of a century this building became too small for the needs of the School, and rooms had to be procured outside for the boys who flocked to it from year to year; necessary repairs were delayed or neglected until it became positively unsafe for occupancy, and at last, in 1880, a new building was erected on Warren Avenue to which, in 1881, the School was removed.

On the morning of the 13th of September, 1881, there appeared in the Boston Daily Advertiser an article of which we give a part as follows:—

* D of the Massachusetts 12th, or Webster Regiment, commanded by Col. Fletcher Webster, of our Class of 1824, of which Nathaniel B. Shurtleff, Jr., of our Class of 1850, was the captain.

HALL OF THE BEDFORD STREET SCHOOL HOUSE.
FROM HARPER'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE, BY PERMISSION.

At four o'clock this afternoon the old School-house on Bedford Street will be opened for a farewell glimpse from the teachers and scholars who cherish such abiding memories of the hours passed within its walls. To-morrow it will be sold for removal, and its demolition will follow immediately, to make way for the extension of Harrison Avenue.

Before 1844 the Latin School's latest abode was on the site of the wing of the Parker House, near Chapman Place, and the English High School was on Pinckney Street at the corner of Anderson, where the Phillips School now is. Records of school history of those days read in spirit very much like those of recent years in regard to the Bedford Street School-house. They were too small for the constantly increasing number of pupils; they were inconvenient; they were not well adapted to their uses; the land on which they stood (particularly the Latin School) was valuable for business purposes. So the change was made. May 1, 1843, a report to the City Government was made by a committee appointed to examine into the need of a new School-house and "the feasibility of erecting one." It was signed by M. Brimmer, Chairman, and as a consequence of its recommendations an order was passed by the city government for the purchase of lands for the erection of a School-house near the western boundary of Ward 10, as the wards then lay. The total expense was not to exceed $21,000, and the existing Latin School-house was ordered to be sold to help defray the expense. This appears to have been allowed in addition to the original appropriation. The latter was afterward increased by $4000, so the fund for the new Bedford Street building stood like this: Appropriation, $25,000; proceeds from the sale of the Latin School-house, $8,000; interest, $3,000; total, $37,000. The account of expenditure was: Cost of land (12,980 feet), $26,486; cost of building, $10,642.90; total, $37,128.90—thus overrunning the allowance a trifle. In a few years the house was crowded too much for convenience, and in 1861 a new story was added. Since then it has stood till the continued pressure upon its accommodations and the gradual removal of population further south, led to the purchase of the site of the present magnificent structure on Warren Avenue and Montgomery Street, the bargain being concluded in binding shape on the very day of the great fire, a few hours before the flames broke out.

In the way of reminiscence about the old building and the Schools and teachers within it, the field is almost limitless. . . . Details as to the management of the School, as to the committees who have planned its success, and as to its growth and adaptation to the widening educational ideas of the time, would be a long record, better left to the recollection of the scholars of by-gone days. Doubtless many will improve their opportunity for a farewell visit this afternoon.

The present building, on Warren Avenue, which has been described as "the largest structure in America devoted to educational purposes, and the largest in the world used as a free public school," is in a modern Renaissance style, of brick, with the lines of strength treated architecturally in stone, and intended to be fire-proof. It was begun in 1877, and finished in November, 1880. The Dartmouth Street front, which is intended to be occupied by the School Board, is not to be completed at present. Without it, the building is 339 feet long and 220 feet wide.

The structure is three stories high, with a basement, and is designed after the German plan of the hollow square with corridors following its outlines. The walls of the corridors are of brick, making fire-proof sections. The width of the whole building is simply the width of a room and its corridor, thus insuring the best light and ventilation. The staircases are of iron, and to each building there is a tower with a winding staircase, providing an extra means of egress. Each School is furnished with a large exhibition hall, arranged as an amphitheatre 62 by 82 feet and 25 feet high, as well as an ample room for drawing, suitably lighted from above. The whole interior is finished in pine.

Since the war of the Rebellion, instruction in military drill has been given in this as in other high schools in the city. Opinions will differ about the wisdom of thus introducing the study of arms among the elements of a liberal education; but great attention has been paid to it, with, it is claimed, very satisfactory results, and there is no disposition at present to discontinue it. In the new building the rooms best adapted to their purpose, and finished with the most care and attention to detail, are the large drill-hall and gymnasium for the common use of both Schools, by which, as well as the corridor, they are connected. The drill-hall is a grand feature. It is 130 feet long by 50 wide, and 30 feet high, and is on the street-level, with entrances from Warren Avenue and Montgomery Street and the court-yards. The floor is of thick plank, calked like a ship's deck, and laid upon solid concrete. The hall is large enough to accommodate the whole school battalion when at drill. With its galleries it could seat 3,000 persons. Like the gymnasium above, of the same size, it is finished in natural materials, and treated so as to get a structural effect of open timber-work, the wood being hard pine, finished in shellac and varnished; the walls of Philadelphia bricks, laid in bright red mortar, and trimmed with sandstone.

The building surrounds two large courts, used as playgrounds by the pupils. The easterly half, facing Montgomery Street, is occupied by the English High School, a transverse corridor connecting the two, whilst the recitation rooms, twenty-four in number, for each School, are reached by longitudinal corridors running north and south. The main entrance of the Latin School is on Warren Avenue. After entering the building, one sees on either side of this, a mural tablet bearing the names of those graduates of the School who fought in the war for the Union and returned to enjoy the fruits of their patriotism; while directly opposite, at the junction of the transverse and long corridors is the beautiful statue, by Greenough, which formerly stood in the Hall of the Bedford Street building, of the Alma Mater of the School, reclining upon a shield, on which the names of the dead heroes are inscribed. On either side of the transverse corridor, on the first floor, are the following apartments for each school: The janitor's room, a reception room for parents or other visitors, a teachers' room answering to the faculty room in a university, the Head Master's room and a library. These rooms are furnished with every modern convenience, the reception rooms being in direct communication through call bells with every teacher's room in the building.

On the second floor, and leading from the transverse corridor, are the janitor's bed-room, kitchen and parlor, and a large lecture room, accommodating nearly 200 students, and opening into a cabinet of natural history, from which the lecturer on zoology or botany may take the specimens with which to illustrate his lecture. On the same floor, but leading from the long corridor, is a laboratory for the study of physics and chemistry.

On the third floor are the rooms for drawing and the Exhibition Halls of the Schools. The latter have seats for over 800 persons in each hall, besides a broad platform which can accommodate many more. Upon the walls of the Exhibition Hall are hung the portraits of former Masters, and a few of those pupils who distinguished themselves in our late war.

The recitation rooms average twenty-five feet by thirty, are provided with thirty-six desks—this number is never exceeded, and often one desk is taken out—and a neat bookcase opposite the teacher's desk. Each room is heated not directly from the furnace, but by the process of indirect radiation, the pure air from outside becoming heated by passing over coils of heated wire—a process which eliminates the possibility of a particle of coal-gas finding its way into the school-room. There are besides, ventilators above and below, which draw away the impure air. In addition to these devices there are toplights over the windows which can be opened or closed at pleasure.

Each room is provided with an electric clock, and with eighteen closets about three feet high, which are partitioned off for the boys' hats and coats. After this part of the work was done, the objection was made that the boys' coats, if folded and placed in these closets when wet, would dry very imperfectly, and not without receiving serious injury, and though at first it was disregarded, coat stands were subsequently placed in the long corridors in each School.

The building was occupied early in 1881, but was not formally dedicated until the 22nd of February of that year, when, in the presence of a crowded assembly, consisting of more than three thousand people, filling the large Drill Hall to its utmost capacity, distinguished speakers representing both the Latin and the English High Schools gave interesting addresses, which, together with a full and detailed description of the building, have been published in a pamphlet by the School Committee, from which we extract such as were made by representatives of our School:

A temporary platform, elegantly draped, was erected on the easterly side, in front of the cavalry entrance from Clarendon Street to the magnificent hall, while numerous portraits of past Head-Masters of the two Schools adorned the walls, and the Stars and Stripes hung in festoons in front of the balconies.

Gen. Thomas Sherwin was in charge of the Hall, as marshal assisted by the Officers of the Latin and English High School Battalions, and the exercises were conducted in accordance with the following

After the invocation had been offered by the Rev. William Burnet Wright, Pastor of the Berkeley Street Church, Alderman Woolley, Chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings of the City Government, with a few appropriate remarks, delivered the keys to His Honor Mayor Prince, as President of the School Board, who, after receiving them, replied as follows:—

ADDRESS OF MAYOR PRINCE.

Mr. Chairman:—In behalf of the School Committee, I accept from you, as the representative of the City Government, these keys in token of the delivery of possession of this building, erected for the accommodation of the Boston Latin and English High Schools, and its consecration to the purposes of public education. In appropriating the large sum, more than three-quarters of a million of dollars, required for the purchase of land and construction, the citizens have shown their ancient and traditional interest in the cause of free schools. By the laws of the Commonwealth this structure now passes from the control of the city to that of the Board of School Committee; and we of this Board and our successors in office, must watch well that the great trust thus reposed in us is faithfully executed, so that the objects for which this costly temple was erected may be successfully accomplished. Believing that the committee fully appreciate their responsibilities in the premises, and that the accomplished teachers who will minister here fully recognize the importance of their work, I have confidence that these great schools will now enter upon a new career of enlarged usefulness, so that they will not only benefit our own citizens but the people of the whole Commonwealth. If such results are realized, the building of this edifice was inspired by policy and wisdom.

The formal ceremonies of this dedication require me to deliver these keys to the Chairman of the Committee on High Schools, and this accomplished, my duties at this time are performed. Before making this delivery, I wish to say a few words touching these Schools, which their importance and the proprieties of the occasion seem to demand. Both of these Schools are venerable, not only for their great age, but for their great success in accomplishing the objects of their organization. They both antedate our existence as a city. The Latin School was established in 1635, the English High School in 1821. As there is a vast disparity in their ages, we cannot say that they are ambo aequales aetatibus, but we may affirm that they are

Arcades ambo,
Et cantare pares et respondere parati.

It may be said that the Latin School was brought here by Governor Winthrop and the Puritan colonists, in 1630, for their first thought, after establishing a church was to organize a school. They built their religious, educational, and political institutions on foundations of rock; for the First Church still lives as with immortal youth; the First School—our Latin School—still flourishes with no sign of decrepitude or decay; and the political dogma to which we owe our existence as a nation—that taxation and representation are inseparable—enunciated by the liberty-loving emigrants more than a hundred years before the Great Declaration of the United Colonies, is to-day the corner-stone of our glorious Constitution. It is not strange that the education of the people was the early care of the colonists. The number of learned men among them was most extraordinary, when we consider the character of those who generally settle a new country. It has been said—and, I believe, truly said—that between 1630 and 1690 there were in New England as many graduates of Cambridge and Oxford as could be found in any population of the same size in the mother country. Mr. Savage, in his history of New England, asserts that during the first part of that period there was in Massachusetts and Connecticut a Cambridge graduate for every two hundred and fifty inhabitants, “besides sons of Oxford not a few.” “Probably,” says the historian of American Literature, "no other community of pioneers ever so honored study, so revered the symbols of learning; theirs was a social structure, with its corner-stone resting on a book. Universal education seemed to them a universal necessity, and they promptly provided for it in all its grades."

They declared in their laws that it was "barbarous" not to be able perfectly to read the English tongue, and to know the general laws. They went further, and declared that "skill in the tongues and liberal arts is not only laudable, but necessary for the well-being of the Commonwealth."

Their zeal in this respect was well shown by their action touching Michael Powell, the ruling elder of the Second Church of Boston. There had been considerable difficulty in getting a minister to take charge of this congregation, and for a few years Mr. Powell conducted the worship, and so satisfactorily that he would have been ordained teacher, had not the General Court interfered and declared that it "would not suffer one that was illiterate, as to academical education, to be called to the teaching office in such a place as Boston." Mr. Powell "was a man of sense and good character, and the objection to him was not that he was a layman, but that he was wanting in learning."

The public sentiment in respect to universal education was so strong as to induce the passage of laws for its accomplishment, and as early as the year 1649 every New England colony except Rhode Island made public instruction compulsory by law. Every town containing fifty householders was required to support a school for reading and writing, and every town containing one hundred householders a grammar school, with a teacher competent "to fit youths for the university."

They did this not only—to quote from the old law that—"learning might not be buried in the graves of our fathers," but that they might baffle that "ould deluder Sathan," whose one chief project is "to keep men from the knowledge of the Scriptures, by persuading them from the use of tongues."

As the historian Tyler well remarks, "only six years after John Winthrop's arrival in Salem harbor, the people of Massachusetts took from their own treasury the funds with which to found a university; so that while the tree-stumps were as yet scarcely weather-browned in their earliest harvest-fields, and before the nightly howl of the wolf had ceased from the outskirts of their villages, they had made arrangements by which even in that wilderness their young men could at once enter upon the study of Aristotle and Thucydides, of Horace, and Tacitus, and the Hebrew Bible."

We can appreciate the public solicitude for learning when we recall the noble declaration of the high-spirited New England matron to her son: "Child, if God make thee a good Christian and a good scholar thou hast all that thy mother ever asked of thee."

Epitaphs are often true expressions of popular sentiment. On the tombstone of a young and promising minister who early died here was inscribed—beneath the hic jacet: "The ashes of a hard student, a good scholar, and a great Christian."

But the early Puritans were not solicitous in respect to education merely from "the love they bore to learning," nor for the sole reasons set forth in the legislation to which I have referred. Those of them who were deep thinkers and studied the future, saw another value in popular intelligence. They had been driven from the fatherland into emigration by the persecution of the English hierarchy, and were convinced that the English government in their treatment of Dissenters would always reflect the intolerance of the English Church. They therefore felt that the time would come—and, perhaps, ere long, when they or their posterity would be compelled to establish an independent government for the attainment and maintenance of the great objects which prompted their emigration,—civil and religious liberty. The shadow of coming events was seen as early as 1633,—three years after their landing here,—when the stout-hearted and irrepressible Roger Williams asserted the novel but prolific doctrine "that the people were the origin of all power in the government." This political truth, fermenting in the public mind, generalized a vast amount of speculation upon the natural rights of man, and the elementary principles of the social compact. It evoked new theories in respect to the nature of government, and evolved new views of the powers and rights of the people. The colonists soon began to recognize the great truth—now regarded, wherever there is constitutional liberty, as axiomatic—that government is merely the agent of the people for the management of their political affairs, and the enforcement of those fundamental rules and principles which are necessary for the protection of the rights of the members of the body politic and the maintenance of social order; that such agent, like all agents, is responsible to its constituents for the way it executes its delegated powers, and that it can be dismissed from office when the latter shall think it for their interest to exercise the right of doing so.

But it was obvious to those far-seeing men that no such government could be established or successfully maintained if the requisite conditions were wanting; that it was absurd to expect that there could be free institutions unless there were intelligent citizens; that ignorance was incompatible with liberty. They felt, in the eloquent words of the committee who recommended in after years the establishment of the English High School, "that to preserve tranquillity and order in a community, perpetuate the blessings of society and free government, and promote the happiness and prosperity of the people, there must be a general diffusion of knowledge."

Free public education was, therefore, made an important object of political care and State policy, and the most generous provision for its support early and unceasingly made. Liberal as our citizens are to-day in their appropriations for the cause of popular education, they give no more—perhaps not so much—as the colonists six years after their landing, when the subscription towards the maintenance of a schoolmaster was circulated, headed by "the Governor, Mr. Henry Vane, Esq.," for ten pounds, and Deputy Governor John Winthrop, and Richard Bellingham, each for the same sum; forty-two others of that poor, God-fearing, but letters-loving community subscribing according to their ability. Our Puritan ancestors felt with the great Roman statesman and philosopher, that we cannot confer a greater benefit upon our country than by instructing and giving a proper direction to the minds of our youth. Quid munus Reipublicae majus—meliusve afferre possumus—quam si juventutem docemus et bene erudimus?

The first school, as I have observed, was gathered in 1635, as soon after the arrival of the emigrants as there were probably children to teach, when, to quote the record, they "entreated brother Philemon Pormort to become school-master for the teaching and nurturing of children with us."

There is some reason to doubt whether brother Philemon ever consented to serve as schoolmaster, so that it may be claimed that he was the first teacher of this ancient school. The records say that the Rev. Daniel Maude was "also chosen" to the office of school-master in August, 1636, and it appears that when the Rev. John Wheelwright was banished in 1637 for heterodoxy on certain doctrinal points, among those who went away with him was brother Philemon; so that if he ever taught this School it was only for a few months.

I have never seen the course of study adopted at the organization of the first school, but it would seem that the higher branches, and not merely elementary instruction were taught from the start. We know that Latin was taught, because some of the pupils knew it; hence the inference that the first school from its establishment was a Latin School.

I have never seen any reliable description of the School-house where this first school was located; but it was not probably more elegant or more imposing in its architecture than the first church, which had mud walls and a thatched roof. It was situated in School Street, very near the spot, if not on it, where the statue of Franklin now stands; so that the location of that memorial of the great philosopher and constant advocate of popular education, on the site where he received his first instruction, was appropriately chosen. All places hallowed by sacred associations will be regarded by the cultivated and refined with sentiments of reverence, and the desire to protect them from uses degrading to the religio loci naturally obtains. The alumni, therefore, must be gratified to know that the statue of the great man guards the original and natal location of the old School.

Although the two original buildings consecrated to religion and education were thus humble, yet as the years went by and the material prosperity of the country increased, better structures were erected for the accommodation of both church and school. We know that the former was removed from its first site in State Street to Washington street, where Joy's* Building now stands, thence to Chauncy Street, and thence to the beautiful temple on Berkeley Street. We know that the latter was removed from its original location to that opposite on the same street, now occupied by a part of Parker's Hotel; that afterward it was removed to Bedford Street, and then to this magnificent edifice. But we do not know, nor can we determine with the same certainty, what has been the influence of this first church and first school, during their long existence, on this community. We may safely say, however, that to their teachings the people of Boston largely owe the moral, religious, and intellectual culture which has so greatly distinguished them in all their history—ab urbe condita—that to these they owe the formation of that solidity of character which has ever made them the earnest advocates of the principles of civil and religious liberty—the leaders in every social and political reform, and the friends of every measure for the elevation of man and the promotion of civilization. We are indebted to these teachings for the great influence we had in establishing the independence of the colonies, and in shaping the character and policy of the government in the early days of the Republic. We are indebted to these teachings for much of our wonderful municipal prosperity.

We find evidence of the successful work of the Latin School, in its early history, in the fact that it was able, with the Grammar School on Bennett Street, and three writing-schools, to instruct all the youth of Boston previous to the Revolution. At that time they accommodated about nine hundred scholars. We find evidence of the success of the School in subsequent years in the large number of its distinguished alumni who attained eminence in the arts and sciences, in law, medicine, and theology, and in the mercantile, manufacturing, and mechanical professions.

For many years most of the young men were here prepared for admission to Harvard College, so that during its long existence it has well discharged the objects set forth in the law under which it was established, “to fit youths for the university,” and I think that it has been generally found that the graduates of this School were as well if not better fitted than those of other schools.

This institution has been fortunate in all its history in being under the care of able teachers—teachers who were not only eminent for learning and culture, but for their comprehension of instruction as an art and their capacity to teach. Many of them have been highly distinguished as successful educators. Under the charge of the accomplished scholar who is now the Principal of this School we may indulge the confident expectation that its character and reputation will be maintained in the future.

The English High School had its origin in the want that was felt in the early part of this century for a school where those who had not the wish, or were without the means, to obtain a collegiate education, might receive instruction in some of the branches of practical importance, generally taught only at colleges. The Latin School, as has been stated, had for its chief purpose the fitting of boys for the university.

These schools have occupied the same building in Bedford Street for nearly forty years. We now dedicate to their joint use this beautiful structure. May they continue to occupy it in harmony and prosperity as long as mundane things are permitted to endure.

This day is memorable and dear to our citizens and to all Americans as the natal anniversary of the Father of his country. I invoke the blessings of his spirit on these two institutions, that they may not only instill into our youth the desire for intellectual and moral truth, so as to lead them through the pursuits of knowledge, to cultivate, as Tully has well said, in our mortal life the pursuits of heaven, but may also inculcate the spirit of a lofty patriotism, that there may be always here, where Washington first drew his sword in the cause of civil liberty, those who will make every sacrifice for its defence.

Mr. Chairman of the Committee on High Schools, I now conclude the part assigned to me in this dedication by delivering you these keys. I do so with great pleasure, being well assured that you and your committee will faithfully administer the supervisory powers in respect to these schools delegated to you by the Board.

RESPONSE OF CHARLES L. FLINT, ESQ.

Mr. Mayor:—In behalf of the Committee on High Schools, I accept the trust of which these keys are a fitting recognition. Let me express the profound satisfaction of the committee with the completion of the plans for the accommodation of the great schools which are to occupy this house. These schools have labored for years under the most trying disadvantages, with classes scattered about at considerable distance from the main building, and under circumstances which made it impossible to do the best work, or work which was satisfactory to the teachers themselves. That they have been able to maintain their popularity, under such conditions, and even to grow in efficiency and usefulness, is due chiefly to the extraordinary good fortune of the committee in securing and retaining a corps of instructors in both schools unsurpassed for ability, and devoted heart and soul to the work they were called upon to do.

The schools were never, we believe, in a stronger position than they are now. They were never in a condition to do better work. With the facilities which this building will afford, when our rooms are furnished, as I have no doubt they will be, with suitable chemical, physical and philosophical apparatus, the appliances which science and mechanical skill have devised, we shall be recreant to our duty if we fail to impart a training which will fit the young to enter upon the activities of life with all the conditions requisite to success, so far as they depend on instruction in the public schools.

We wish to express our grateful acknowledgments to you, sir, and to the City Government, for the munificent liberality that has provided so generously for the wants of these schools, and to the Committee and the Superintendent of Public Buildings, and especially to the City Architect for his admirable and thoughtful designs for the comfort and convenience of teachers and pupils. It may be easy to suggest improvements and to find fault with defects when the work is done, but, take it all in all, we believe it to be the grandest and most complete school-house in this country, if not in the world. We thank you all, sir, for the excellent way in which the work has been done. It is a monument, noble in its designs, magnificent in its proportions, and fit to commemorate the wise and far-seeing liberality of our citizens.

The committee. I am sure, feel a deep sense of responsibility to the citizens who maintain these schools, and to the parents whose sons are to be taught here. Let us have your considerate co-operation, your generous confidence, and your hearty support, and we will make these schools not only the pride of every citizen, but the crowning glory of the free public school system of Boston.

Mr. Merrill, Head-Master of the Public Latin School: I have the honor, on behalf of the committee, to entrust these keys to you. They are the symbols of your authority. Since the committee called you to the honorable and responsible position at the head of this great School, they have watched you day by day, with increasing confidence in your ability, in your scholarship, and in your practical sagacity. When you entered upon your duties, four years ago, the school had suffered from a variety of causes. Its general tone and its discipline were low, and it failed to command the entire confidence of the School Board, or of the community. I state what I know from my own experience when I say it was a source of great anxiety to the committee in charge. You have revolutionized it in these respects, and you are fairly entitled to the credit of it. The Latin School was never in a better condition, so far as its general tone and spirit are concerned, than it is to-day. I do not believe its corps of teachers was ever so exceptionally strong and efficient at any one time in the past, or so united in their efforts to do the best possible work for the credit and the reputation of the school itself.

You are at the head of the oldest free public school in this country. It was the work of men struggling with the hardships and the gloomy isolation of colonial life, but determined, let what would come, that learning should not be buried in the graves of their fathers. If there ever was a case where men builded better than they knew, it was that of the early fathers of New England, when they started to embody in a material and practical form the declaration of their great spiritual leader, "that government, as the natural guardian of all the young, has the right to compel the people to support schools." They applied that principle for the first time here, in the establishment of this school, only five years after the settlement of this place, and while the little colony was still hanging almost on the verge of despair.

The history of the School, therefore, dates back to the early infancy of the colony of the Massachusetts Bay, to a period anterior to the founding of Harvard College, and for a hundred years or more it was regarded as "the principal school of all the colonies, if not in all America." It is, as we all know, a preparatory school. It has always been regarded as such, and as such in times past it gained a high and well-earned reputation as the most efficient institution in the country, nobly and honorably accomplishing its mission, and proving itself to be a priceless blessing to this community.

But though somewhat venerable with age, there is still abundant room for growth. The standard of scholarship required for admission to our colleges is constantly advancing, so that we shall be obliged constantly to produce better results, and forced not only to do more work, but to raise the standard of admission to the higher classes. To make such changes as may be needed from time to time in the course of studies, to keep the School in the line of growth and progress so as to accomplish the highest results, will require constant watchfulness, consummate skill, and an untiring devotion. The committee, I need not say, will give you all the aid in their power, and will cordially co-operate with you in your efforts to maintain the ancient renown of an institution which was for many years regarded as by far the best preparatory school in all America.

RESPONSE OF HEAD-MASTER MOSES MERRILL.

Mr. Chairman:—In receiving these keys from your hands, we are reminded of the obligations resting upon us as instructors of youth. We trust that this responsibility is never lost sight of. But it is well to call attention at times to the services demanded of us and to the trust reposed in us, lest we may forget that the influence of our work here is far-reaching, boundless as eternity itself.

The vocation of teaching is subordinate to that calling alone which devotes itself to the interests of the soul. Our fathers associated the two; they felt that erudition in theological lore was an essential qualification for teaching the young, especially in the higher institutions of learning. This sentiment has not altogether disappeared, though the occupations are now, practically, distinct. A different course of study and a different kind of instruction are necessary for a suitable preparation for teaching. Still, the minister of the Gospel is, as he ever has been, an earnest advocate of mental culture; he believes in an intelligent piety. On the other hand, the teacher, if true to his profession, will have regard for the moral and spiritual nature of his pupils. On the union of this moral and mental culture depend the broadest development of man's character, his own well-being, the purity of society, and the security and perpetuity of our free institutions.

Therefore, may the pupils of this School ever obey the precepts of Divine revelation in their widest meaning, as given to us in the Proverbs of Solomon: "Get wisdom; get understanding; forget it not, neither decline from the words of my mouth; forsake her not and she shall preserve thee; love her, and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting, get understanding. Exalt her and she shall promote thee; she shall bring thee to honor when thou dost embrace her. She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace, and a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee."

You have been kind enough, Mr. Chairman, on various occasions, to speak approvingly of the condition of the School since it has been entrusted to my care. Your words to-day, accord to me, I fear, more credit than I deserve. I wish to confirm all you have said in praise of my associates, and to assure you that we are greatly indebted to them for whatever success, in your judgment, we have attained. We also wish to thank you, sir, as well as your colleagues and the parents of the pupils, for your prompt and hearty support in promoting the welfare of the School. But all efforts of teachers avail not to make a school successful, unless they have the sympathy and willing obedience of their pupils. This state of things appears to exist. As our boys advance through their respective classes from year to year, and reach the first class,—the sixth form, in which Dr. Arnold placed the hope and the confidence of his school-work,—we see them putting off childish things, and the senseless frivolities of early youth, and becoming manly and honorable, appreciative and generous in their feelings. Such a class, a fit representative of previous classes, we can present to you to-day. Be assured that so long as this continues, you need have no anxiety about the order and well-being of the School.

Two hundred and forty-six years ago the residents of the infant colony of Massachusetts established this School “for the teaching and nourishing of children with us.” We have no historical statement of the fact, except possibly that which the Mayor has given us to-day, but it is reasonable to suppose that the first Governor of the colony gave the measure his hearty support. It would be incongruous to suppose otherwise. He was an educated man, and we know that he was an ardent supporter of public education in his adopted home. Could he have looked through the vista of coming centuries, and seen the development of his hazardous experiment into the metropolis of to-day, with its teeming population, with its vast industrial interests, with its churches and schools, and the distinction of its citizens, especially those bearing his own name, he might have exclaimed, in the words of Anchises, as he beheld from the abodes of bliss, in prophetic vision, the glory of Rome, the mistress of the world, in the golden age of Augustan power and literature:—

Illustris animas, nostrumque in nomen ituras.

It is eminently fitting that we should have with us to-day the chief magistrate of the Commonwealth, to ratify and confirm the act of his great predecessor, to give dignity and impressiveness to these exercises by the weight of his official position and his personal character. It is also a fortunate circumstance that, among the prominent graduates of our School, we have here to-day a lineal descendant of the first Governor, a fellow-citizen whom we delight to honor, himself an alumnus of the School, whose presence and utterances will prove a benediction, who, in the fullness of years and wisdom, will give us, in his own eloquent way, words of counsel and encouragement.

We have assembled to-day to dedicate this building to the moral and mental culture of our youth, the highest purposes to which it could be devoted save the promulgation of the Gospel of the Saviour of mankind. But let us remember that this is not exclusively our own gift: it is a legacy we have received from our fathers. We have taken this legacy, added to it, enlarged it by generous offerings, and adapted it to the needs of our day and generation. Let there be no complaints, no regrets. Let us transmit this offering to our children with the same generous impulses and noble aims as our fathers transmitted it to us. May it do as much for them as it has done for us. In their turn they will take the legacy, when it is no longer suitable for them in the form in which we present it, enlarge it, and transmit it to generations farther on. Therefore, all honor to those who have had anything to do, from the beginning to the end, with this public benefaction.

The aims of the two schools occupying the building are different. Cicero says: "Omnes artes, quae ad humanitatem pertinent habent quoddam commune vinculum et cognatione quadam inter se continentur." This involves a principle in education as true to-day as when these words were uttered. The following version, nearly a literal translation, answers our present purpose: "All branches of knowledge which tend to the cultivation and refinement of the mind have a common bond of union and a certain close relationship to one another." The more one knows the better. But no mind can grasp all knowledge. A selection must be made. We think we have the best selection on our side; they think they have the best on the other side. But there need be no quarrel. The two schools will occupy the building in peace, in the spirit of an admission recently made by an eminent scientist in England, Prof. Huxley, who said: "I am the last person to question the importance of genuine literary education, or to suppose that intellectual culture can be complete without it. An exclusively scientific training will bring about a mental twist as surely as an exclusively literary training."

In the spirit of this partial concession to the advantage of linguistic studies, these schools will meet the wants of our people. There is enough of the literary element in the one, and enough of the scientific element in the other, to save each from the charge of exclusiveness.

I need enter upon no eulogy of the work of the English High School. Its results have been conspicuous. Among its graduates, eminent in the various callings of life, some to-day will tell what it has done for them and for their fellow-students.

The Latin School, let us hope, in days to come as in days past, will lay a broad foundation for intellectual development, which will be but the beginning of a long course of study, culminating in the learned professions or in other positions equally important and influential, bringing credit to the School, to the pupils themselves, honor to their native city, strength and renown to the Commonwealth and to the nation.

After a brief address to the Master of the English High School, and a response from Mr. Waterhouse, Mr. Flint, turning to the audience, then resumed:—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—It would obviously be improper for me to detain you many moments from the sequel to these formal ceremonies. I am well aware that this is a day of congratulation rather than of suggestion, and yet there is one thought, not new by any means, but worthy of frequent repetition, that I wish I could impress upon the minds of the parents of our boys. It is that, taking our community as a whole, we are too much inclined to rely upon fine school-houses, upon accomplished teachers, and upon elaborate and costly appliances for instruction. All these are important, to be sure, and by no means to be overlooked, but every teacher, and every active member of a committee must realize and appreciate the far greater importance of wise parental discipline and sound instruction at home.

Our schools and colleges can do much, but they cannot do all. They ought to be regarded merely as supplementary to the more important influences of the home. We must not confound instruction with education. The teachers of our public schools can have their pupils, at the most, but five hours a day, and that time must be given chiefly to instruction, so that most of the influences which go to build up a noble and finished character must come from parents at home. If we would have an Eton or a Rugby, we must comply with the conditions which such schools impose. We must give up our boys to the more complete control of competent teachers.

The boys of our cities are far too apt to rely upon outside influences for growth and mental development. They are not sufficiently self-reliant. They are not so self-reliant as boys brought up in the country, and for obvious reasons. They seem to wait to be taught, to have knowledge poured into them as it were,—as if their minds were mere storehouses, when they ought to be workshops.

Now, there is no plainer axiom than this, that the mind grows only by its own action. We cannot travel by railway from ignorance to knowledge. The way through mental discipline to a high standard of intellectual culture is as slow and laborious now as it ever was. The school and the college can aid by giving direction, but they cannot supply a lack of mental force. They must rely upon home influences to stimulate ambition, to infuse energy, to kindle enthusiasm, and to create a love for the work of the School.

Now, what you and what I can do, to a certain extent, is just this: We can stimulate mental activity in our boys. We can do something to encourage them to greater self-reliance. We can impress upon them constantly the idea that they must work out their own salvation; that whatever we may do for them, whatever teachers and schools and books may do for them, will amount to very little unless they learn to rely upon themselves. There can be no strong, stalwart, well-developed manhood that is obliged all the time to lean on something outside of itself for support, and a true education ought to fit a man to meet emergencies, to fight the battle of life manfully, and to crown it with victory.

The choir then sang the beautiful "Hymn to Liberty."

The CHAIRMAN.—We are fortunate in having with us to-day the Chief Magistrate of a Commonwealth that was the first to put upon its Statute Book an act "to provide for the instruction of youth and for the promotion of good education." An act so remarkable for felicity of expression as to amount almost to fervid eloquence was passed by the Legislature of 1789, and it is so short that I am sure you will pardon me for reading a single section of it. It was enacted:—

"That it shall be, and it is hereby made the duty of the President, professors, and tutors of the University at Cambridge, preceptors and teachers of academies, and all other instructors of youth to take diligent care and to exert their best endeavors to impress on the minds of children and youth committed to their care and instruction, the principles of piety, justice, and a sacred regard to truth, love of their country, humanity and universal benevolence, sobriety, industry and frugality, chastity, moderation and temperance, and those virtues which are the ornament of human society, and the basis upon which the republican constitution is structured. And it shall be the duty of such instructors to endeavor to lead those under their care (as their ages and capacities will admit) into a particular understanding of the tendency of the before-mentioned virtues, to preserve and perfect a republican constitution and to secure the blessings of liberty, as well as to promote their future happiness, and the tendency of the opposite vices to slavery and ruin."

It is the spirit of this remarkable act, embodying, as it does, the very elements of popular education and civil liberty which had been worked out by the experience of the early fathers; breathing, as it does, in every line, the loftiest sentiments, and appealing to all men of culture and sound principles to stand round and support and elevate the standard of popular education,—it is the spirit of this act that has pervaded and directed our system of free public schools from its passage, more than ninety years ago, down to the present hour. I have the honor to introduce to you His Excellency, Governor LONG.

ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR LONG.

The enactment which you have just read, Mr. Chairman, lacks something of conciseness, and, if you will pardon me, of entire felicity of expression. But, in its spirit, it well emphasizes the demand of Massachusetts that her children shall be instructed not only in studies that make the mind acute and strong, but in the good morals which lie at the foundation of character and of the State. Most sincerely, while bringing to the dedication on Washington's birthday of this new temple of learning, so spacious and elegant, the good words and wishes of the Commonwealth, do I trust that, in conformity with her spirit and statutes, its teaching shall be the truth, its inspiration shall be humanity, and its fruit the citizen free and true. And let us not forget that it is not the munificent gift of some princely magnate, but the more munificent self-imposed contribution of the body of the people.

As a part of the great educational system, which from the first the Commonwealth has fostered, these two noble schools belong to Massachusetts. The Latin School dates its beginning almost with that of the Colony.

It foreran Harvard College. Among its teachers, at the opening of the Revolution, it saw the older Lovell, a Tory refugee, and the younger, a flaming patriot, at the side of those Massachusetts heroes, Hancock and Adams. And, to-day, I see its scholars standing before me in the uniform of the State militia. It is the General Court that, under the lead of a gallant young colonel of my staff [Colonel Higginson], is authorizing their instruction in military drill. And yet, as I behold their gun barrels ranged around these walls, I am glad to see that their arms yield place to the citizen's gown. The Latin School has been not more a nursery of classical learning than of a better than classical love of country. Within these walls the sculptured marble weeps over the record of its patriot martyrs. The names that have won Massachusetts most glory for statesmanship, eloquence, letters, the pulpit, and all well-doing, are, many of them, written on its rolls. If it could be typified in some life-like form, holding in its grasp not a spear but a book, surmounted not by a helmet but by a scholar's cap, it would well represent our Massachusetts common schools and stand as the American Palladium, its eyes flashing fire at any desecrating touch, conscious that upon its preservation forever depends the safety of the Republic.

Amid all this architectural vastness and convenience how the imagination tries to picture the homely shed that once stood in the rear of King's Chapel! The successive steps of the Latin School from house to house, wide as is the divergence from the first to the last, are, however, only in keeping with the marvellous growth of the city and the Commonwealth. Whether the cause of good learning has kept pace with the enlargement of its temples and with the increase in the number of its votaries is not so certain. One might doubt it in the presence of Winthrop, who sits here a graduate of this School, his vigor unimpaired, chosen out from more than fifty millions of people, not more for his great ancestral name than for his scholarship here first acquired, to be the orator of the next great centennial of the American Republic. One might doubt it, too, in the presence of Emerson, that other graduate who is also here, and who is indeed wherever education and the culture of the soul refine the air through which the spirit springs to heaven. Be it remembered that the one object of education, forever and now, is not to make the mind a storehouse full-crammed, not to dissipate it in the shattering endeavor to grasp all knowledge, but to enable a man, whatever his faculties or resources, to command, to use, to apply them to the full,—if he lift a hammer, to strike the nail on the head,—if he cleave a log, to strike it in the very centre,—if he argue a cause, to drive straight at the heart and the understanding. Given this ability and the education thus to use and expend his power, and then the storing of the mind and the variety and scope of accomplishment will take care of themselves; even as when a forest spring is put to use and overflows, it is never exhausted, because the whole mountain-side spontaneously bleeds at every vein to keep it full. The difference of one man from another is less in power than in the use of power. Command of words, mastery of language, are not more the distinction of Webster and Burke than of the most brilliant speculator in mining stocks, or of the head man in a New England village.

And yet how painful and pitiful is the daily spectacle of some graduate of our schools, soaked with lessons, who cannot put a thought into words, or a purpose into execution.

But it is not for me to speak of the special topics of education. Whatever in that is best has here always found its opportunity, and, I am sure, here always will find it. Rather, speaking for the Commonwealth, and speaking, too, for myself in connection with a School in which I was once for a few weeks a teacher, I love to recall the exquisite freshness and promise of the scholar's life and progress, the delights of classical learning, the inspiration of the acquirement of knowledge, the growing consciousness of mental grasp and power, though it but blush and tremble at its own first essay at speech or at poem. There is no range so noble, so free, so easy in its access to the rarest communion, as the scholar's. Not by accident is it that rhetoric and poetry and the Greek and Latin classics have been called the "humanities." In one common humanity they link all ages, all times, all conditions. Through these halls, many a boy, perhaps the humblest, a poet in his soul and in his eyes, shall walk with Virgil hand in hand; many a youthful stammering orator have Demosthenes for his master, and many a lover of letters repeat, fresh from Cicero's tongue, his matchless tribute in their praise.

Noblesse oblige! In her poverty Massachusetts gave from her scanty store that learning might not perish. Have no fear or distrust of her generosity. That all her sons might be scholars she has cheerfully borne the heaviest burden upon her labor and her sweat. And nobly hitherto has the scholar responded to the obligation, in his own self-respect, in his loyalty to her, in his patriotism, in his usefulness in the world. May it still be his, going out from beneath this favored roof, with the mantle of three centuries now settling down upon it, to show that, dubbed to grander service than that of ancient knight, the scholar is noblest, not when his attainments, which he owes to the common contribution, lift him aside from his fellow-men, but when they equip and inspire him to mingle with them, to shed among them his own better influence, and to spread abroad—himself an example—those qualities, named in the legislative act of 1789, of piety, justice, regard for truth, love of country, benevolence, industry, moderation and temperance, which are the best "humanities," "which are the ornament of human society, and on which the Republican Constitution is structured."

The CHAIRMAN.—His Excellency has spoken so well for the Commonwealth, as it stands to-day, that we could almost wish we had several other Governors to present to you. We cannot so easily call up the living presence of the first great Governor of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, but he was a reality here two hundred and fifty years ago, full of activity, earnest in all good works, inspiring the settlers with courage and hope when they were brought to the verge of despair, and contributing liberally of his own means to found one of the great schools which are to occupy this grand structure. But we have a descendant in the direct line from him, whose name he bears, and whose voice is always welcome, though too seldom heard in our midst. It gives me pleasure to introduce to you the Hon. ROBERT C. WINTHROP

ADDRESS OF HON. ROBERT C. WINTHROP.

Most willingly, my friends, would I have been excused from the call which has now been made on me,—even at the cost of all the kind compliments by which that call has been preceded and accompanied. And yet I could not quite find it in my heart to be wholly wanting to such an occasion. On this day of all other days,—associated, as it is, and will forever be, with the grandest character in American history, or in any other merely human history,—I am most glad to find myself among those to whom that character should always be held up as their best model, and by whom it should never cease to be revered and venerated.

But I am not here to talk about Washington. Nor do I propose to say anything about Governor Winthrop, to whom so many just and welcome allusions have been made in connection with my own name. Indeed, you will bear me witness, Mr. Chairman, that in accepting your repeated and flattering invitations, I promised to say only a few words; and I trust that I shall not too greatly exceed the measure of my promise. There are, I know, older graduates of the Boston Latin School than myself around me,—Mr. Emerson, to whom you have given so marked and cordial a reception, Mr. Dillaway, so long the Head Master of the School, and my friend, Dr. Lothrop, to name no others. But they will all agree with me, and you will agree with them, that any one who is obliged to turn back nearly threescore years to find his name on the old catalogue, need make no apology for being brief, on this or any other occasion.

I am here, then, ladies and gentlemen, only to manifest my earnest and undying interest in these great public schools of Boston; to renew the assurance of my gratitude as a citizen for all that they have done for our city, for our Commonwealth, and for our whole country; to testify afresh my own personal gratitude for all that one of them did for me, under good Master Gould, so many, many, years ago; and to offer to them both, to their pupils and to their masters, my warmest felicitations on the completion of the noble edifice which they are henceforth privileged to occupy.

The dedication of a massive and magnificent schoolhouse like this—destined, as we hope and trust, not only to outlast all, however young, who are gathered here to-day, but to be the resort of our children and our children's children in a far distant future—is an occasion, I need not say, of most impressive and most suggestive interest. A well-remembered English poet of the last century, in one of his celebrated odes, looked back from a distance on the old towers of Eton, to prefigure and portray some of the varieties of personal experience—prosperous or adverse, joyous or sad—which awaited the young pupils of that famous seminary. And a most dismal and doleful picture he presented of not a few of the little victims, as he styled them, with countless ministers of fate lying in ambush around them, eager to seize and rack and rend them. No such picture of an American school, or of any other school, would be accepted in our day and generation.

It is for us, certainly, as we gather beneath these new towers of our own, to contemplate brighter and more cheering visions of the future. It is for us, to-day, to look forward to a long procession of the children of our beloved city streaming forth, year by year, from these noble halls,—not exempt, indeed, from the trials and casualties of our common lot, or from any of the ills that flesh is heir to, but pressing onward hopefully and bravely, in ever-increasing throngs, to fight the great battle of life, to win happiness and honor for themselves, and to add new strength and new security to those free institutions which can only rest safely on education and intelligence.

I echo the impressive words just uttered by the good Master of the Latin School. May that fear of God which is the beginning of wisdom, and that love of God which casteth out all fear, take possession of their hearts; and may His blessing be on all their worthy efforts, both as boys and as men! But let them never forget that, under God, they are to be the masters of their own fate, and of their own future. It will not be in their stars,—no, nor in their school-houses, however humble, or however grand,—but in themselves, if they are underlings, or if they shall grow up to the stature of the noblest patriotism and public usefulness. There can be no real failure for those who are true to themselves.

The old Latin School—to which I may be pardoned for one more special allusion, as a former pupil—is now taking possession of its fifth local habitation. We can trace it along from its first rude tenement of mud walls and thatched roof, as the Mayor has just described it, to another, and another, and still another, more substantial and commodious structure, until, at last, this grand consummation has been reached. The fifth act opens in triumph, and the old School enters to-day, hand in hand with its accomplished younger sister, upon a far more spacious and splendid theatre. Need I say, need any one tell them, that larger expectations will rightfully be cherished of those who are to enjoy these larger opportunities and advantages? May we not reasonably call on every Boston boy, who enters these wide-spread gates and shining archways, not to allow all the improvements to be confined to the mere material structure, the mere outward shell, but to see to it that the character of the schools shall take on something of the proportions, something of the beauty and grandeur of the building which the city has so sumptuously provided for them; and, still more, to see to it that his own individual character shall not be wanting towards making up the precious mosaic of an institution worthy of such a home and such a history.

I might almost venture to conceive that some one of the young scholars around us at this moment—and more than one—might catch an inspiration from this very scene, and from all its rich associations and utterances, and, recalling that exquisite stanza of Holmes's "Chambered Nautilus," with all its marvellous transmutations and transmigrations, might say to himself, as he retires from these impressive ceremonies :—

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,—
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

Such lines might almost claim a place among the illuminated legends on these walls. Certainly, their sentiment might well be impressed on every young heart which is beating high with the exultations of this hour. I can add nothing to them.

The Chairman then called on the President of the Institute of Technology, Prof. WILLIAM B. ROGERS, who said :—

Mr. Chairman.—You are well aware that it is with no small reluctance that I have consented to appear on this occasion. Bodily infirmities have led to your indulgence now in placing me much before the position proper to me in this celebration. I feel, when I look back, as I cannot help doing, to the past history of these schools, and think of the time when a small gathering of the citizens of the little town of Boston agreed to “entreat Brother Philemon Pormort to become a school-master for the teaching and culture of the young folk around,” and when I look now at what has been accomplished in the course of these two and a half centuries by the intelligence and provident wisdom of the citizens of Boston in the development of these schools, now furnished with such magnificent preparation and accommodation for their instruction, I cannot but think of what may be the question arising as to the progress which has been made in the meantime in that which is most important of all,—the real and substantial education of the youth of Boston and of the Commonwealth. It is certainly true that there has been great progress made in the methods of school-training, of college and university education, as they have been successively developed; but it is not less true that there is a great deal to be done to secure the best fruits of any of these forms of education. It has been admirably well said, since I have been sitting in this audience, that it is not simply in the magnificence of the accommodation, in the beauty and grandeur of the structure, or even in the extent of the appliances for education, that its great benefits are to consist.

I know perfectly well, I think I may say, that there are very few of the youth now before me who would answer to Shakespeare's description of the “whining school-boy, with his satchel and shining morning face, creeping like a snail unwillingly—to school,” excepting in the fact of the “satchel and the shining face,” for now, such are the attractions of our well-organized schools, that the reluctance here referred to, and which has become somewhat classical in our language, is of rare, exceedingly rare, occurrence.

The minds of youth are taught by being educed, by having more or less of those arrangements and agencies brought to bear which help the student to teach himself, and we are learning now that real education does not consist in the accumulation of mere knowledge, as such simply, but in the training of the faculties for the future uses of the man. It has been well said,—and I know that to a large extent this maxim, if I may so call it, has been brought into application in these great schools of Boston,—that intellectual food should go to form mental muscle, and not mental fat. I for one am entirely catholic in my views of education. I believe that mental muscle may be nourished and strengthened by the study of the classical languages, and I know that it can be strengthened to an almost unbounded extent by the study of the laws and agencies of nature. It was said by Hobbes, with only a partial degree of truth, I think, that “words are wise men’s counters: they but reckon by them.” I think that they are more than counters, that they are genuine money. They stand for something which is not only other than words, but wider, grander, and eternal in its character; and that is, they stand for things, for practical agencies, and phenomena, and laws; and upon this basis, and only upon this, can we erect a substantial and enduring education.

We ought, perhaps, for a moment to think of what was the condition of the civilized world at the time that Brother Pormort founded this little School,—the first free school in Massachusetts, the first free school in the United States, for we must remember that Boston was a very insignificant place in the eye of the world at that time; that all the American colonies were but little at that time; that there was no leisure here for the cultivation of Philosophy, or of advancing science; but in the Old World there was an amazing activity in that seventeenth century, from its beginning until its close. Think what an array of great philosophers, great mathematicians and physicists! Think of Galileo, who was then passing his last years a prisoner at Arcetri! Of Spinoza, who was then a lad preparing for the grand work of his logical philosophy! Of Descartes, who was approaching the zenith of his fame! Of Locke, who was just beginning to lisp his mother’s name! And only seven years after, think of the bright illumination that came upon the world in the birth of the illustrious mathematician and astronomer, Sir Isaac Newton! and you have something like a picture of the high condition of intellectual activity and the wondrous advances that were being made by the human mind on the other side of the Atlantic; and I cannot but believe that some of those influences, although they spread very slowly among the masses of mankind, passed across the Atlantic with the Pilgrim Fathers, and had an influence in softening and enlarging that theocratic government, sometimes almost a tyranny, which marked the earliest stages of the Commonwealth. Let us reverence their memory. Let us think only of the grand good which they have achieved,—a good which achieved thus far is only an indication of transcending future good. But while we feel that we are advancing in all departments of knowledge, in philosophy, and in the natural sciences, let us not be too proud. Let us be humble in our exultation, and remember what Carlyle has said, "Science has done much for us, but it is a poor science that hides from us the deep infinitude of nescience." * * *

After an address by Rev. S. K. Lothrop, D. D., for many years Chairman of the English High School Committee, Mr. Flint said :—

Popular education in the free public school owes its origin very largely, if not wholly, to the early Puritan clergy. Most of them were educated men, who had had the advantage of the best training which the English colleges of that day could offer; men well to do in the world, and abundantly able, had they seen fit, to send their sons back to the mother country to school; and it is to their lasting honor, be it said, that, instead of that, they preferred to build the school-house here, in the shadow of the primeval forest, and to invite the sons of those less favored than themselves to come and share it with their own. They thought the best way to fight Satan was through the school-house, and they seem to have entertained the idea that one of Satan's artful dodges was to keep men from learning Latin and Greek. Perhaps we have departed a little from the early Puritan faith; at any rate, there is a gentleman here who knows all about it, and I have the honor to introduce to you the Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS.

ADDRESS OF REV. PHILLIPS BROOKS.

I should be very sorry, sir, at this late hour, to undertake to treat of the relations of religion to science. I heard, several hours ago, in this meeting, some excellent remarks that were made upon that subject, and I think I must leave to the thoughtfulness of this great assembly the garnering up of the noble and wise things that were said to us by the Principal of the Latin School.

I want to speak only a few moments, if I can restrain myself so. It is all very well to talk about the magnificence of this new building. It is magnificent—and we are thankful for it; but to me there is something infinitely sad and pathetic this morning in thinking of our old Latin and English High School-house standing empty and desolate down in Bedford Street. I cannot get it out of my mind. I cannot, as I look around upon the brilliancy of this new building, forget what that old building has done. I cannot help thinking of it almost as a person, and wondering if it hears what we are saying here. I cannot help thinking that from the top of the old brown cupola it looks across the length of the city and sees the pinnacles of this new temple which is to take its place. I cannot help thinking that even through its closed and dusty windows it is hearing something of the triumphant shouts with which its successor's walls are ringing. I cannot help wondering what it thinks about it all.

But when I know, letting that old School-house stand before me for a moment in personal shape,—when I know what a dear and earnest old creature it was,—when I know how carefully it looked after those who came into its culture and embrace,—when I know how many of us will always look back to it, through the whole course of our lives, as the place where were gathered some of the deepest inspirations that ever came to us, I cannot but think that the old School is noble enough and generous enough to look with joy and satisfaction upon this new building that has risen to take its place. And, as the old year kindly and ungrudgingly sinks back into the generations of the past, and allows the new year to come in with its new activities, and as the father steps aside and sees the son who bears his nature, and whom he has taught the best he knows, come forth into life and fill his place, so I am willing to believe that the old School rejoices in this, its great successor, and that it is thinking (if it has thoughts) of its own useful career, and congratulating itself upon the earnest and faithful way in which it has pursued, not only the special methods of knowledge which have belonged to its time, but the purposes of knowledge, which belong to all time, and must pass from school-house to school-house, and from age to age, unchanged.

The perpetuity of knowledge is in the perpetuity of the purposes of knowledge. The thing which links this School-house with all the school-houses of the generations of the past,—the thing that links together the great schools of the middle ages, and the schools of old Greece, and the schools of the Hebrews, where the youth of that time were found sitting at the feet of their wise rabbis,—is the perpetual identity of the moral purposes of knowledge. The methods of knowledge are constantly changing. The school-books that were studied ten, twenty, thirty years ago have passed out of date; the scholars of to-day do not even know their names; but the purpose for which our school-books are studied, the things we are trying to get out of them, the things which, if they are properly taught and studied, the scholars of to-day do get out of them, are the same; and so across the years we clasp hands with our own school-boy days.

And there is to be the perpetuity of knowledge in the future. One wonders, as he looks around this new School-house, what is to be taught here in the years to come. He is sure that the books will change, that the sciences will change, that new studies will be developed, that new methods of interpretation will be discovered, that new kingdoms of the infinite knowledge are to be opened to the discerning eye of man, in the years that are to come. He knows it is impossible for any man to say what will be taught in these halls a hundred years hence; but yet, with that unknown development he is in deep sympathy, because he knows that the boys of a hundred years hence, like the boys of to-day, will be taught here to be faithful to the deep purposes of knowledge, will be trained to conscientious study, to the love of knowledge, to justice and generosity, to respect for themselves, and obedience to authority, and honor for man, and reverence for God. That is the link between the School-house that stood behind the King's Chapel and this; and that is the only thing that in the years to come will make these schools truly the same schools that they are to-day.

When the Duke of Wellington came back to Eton, after his glorious career, as he was walking through the old quadrangle, he looked around and said,

"Here is where I learned the lessons that made it possible for me to conquer at Waterloo." It was not what he had read there in books, not what he had learned there by writing Greek verses, or by scanning the lines of Virgil or Horace, that helped him win his great battle; but there he had learned to be faithful to present duty, to be strong, to be diligent, to be patient; and that was why he was able to say, that it was what he had learned at Eton that had made it possible for him to conquer at Waterloo.

And the same thing made it possible for the Latin and High School boys to help win the victory which came at Gettysburg, and under the very walls of Richmond. It was the lessons which they had learned here. It was not simply the lessons which they had learned out of books; it was the grand imprint of character that had been given to them here. The Mohammedan says, "The ink of the learned is as precious as the blood of the martyrs." Our English High School and our Latin School have had "the ink of the learned" and "the blood of the martyrs" too. They have sent forth young men who have added to the world's wisdom and to its vast dissemination; they have sent forth young men who have laid down their lives that the country might be perpetual, and that slavery might die.

I have always remembered,—it seemed but a passing impression at the moment, but it has never left me,—how one day, when I was going home from the old Adams School, in Mason Street, I saw a little group of people gathered down in Bedford Street; and, with a boy's curiosity, I went into the crowd, and peeped around among the big men who were in my way to see what they were doing. I found that they were laying the corner-stone of a new School-house. I always felt, after that, when I was a scholar and a teacher there, and ever since, that I had a little more right in that School-house, because I had happened, by that accident of passing home that way that day from school, to see its corner-stone laid. I wish that every boy in the Latin School and High School, and every boy in Boston, who is old enough to be here, who is ever going to be in these schools, could be here to-day. I hope they will hear, in some way or other, through the echoes that will reach them from this audience, with what solemn and devout feeling we have here consecrated this building to the purposes which the old building so nobly served, and in the serving of which it became so dear to us all; to the preservation of sound learning, the cultivation of manly character, and the faithful service of the dear country, in whatever untold exigencies there may be in the years to come, in which she will demand the service of her sons.

The CHAIRMAN.—The Latin School Association, as many of you know, is an organization of the graduates of that great School, formed for the purpose of keeping up early associations and for bringing their influence to bear for the good of the School itself. It has contributed liberally to the excellent library of the Latin School, and to its collections of works of art, and in various other ways has been of infinite service. The committee fully appreciate the influence of this Association, and desire most cordially to co-operate with it in every practicable way. I have the honor to introduce to you the President of the Latin School Association, Mr. CHARLES K. DILLAWAY.

ADDRESS OF CHARLES K. DILLAWAY, ESQ., PRESIDENT OF THE LATIN SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Mr. Chairman:—One of the historians of Massachusetts said, "From small beginnings great things have been produced, and as one small candle may light a thousand, so the light here kindled hath shone to many, yea, in some sort to our whole nation." He must have had our Latin School in his mind when he said that. Its origin was simple and unpretending; its advantages as an educational institution hardly above those of a village school of the present time; and yet what a burning and shining light it has become! For more than two centuries it has been training men for our national councils, for the halls of justice, for the professions, and for every important occupation of life.

Merely to name those of our graduates who have contributed to the good government of our country, to its literature, to the arts and sciences, and the education of the people, would take more time than I have any right to use. Let me speak only of those who are at this time in important and responsible positions.

In the Cabinet at Washington there are two of our graduates; and President Hayes will tell you, sir, that among his wisest and most trusty counsellors are William M. Evarts and Charles Devens.

Our School has furnished many of the Governors of Massachusetts;—we claim His Excellency the present Chief Magistrate, whom the verdict of the people has so emphatically declared to be the right man in the right place.

Four of our graduates have been Presidents of Harvard University;—we claim the present distinguished head of that institution; and every friend of old Harvard will bear witness to the vigor and success of his administration.

Boston has come to us for many of its chief Magistrates;—we claim His Honor, the present Mayor, whose great popularity has been shown by repeated elections. Let me take this opportunity, sir, to thank him in behalf of the Latin School Association for the encouragement and efficient aid he has given to the erection of the building we are dedicating, from its commencement to the successful end. It was commenced during the first year of his administration, and has had the great benefit of his official influence during the whole process of its erection. Indeed, sir, I very much fear that without that influence, so faithfully used, we should not be dedicating this building to-day. It is more than probable that our boys would still be occupying the gloomy, sunless, comfortless rooms in Bedford Street.

We cannot speak too highly in praise of the new building now given to us. Our teachers, who have had abundant opportunities to test its qualities, are unanimous in their opinion that it answers most satisfactorily all the purposes for which it was erected. In the important matter of ventilation, wherein our city architects in times past have been more distinguished for their failures than for their successes, this building is believed to be one of the best in the city. Of course we hear outside criticisms, coming generally from those who have seen only the outside of the building. Some of these complain that it has cost too much. Is there any novelty in that, sir? When did we ever erect a public building in our good city of Boston which did not cost more than we expected? Now, Mr. Chairman, as we have just such a building as we wanted, an ornament to our city and substantial enough to last for centuries, it is of very little consequence if the cost has been beyond our estimates.

Some say it is too large; we shall never fill it. Did we ever erect a school-house without hearing the same cry? And did we ever fail to fill any one we erected? When the Sherwin School-house was built, some of the wise men of that day prophesied that no member of the School Board would live to see it filled. In less than three years it was full to overflowing; every seat was occupied, and the boys, like Oliver Twist, were asking for more. The building the city has now given us, we believe to be none too large. In due time we shall fill it. All precedents show that our Boston boys, among their other good qualities, have that of multiplying with marvellous rapidity. But I must take no more time, sir, as there are many gentlemen around me whom we are all wishing to hear.

The CHAIRMAN.—I have a letter from the Secretary of State, the Hon. WILLIAM M. EVARTS, regretting his inability to be present on this occasion. I have also one from the Attorney General of the United States, which I will read:—

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR,—I am very much obliged for the invitation to attend the dedication of the new building for the use of the Public Latin and English High Schools.

These two Schools have been of the highest advantage to the City of Boston in the development of the men who date back to them their early education; and I should be very glad, at a dedication which brings these two sisters of learning under the roof of a common home, to be present.

My official engagements at the close of the Presidential term will be too onerous for me to leave them. I can only send to the graduates who will assemble upon the occasion my most hearty and sincere good wishes, and my hope that the Schools will continue to confer benefits in the future such as they have dispensed in the past.

Your obedient servant,

CHARLES DEVENS.

HON. CHARLES L. FLINT,
Chairman, etc., Boston.

Addresses followed from the Rev. ROBERT C. WATERSON, President of the English High School Association, Mr. HENRY P. KIDDER, and the Superintendent of Schools, Mr. EDWIN P. SEAVER.

The CHAIRMAN.—Ladies and Gentlemen: I had been depending upon our friend, the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, to say a word as the champion of military drill; but he was obliged to be in New York to-day, and so was President Eliot, of Harvard College. We are fortunate, however, in having with us the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Education, of the Legislature, and I am sure he can add a word upon that subject which will touch a very tender chord in the hearts of our boys. I have the honor to introduce to you Col. T. W. HIGGINSON.

ADDRESS OF COL. THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON.

Mr. Chairman:—I was so fortunate once in my life as to make a short speech. I never did it but once; but the consequence of that is, that I always find myself kept to the end of every entertainment in hopes that I shall make another. I will try it once more.

There is no man in whose place I should less want to stand, and more especially here, than the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, for he has this peculiarity about him, that he always was and always will be a Boston boy of the Boston boys. He is still young, and if he lives to be ninety,—which Heaven grant!—he will be younger then than he is to-day, which is saying a great deal.

In regard to the point which he was to speak of, I cannot so properly speak of that here as he could, because I do not belong to that privileged class. There are two classes in the world, you know: those that were born in Boston and are patrician, and do not need to be born again, and those that were born somewhere else. I was not born in Boston, and I wish here humbly to apologise for that early mistake. I was not born in Boston, I never shall have been born in Boston, until they annex Cambridge to Boston, and then I shall only have been born there retrospectively. Therefore, my only claim to be here, and the only ground on which anybody can listen to me to-day is, that it did happen to me, not long ago, beneath a certain gilded dome in Boston, to stand by certain Boston boys when they wanted a friend. That is all there is about it. I will tell them and you, that, after all, I do not know that anybody else could have saved them on that occasion if it had not been for the promptness and efficiency with which they stood by themselves. When that petition, signed by three hundred and fifty boys of the English High School, was brought into the lobby of the State House by a young gentleman with one of the very straightest backbones that even military drill ever gave, and when a corresponding petition came up from the Latin School, borne by a young gentleman similarly adorned, why, it carried the day. There was no resisting it. Everything yielded before it. Let me tell you, young men, that nobody in legislative halls, or beneath the gilded dome, not even the Governor himself, can resist the voters of the future. They are a very important constituency for anybody who expects to be the President of the United States,—and up there we all do, every one of us,—although there is nobody, except His Excellency the Governor, who, if the whole truth were told, has much chance of it. Therefore, I say, I think well of the drill of the Boston High School battalion, and of the effect of military discipline, from the circumstance that they made their advance upon the State House in such military style, and captured it so completely. The thing was essentially done from the moment they came there. The stoutest opponents of the bill concluded that there was nothing in military drill that was so objectionable, after all, and decided that all they were afraid of was that there might be some extra teachers employed to teach dancing at the public expense.

Thus twice in history has the prowess of Boston boys been vindicated. A hundred years ago they went to General Gage and asked for leave to coast upon the Common.* This year they went to the ruling powers and asked that this drill-hall might not be converted into a hall without any drill; and history will one day record that they succeeded in both their undertakings.

The CHAIRMAN.—Many of the graduates of the English High are also graduates of the Latin School. They may have a divided affection, but each School can fairly claim them as its children, and will always cherish a just pride in their honorable achievements as if they were the outgrowth of its own inspiration. We have with us a conspicuous example in Mr. THOMAS GAFFIELD, who can define his position.

ADDRESS OF THOMAS GAFFIELD, ESQ.

Mr. Chairman:—It is my good fortune to call myself an old pupil of both of the Schools whose second happy union under the same roof we celebrate to-day; and I cherish pleasant memories of Masters Dillaway, Streeter, and Gardner of the Latin School, and of Masters Miles and Sherwin of the English High.

The remainder of Mr. GAFFIELD's address was more particularly devoted to his reminiscences of the English High School.

The One Hundredth Psalm was then sung, and a benediction was pronounced by the Rev. GEORGE A. THAYER:—

As God was with our fathers may He be with us and our children!† May He bless our work and crown our days! Amen.

The Latin School has done its part to strengthen the argument of those who claim that the influence of classical studies is to inspire a generous patriotism. Many of its scholars were distinguished in the earlier conflicts of the nation, both military and civil.

Some, no doubt led by the principles and example of Master Lovell, adhered to the mother-country, and left names to be inscribed in the annals of American loyalists. Others, influenced probably by the teachings of his son, read more correctly the signs of the times, and took their places among the Sons of Liberty. The first name upon the Declaration of Independence, in the large, free hand so familiar to us, is that of a Latin School boy; and below it are those of four more* who received their early instruction from the same source. In later days, during the War of the Rebellion, the Latin School boys proved that for two hundred and seventy-six, of whom fifty gave up their lives, filled posts in the military or naval forces of the Union, and gained distinction for themselves and the School by their services.

The first object that meets the eye of the visitor, as he enters the main door of the School House, is the statue erected by the graduates of the School to honor those who had thus honored her, and to commemorate those who fell in defending their country in the War of the Rebellion. Elegant as a work of art and invaluable as an inspiration, it serves as a daily reminder to the pupils, as impressive as any lesson taught from their books, of the patriotism and devotion to duty which education should foster, and educated men should cherish. It was the work of Richard S. Greenough, a Latin School boy (of the year 1829), and represents Alma Mater as a beautiful woman, resting her left arm on a shield which bears the names of the dead, and extending in her right hand a laurel crown to reward those who returned from the conflict. On marble tablets, on either side of the entrance door, are the names of all the scholars who served in the national forces, in any capacity, without losing their lives.†

This statue originally stood in the large hall of the Bedford Street School-house, where it was placed in the latter part of the year 1870. As it was the first, and for some time after, the only memorial to the sons of Boston who served in the war, it seemed proper that its erection should be the occasion of a fitting tribute to those whose labors and sacrifices it was designed to commemorate. The hall of the School being too small to accommodate those who were entitled and desirous to attend, the public services of dedication were held in the Boston Music Hall, early in December of that year.

The exercises of the occasion were a report of the committee, read by Francis A. Osborn (of the year 1845), which was followed by an English Ode by William Everett (of the year 1852):—

ENGLISH ODE BY WILLIAM EVERETT.

LOOK where our mother lifts on high
Her boys' perennial scroll !
Mark in her buckler's heraldry
Our brothers' muster roll !
We ask no rank, no titles know,
Their victories or their fate to show —
Drawn by this only rule,
That here their boyish footsteps strayed,
As boys they worked, as boys they played,
Here in our ancient School.

Her duties stern, of faith and fact,
Were theirs from day to day ;
The rigid rule, the task exact,
To study, to obey.
Her stories of the olden times
In classic tongues' melodious chimes
Fell on their youthful ears,
And, by the oft repeated words,
Struck in their hearts responsive chords,
To sound in after years :—

The chief, who his ten thousand led
From Tigris to the sea, —
The consul, from whose thunders fled
The fiend of treachery, —
And what, in Virgil's song revealed,
Appeared in blest Elysium's field
To old Anchises' son —
How those who for their country fought,
When life was o'er and labor wrought,
A snow-white garland won.

They parted for each walk of life,
Nor met as boys again,
Till woke the land in civil strife
And called upon her men !
Then, as if once again there rang
The School-bell's unforgotten clang,
Gathered her boys once more —
To prove, in field, and camp, and mine,
The long-drawn siege, the clashing line,
Her lessons learnt of yore.

Her law the proudest crest could bend
To mandates higher still :
Her rules through every watchword send
The old precision's thrill :
And every tale of Greece and Rome
Swelled in their hearts and bade "strike home,"
Till on some field of death,
Blow after blow, with all the fire
Of Troy or Athens in their ire,
They yielded up their breath.

Now grateful for their work, we raise
This pious marble here,
To greet our boys' free, joyous gaze
As year rolls on to year.
And that sweet look shall nerve each soul,
And each impetuous heart control
Till every eye shall burn,
In work more true, and play more keen,
A wreath like theirs forever green
By God-like deeds to earn.

Obedient, faithful, prompt, and brave,
What more could they have done?
What fuller life, what holier grave
Could parent seek for son?
They saved their country in her need —
What nobler name, what choicer meed
Could these our boys have earned?
What lesson, though our mother taught
All art, all science, and all thought,
Could boys have better learned?

Ay, let them from her forehead tear
The diadem away!
And all her ancient lore declare
Useless and dead to-day!
One priceless gem shall still be ours,
Above this age's boasted powers
To ravish or to give;
That boys, by her old precepts trained,
Their country's flag and faith sustained
And died that she might live.

A Latin Ode by Henry W. Haynes (of the year 1842), was then sung by a select choir of male voices :—

LATIN ODE BY HENRY WILLIAMSON HAYNES.

HEROUM juvenum pro patria mori
Optantes animae! quale decus damus
Dignum pro meritis? Prosequimur quibus
Votis et lacrymis piis?

Hoc marmor vovimus, discipuli tui
Sculptum, cara parens, artificis manu,
Fraternis animis, cordibus aemulis,
Grates testificans opus.

Immortalis Honos, Famaque nobilis,
Mansurumque virens tempus in ultimum
Nomen, commemorans Gloria laudibus,
Ornabunt statuam sacram.

O Natale Solum! numina dent tibi
Duris temporibus pectora fortia,
Prolem magnanimam, talia perpeti
Caris his Laribus satam.

This was succeeded by an Oration by William M. Evarts (of the year 1828) :—

* The following metrical translation by LESTER WILLIAMS CLARK, a member of the First Class in the School, was printed on the Programme :—

HEROIC youths, whose loyal souls desire
To seek the death their country's wrongs require,
What tribute, worthy of your deeds below,
Can we with prayers and tears on you bestow?

This marble, sculptured by the hand of one,
Whom thou, O Alma Mater, own'st as son,
With hearts where mingle brothers' pride and love
We pledge, our lasting gratitude to prove.

Immortal Honor and undying Fame,
Forever fresh and lasting as their name,
Their brows with heroes' laurels shall entwine,
And consecrate this Statue as their shrine.

Land of my birth! may God accord to thee
Brave hearts to succor in adversity;
Still may our School have sons in valor tried,
E'en as these heroes who for freedom died.

ORATION BY THE HON. WILLIAM MAXWELL EVARTS.

Mr. President, and Ladies and Gentlemen:—I received, some months ago, the invitation of the Committee to take some part in the presentation of this Memorial Statue to the gaze of the Boston people, a dedication of it to the public service of this city, with unaffected pleasure. Although, by my birth-right, I felt entitled to have a share in all the great industrial interests and literatures, all that makes up the fame of this renowned city, yet I knew that my own memories, and my own associations with Boston, were wholly confined to my school days and my school life; and though I might have felt that to participate in any other ceremonial of local interest was quite outside of any propriety on my part, I could not deny that I was as much a Boston school-boy as anybody could be. From the time that I was five years old at the primary school, and then from seven to ten at the ward school, and then onward till I went to college, I was a school-boy of Boston. All my active life has been passed elsewhere, and if there has been anything in it which induced your Committee to look with favor or approval upon it, and to recognize my right to be counted in this festival of the school-boys of Boston, it is to those schools, it is to the Latin School, that I acknowledge the obligation and proclaim my gratitude. Agreeable as was the invitation, I should yet have hesitated long before accepting it, had I not felt that the part assigned to me was not one upon which in the least was dependent the interest or the impression of the occasion; that here and now, as elsewhere, and at all times, on all occasions like this, it is the dead, who, being still dead, yet speak, no matter by what voice of the living eulogist life shall be given to their utterance; and that his eloquence can never outspoke the eloquence of commemorated lives.

I had supposed, Mr. President, that we should have really seen the actual Statue and the tablets, and the portraits and the forms and benches of the boys, so that we might have felt that the occasion that drew us together was represented by what we saw about us, and that no part was needed except to give some suggestive lead, perhaps to the considerations which had made these lives memorable, and made the commemoration useful to the community. Now it appears that the genius of one of our scholars, under the inspiration of the Committee, has produced what I am told is thus far the only public monument to the memories of this war in this great city, and which may remain so for an indefinite period. Certainly, it is complete and satisfactory; certainly, it appeals to the youth of the city in their daily haunts, and is to form a part of their education. The artist, with a touch grave and solemn, a sense of the duty which we all feel, has produced this emblematic mother full of exultation at the glories of her sons, full of grief at their sacrifice, full of serene joy that other sons yet survive.

The shield is emblazoned with names that the citizens of Boston will never let die. The legend of the patriot is the only legend that informs the observer in what cause they fell, for what cause their names are thus preserved, and why they stand separated from all the youth that ever graced this city, from all the youth that have drawn their knowledge from this ancient School,—separated forever from the living and from the dead. It is for me only, as simply and as briefly as may be, not to suggest to this audience, but rather to recall, some of the principal traits in the great conflict, some of the principal traits in the lives and sacrifices of these young men which have made them memorable, and some of the considerations which induced this commemoration, and may promise useful fruits to the present and future generations, from this honor thus definitely paid them.

“Pro Patria” is the motto of those who have died for their country, and for their whole country; and yet this monument is raised to men who fell in a civil war. “For the King or for the Commonwealth, for York or Lancaster,” is the praise of loyalty in civil war; and yet the deaths in this civil war that have been devoted to the Government and the safety of the Republic, we may justly pronounce to be covered by the sacred name in classic fame of “death for their country.” How shall we paint this, and yet not claim for them what should be denied in other civil strifes? It can only be, from the nature of the conflict and from the part they bore in it, that this shall be claimed, now and forever, in the face of all men, as a monument to men who died for their country, as much as to those who at Bunker Hill made the same sacrifice for their country.

Ten years ago, when the clouds were first rising in the political horizon which presaged the immediate burst of war, to an observer who either was not aware of the intense and vehement moral causes that were at work in the bosom of this nation, or who did not believe in moral causes as producing great conflicts, generally flowing from passion or from interest, nothing seemed less rational, nothing seemed less probable, than that this nation should be distracted or convulsed by war, foreign or civil; to such a one none of the ordaining motives that should throw a great, a prosperous, a powerful people out of their triumphant pursuits were evident.

Marching ever onward in the procession of time, and in the face of all the world to greater and greater power of every kind, a nation rose out of their strong and happy peace into the severities and hardships of war. Certainly, no people were ever situated so as to be more secure against war contrary to their will. Certainly, no people were so little tempted to war; the territory rounded out, the population thriving, increasing, already vast, commerce adding new wealth, all nations seeking favor rather than occasion of strife with us, no neighbor whom we could fear, no neighbor tempting us to aggression, no neighbor tempted to encroach upon us, and at home, outliving, as we had supposed, all those clumsy and irrational methods of contestation, that by violence and bloodshed undertook to settle people's opinions against their will; with a condition of life where all were equal, with no dynasties to create ambition or furnish food for contests, with every facility for argument and discussion and the suffrage, and frequent recurring opportunities to take the sense of the nation, which, once expressed, implied the power, if need be, to enforce it. And yet, within one year from that time, the forces were set against each other that showed greater strength and greater courage, and more energetic purpose, than had ever attended a war among men. As it progressed, ever and more evident was it that it was a struggle never to be ended till the great moral questions of right against might, of equality against privilege, of justice among men against power over them, were the issues to be settled by this death-struggle between immense and passionate forces. When this was seen, it was felt that all the arguments against war for trade, against war for ambition, against war for aggression, against war for hate, had disappeared, and that war for duty and for safety were the highest obligations of a nation that had a heritage such as ours; for, to a people with our origin, with our discipline, with our future, that had fondly hoped that all the discords that were bred within our collected population and our divided interests should pass away under the influence of peaceful authority, it was at once proposed, and in a tone not to be misunderstood, that we should meet an issue, and, for the future, put up either with a corrupt Constitution that should perpetuate the injustice and the shame of slavery, or a mutilated territory that should divide and control the area and strength of freedom: and to the issue thus presented, which to a great part of our nation at the outset seemed to present the degree and form of choice open to us in this issue, statesmen and orators, conspicuous leaders of public opinion, great masses of intelligent and educated people, debated on the grounds and considerations, some higher and some lower, of the discussion which of these alternatives it were better that we should accept!

But beneath all this, without distinction of party or past opinion, the well trained intelligence of the American people at once spurned this election, and determined that they would fight for and maintain the entire heritage that they had received from their fathers; that they would save the whole country in every inch of its area, and the whole Constitution in every word of its promise for the future. All that had made the progress of freedom, and all that promised itself a security, was here put at issue against a demand that liberty should stay its progress or retire from a portion of this continent; and once understood, a conflict was marshalled which had no other issue than the fate of human progress for the time. When you consider that, on so vast a scale of population, of territory, and of power, and in a nation so far advanced in all the arts of peace, brought to the furthest point of moral and religious and intellectual culture, this issue was in this war, you cannot but feel that if we could separate ourselves from that familiar knowledge of the actors in it, and of our own participation in it, which breeds depreciation, if we could look at it as the action of another nation, or read about it in other history, we should pronounce this contest as the most direct, thorough, definite, and decisive issue between the great principles of right and might that men could be engaged to.

It was then, gentlemen and ladies, in such an issue, and lest they should be robbed of such a country, that these men yielded their lives to the stress of battle. Certainly, the contest was worthy of any degree of personal heroism, and will support every amount of public commemoration of those who took a useful and honorable part in it. Now we have only to see and to say what the part was that these young men, our townsmen, our school-fellows, our playmates did, in fact, bear in this controversy. What was the quality of their motives? What the nature and description of their sacrifices? What the intelligence, what the acceptance, with which they met this issue? In the first place, we see at once that this population from which these young men proceeded was not exposed to any very near danger or discomfort from the growing war. If Boston and Massachusetts could be satisfied with security of Boston and Massachusetts, and be careless of the rest of the country, or the fate of the question, Boston and Massachusetts were very safe; and these young men lived also in a community where the whole course of reasoning and of sentiment had for more than a generation discouraged war. An advance it was supposed had been made for our time and for our people that should never recall to the unpracticed hands of American youth the weapons of war. So, too, these young men, so far as I have noticed in the narratives accessible to me of their lives, were all individually in circumstances where neither chance nor need carried them into this conflict; and they were of that past education and those formed habits of mind that did not and could not urge them to this contest upon any other considerations than those which their conscience approved and their intelligence accepted. When you find that of the youth of military age that had come out from this single Boston School, 287 served in this war, and when I say to you that from the classes most readily furnishing or permitting the material for military service, the classes from 1850 to 1855, in those six classes, there was an average of twenty-three young men from each that served in this war, and that from one single class, of 1852, there were forty-three soldiers in this war, you must understand that there was some movement among the youth, nurtured as these youth were, and in this City, having its hold upon the best and most universal sentiment of the people, and of true patriotism, that could have thus crowded them into the ranks of our war.

I cannot discover that there were any of them that, either by distinct vocation or a particular devotion, had accustomed themselves to the arts of war. I cannot perceive that there runs through the narratives and the records that they themselves furnished of their lives, their conduct, and their motives, the least touch of the love of glory, the least desire to exchange the fair promise of peaceful service to the State for this new scene of action. I cannot say that as the war grew upon them, and their young fames flowered in the admiration of their country, that to the last battle day of any one of them there was the least introduction of self into the scene and into the scheme of their action. I must, then, feel that these young men, carried neither by chance nor by interest, accustomed by no education and no experience to any of the toils, nor hardened to the dangers of the strife, who thus came and bore their part in this contest, are in your judgment, in the judgment of all their friends, in the judgment of all the country, in the judgment of the future and of history, entitled to their personal participation in the great and noble sentiments that urged on and carried through the great struggle.

Whatever of glory the country at large may claim for its civilization, for its sense of duty and for its fortitude, its courage and its triumph, these young men who have died in such a cause, and upon such motives, and sacrificed their lives under such deliberate and persistent choice that they would brave death rather than submit to degrading and retrogressive tendencies in the age and country in which they lived, in the largest possible measure, either by fortune or by principle, for their recompense, shall be among the foremost of their countrymen in the memory of this and of future times. It was not because they did not appreciate the pleasure of peace. It was not because they did not appreciate the hardships of war. It was not because they did not understand the perils of honor and did not know the charms of ease. With all this knowledge they chose, and they gave their lives to the choice. These men, these young men, these boys of the Latin School, are entitled to the deepest homage of all their country. Maxima reverentia debetur pueris.

Now was the issue of this conflict worthy of the sacrifice, and were the sentiments that urged it on, even at the great cost of war, justified by the result? Why, there are no sufferers from the result of this conflict! There was suffering, plenty of suffering, by grief, by loss in this community, and certainly diffused throughout the land, rebel and loyal; but I propose to you, fellow citizens, that as the result of this struggle there is no oppression, no suffering, no loss, no harm anywhere throughout the world, but everything is full of goodness. When was it ever heard that the beaten party in a civil war met nothing but amplification of right and freedom, exaltation in the sphere, in the scale, and in the hope of future progress? How is it with other nations? There is no nation throughout the world which finds in these our triumphs cause for fear to its hope or its safety, but every nation throughout the globe finds and knows that we have fought the battle of humanity, and that the rights and the hopes of men, all their personal, their national, their complete and entire progress and development, have been advanced by the results of this war. Certainly we may say, then, that the issue has approved the action of this nation, and that when from other wars there have come consequences and threats to peace and prosperity somewhere, when the relative conditions of the beaten and the triumphant parties in the same nation have subjected one to the oppressions and the insults of the other, when we can show as the results of this conflict nothing but elevation, hope, and prosperity to come, we may feel entirely justified in the ascription to moral causes of the whole responsibility for this conflict, and they are entitled to reap the triumphant reward.

Now there remains only to consider whether, although the completed round of origin and action and issue be wholly of this elevated and this gratifying character, there may yet be included in the example or the influence for the future, some disturbance of the real moral basis on which we proclaim and before this war felt our institutions rested, and on which they were to be perpetual and secure. I know there are some public orators, some statesmen, perhaps, who seeing this nation thus inflamed by war, and its immense energies thus displayed, its great triumph and the great fame that have attended it, think that a military spirit has been implanted in the bosom of the people that will find in questions of policy and of interest, in covetous ambition, and in the disposition to regulate the elections, a preference for war over peace. But be sure that a war, such as we know our civil war to have been, is the severest, the most earnest, and the most intelligible lesson which a people ever had occasion to learn, that in the language of Scripture, "Wisdom is better than weapons of war." For a nation to espouse the cause of liberty and justice at the cost of war, is a very different thing from a nation's disposition to espouse the war at the cost of liberty and justice; and by the same schooling that has made us ready to repeat, if need be, every measure of past sacrifice for great moral purposes in the good of our nation and of the world, we have learned that war for war is neither fanciful nor political, but involves sufferings which are only justified by the degree and firmness of the virtue on which they rest.

Now of the influence of this memorial statue, and this perpetuated example of the youth of this School upon the School itself of the future generation. As this nation cannot be the same nation it would have been without the war, much less the same nation it would be if it had shrunk from the war, so this School for the future generations of its scholars never shall be merely the same School that it was when you and I, gentlemen, were its scholars.

We had no nearer lessons of patriotism and of virtue within its walls than those which we read from Greek and Roman history. But now there is no boy that enters its doors, who does not, in the daily contemplation of the bright names of these fifty-one young Latin Scholars, blazoned on the shield, draw in the influences that open the mind to great sentiments, and gain at the same time an inspiration that no history can surpass by any of its examples. An education like that, worthily bestowed and worthily accepted, neither softens the manners nor the mind, so but that at the call of duty and of country these boys are to be as great heroes as the world ever saw. No greater inspiration for good can be drawn from the memory of Warren and Prescott than these boys are to draw from the sight of this escutcheon of glory and esteem. They are to learn this to be sure, that as the common phrase goes, peace having its victories as well as war, peace, too, has its disasters, its duties, its sacrifices, its burdens, its losses; and they are to have but a puny heroism if they reserve for themselves the obligation of fulfilling the call to duty for the country and for the good of men only to future occasions of the battlefield. But as every greater includes the less, so in the great conflicts which no man can tell how near they may be, for right against might, for duty and honor against fraud, temptation, and bribes, the youth of Boston, the youth of the Latin School, the youth throughout the land, must be ready to perform their share in the contest at an early and a later day, and forever.

Vigilance, enemies, dangers, are a part of the duty and the circumstances of peace as well as of war, and these youth are to be taught that they are never to save life, or make it happy or prosperous or easy, at the expense, in whatever form the danger comes, of what makes life valuable and useful; that no boy or man can justify himself to his conscience, or in the approval of his fellows, propter vitam vivendi perdere causas.

Now, gentlemen and ladies, this monument, this emblematic statue, these tablets, are henceforth to be a perpetual possession of the School and of the City. This sacred institution of learning in the land has not failed to secure its whole proportion of the praises that belong to the educated and disciplined talents that have borne their share in this war. We, you, will cherish their memories ever. Must we not feel that in the presence of these just monuments to honest fame, the safety and the prosperity of our country and its freedom are ever secure?

The services were closed by the singing of a Requiem, the words of which were by the Hon. George Lunt, and the music by Charles Lemuel Capen (of the year 1863).

In 1822, as appears from the records of the School Committee, a gentleman of Boston, who was afterwards known to have been the Honorable James Lloyd (of our year 1776), offered a gold medal of the value of fifty dollars, to be given in the year 1823 in the Latin School, and the same in the English Classical School, "to the best scholar" in the School, whose conduct and deportment during the year preceding shall have been such as to have evinced diligence in his studies, respect to his instructors, and urbanity toward his associates, and repeated the offer the ensuing year. The conditions of the award will be found in the letter of Mr. Lloyd in the Appendix.* In the year 1823 this medal was given to Thomas Kemper Davis,† and in 1824 to George Stillman Hillard.

In 1854 Hon. Abbott Lawrence gave a sum of money, of which the interest is distributed in prizes for the general encouragement of the scholars. There is another fund contributed by pupils, and the fathers of pupils, for a similar purpose. These prizes, and the Franklin medals,‡ the "gift of Franklin," are given for general scholarship and good conduct, or for specified performances. The prizes are announced at the annual exhibition or prize declamation in May, and given to those who won them, at the annual Visitation by the committee at the close of the School year, when the medals are awarded. After Dr. Gardner's death, some of his former pupils residing in New York, subscribed a sum of money for two prizes, one to be given for an essay in English literature, and the other for one in natural science, and to be called the "Gardner prizes." These were awarded for two years, and then temporarily discontinued. Subsequently the money was placed in the hands of the Latin School Association, where it will remain until by additions and accumulations it has reached a sufficient sum to provide for the annual bestowment of one or more prizes. The late Hon. Elias Hasket Derby of Boston left by will a sum for medals for certain literary performances, the first of which will probably be awarded soon.

In 1877 an attempt was made to open the School for the admission of girls,* and several hearings were given by the School Committee to the petitioners and remonstrants. The decision was adverse to the petitioners, but as a result a separate school for girls, with a course similar to that followed in this, was subsequently established, and called the Girls' Latin School.

In 1844 the Boston Latin School Association, to which all who have ever been Masters or pupils in the School are eligible, was formed to promote interest in it, and provide for its library. It "constantly," says the School Committee in one of its reports, "keeps in view the good of the School, from year to year adds to the attractions displayed in the rooms and to the number of choice volumes in the classical library." Its library in the School building, for the use of Masters and pupils, contains "one of the choicest collections of classical works in the country,—the editions being the most desirable, and the books of reference the rarest and most valuable."

Master Gardner was indefatigable in adding to its treasures; and as stated by Dr. Dimmock in his memorial address, it was largely by his personal exertions that "the Latin School acquired probably the largest collection of pictorial and other illustrations of Roman and Grecian topography and antiquities possessed by any institution in the country; comprising paintings, rare and old engravings, models in cork, casts from the antique, the best foreign mural maps and plans, casts of medals, antique coins, specimens of marbles from ancient ruins, and hundreds of photographs of Italian and Athenian views, and of statuary."

To further stimulate an esprit du corps among the pupils, as well as to foster public interest in the School, the Association a few years ago established the practice of having a public dinner in the city of Boston. The first occurred on what was supposed to be the one-hundredth anniversary of the re-opening of the School, after Master Lovell closed it with his memorable speech on the morning of Concord fight. It was presided over by the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, and proved a brilliant occasion. Its successors, presided over by the Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, President Charles W. Eliot, the Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., the Hon. Henry K. Oliver, Mr. Robert S. Rantoul, and William Everett, Ph.D., Master of Adams Academy, have proved equally so, and the dinner of the Latin School Association may now be fairly considered an established Boston notion.

Thus constantly manifesting its interest in the School, and seeking to promote its welfare, the Association has given ample assurance that if the time ever comes, of which President Eliot of Harvard University hopefully spoke in his speech as chairman at the dinner of the Association in 1878, when those who have been its pupils shall have some voice and share in the government of the School, they may be depended upon zealously to maintain its prestige unimpaired, to keep its glories untarnished, to augment its efficiency, and add to its renown.

CATALOGUE.

PREFACE TO THE EDITION OF 1847.

THE "Boston Latin School Association" was organized in the summer of 1844. At its first meeting, and at each subsequent annual meeting, it has appointed a committee "to collect materials for a Catalogue and history of the School." In accordance with a vote of the Association, directing the committee to publish the materials now in their hands for a Catalogue of the past members of the School, this volume is now published.

It will be seen at once that it is very incomplete. For some periods it is much more full than for others; but the lapse of time since the establishment of the School leaves large omissions, many of which can never be filled.

But the Association have hoped, that, by putting to press the various materials already collected for this Catalogue, it may induce gentlemen, who can make additions to the facts here stated, to furnish such materials, to be published in a second edition. This volume, therefore, is offered to those interested in the School, in the simple hope that their joint efforts may result in future in a more complete Catalogue.

For the earlier period of the School's history, the list of masters is more perfect than that of scholars. It is almost wholly compiled from the town records. The list of ushers before 1757 is probably deficient in many names.

The list of scholars has been derived from very various sources. It has been thought best, therefore, to divide it into chapters, that these several sources might be the more precisely designated.

For the century before Master Lovell, we have no means of ascertaining the names of pupils, excepting the authority of printed biographies of different individuals, and, in some instances, unpublished manuscripts. The few names which are inserted here for that century are those of persons who were unquestionably educated at our School. It has been deemed best to insert in a note the names of others, whom, without absolute certainty, we have reason to suppose to be of the number of the pupils of the School. The attention of antiquarians is particularly called to this list.

The catalogue which was kept of boys admitted through the whole of John Lovell's mastership, from 1734 to 1774, excepting the last year, is in the possession of the Association, in manuscript, in the handwriting of James Lovell, for many years usher under his father. This document is complete, but, unfortunately, the surnames only of most of the scholars are stated in it. It is here published without change, excepting that, in some instances, the committee have added the Christian name to the surname, where this designation of the individual is sustained on good authority. Where there was any room for doubt, they have in no case entered any Christian name, leaving it for future investigation to complete this part of the Catalogue.*

Mr. James Lovell had not entered in the manuscript catalogue the names of the boys who entered the School in the last year of his father's administration. With the exception, therefore, of a few names supplied by the memory of persons now living, the class of 1774 is not recorded in these lists.

Mr. Hunt's catalogue of the boys who entered the School during his time, between 1776 and 1805, is unfortunately lost. His manuscript returns to the School Committee of the boys in

* In most instances, this addition is made from the notes of Rev. Dr. Homer, of Newton, of our class of 1766. In 1817, or before that time, he made a copy, now in the possession of the committee, of Lovell's manuscript catalogue. In that copy he added the Christian names of several persons, and from his manuscript the Christian names of the following scholars have been taken, for which we have no other authority:—Peter Johonnot, Caleb Blanchard, 1738; William Tidmarsh, 1744; William Gray, Thomas Fitch, Stephen Salisbury, Henry Fletcher, Thomas Whiting, Robert Williams, Nathaniel Waterhouse, Jonathan Mitchel Sewall, Stephen Sewall, 1755; William Sanford Oliver, Josiah Waters, John Gore, Samuel Pitts, William Story, James Walker, Charles Jarvis, Joseph Peirce, 1756; James Dennie, William Crombie, Jonathan Pollard, Samuel Hughes, William Savage, 1757; Isaac Story, Gillam Butler, Thomas Hooper, Samuel Gore, Edward Gray, Lendall Pitts, John Barrett, John Simpson, William Cooper, William Coffin, William Phillips, William Tyler, Thomas Melvil, Joseph Hubbard, William Lewis, Ward Hallowell, Henry Pelham, Edward Gray, 1758; Thomas Carnes, 1762; Samuel Torrey, William Newman, 1765; Thomas Hulme, Jeremiah Belknap, Benjamin Pratt, James Millar Church, William Rhodes, 1767; William Coffin, Thomas Coffin, Sylvanus Bourn, Robert Calef, Benjamin Cobb, Samuel Cobb, William Crosswell, Thomas Amory, Martin Gay, Robert Pierpont, Fitch Pool, Benjamin Homer, 1768; Nathaniel Taylor, Jonathan Perry Coffin, William Coffin, 1769; Nathan Frazier, 1773.

Dr. Homer was nearly contemporary with almost all these persons, and must have been at school with most of them. It seemed advisable, therefore, to insert their whole names as he has given them, with this note, showing where he has added anything to the contemporary manuscript of Lovell. In a few instances the committee have detected errors in his memoranda, and have, of course, then rejected them; but they trust that those here inserted may be relied upon.

On other authorities, which are supposed to be beyond doubt, the Christian names have been added in the cases of Richard Checkley, 1734; James Allen, 1745; William Henshaw, 1746; Joseph Allen, 1757; Henry Knox, 1758; Joshua Blanchard, 1763; Benjamin Vincent, William Palfrey, 1749; Francis Johonnot, 1762; Nathaniel Whitworth, 1764; Thomas Wolcott, 1766; Samuel Blodget, Caleb Blodget, 1767; Mather Byles Brown, John Bartlett, 1763; Samuel Holbrook, 1769; John McLane, 1772; John Lovell, Samuel Lamb, Benjamin Homans, Roland Gilson, Joshua Green, 1773.

the School in 1789, 1790, 1794, are extant, and are here published. Our only other sources for lists of his pupils are one or two of Mr. Carter's returns of the "Latin boys" who went to his writing school, and the recollections of different gentlemen now or recently living, who were under his care. To these recollections, as will be seen, we are largely indebted. But it has proved impossible to reconcile them perfectly with each other, or to compile from them lists approaching the completeness of contemporary catalogues. It is particularly difficult to give the precise dates to names thus collected.

There is a manuscript list, drawn up in May 12, 1808, of the boys at that time in the School. Excepting this, there is no contemporary record of names in Mr. William Biglow's administration, from 1805 to 1814. We have supplied the deficiency as far as possible from the recollections of gentlemen who have favored us with communications. The period for which we have relied mainly on such communications, from 1774 to 1814, is comprehended in Chapter III. Mr. Gould's and Mr. Leverett's printed catalogues, from 1819 to 1829 inclusive, are in the possession of the Association, and are reprinted below.

From 1816 to the present time the School records show the names of all those fitted for college in the School.

From 1831 to 1835, catalogues were printed by Mr. Dillaway. The School records from 1831 to the present time are complete.

Chapter IV. extends from 1815 to 1836. From 1774 to 1836 we have attempted to place scholars' names in those classes with which, through most of their course, they were connected. But the frequency of promotions, and of the reorganization of classes and divisions, of course makes such an arrangement difficult. Gentlemen will remember that they were, at different times of their school course, connected with different schoolmates, and thus may find their names separated here from those whom they most frequently recollect as their classmates. It will be remembered, too, that two divisions of the same class may have been widely separated at school, while, of course, their members are intermingled here.

Chapter V., beginning in 1836, when Mr. Dixwell took charge of the School, is printed simply from the School registers, stating the year of entrance of each scholar. Of course those who completed the course in less than five years are named with others, who, though entering with them, left the School after them.

From what has been said, it will be seen that the principal deficiencies in this edition of this catalogue are the very great one from 1635-1734, the unfortunate omission of Christian names in Mr. James Lovell's catalogue, and the omissions, for want of further materials, of names between 1774 and 1819. It is possible that some names are missing from the classes of 1829 and 1830.

No one can regret such deficiencies more than the Historical Committee. Under direction of the Association they publish this volume, with the consciousness that it is thus defective, earnestly requesting those who can add any thing to its completeness to send them every suggestion for improving it in future. Gentlemen are now living connected with, or descended from, Benjamin Tompson, Ezekiel Cheever, Dr. Nathaniel Williams, Edward Wigglesworth, Jeremiah Gridley, and Daniel Henchman, Masters in our School in the first century of its existence. We are not without hopes, therefore, of some additions of interest to the first chapter of this Catalogue.

It is certain that future labor will make many additions to the subsequent chapters.

We append to the list of our Masters such a list as we can make of the Masters of the North Grammar School, instituted in 1713, and with sundry interruptions continued till 1789, when its pupils were transferred to the South Latin School.

It is difficult for the committee to acknowledge all the favors which they have received in the collection of the materials for a catalogue here published. The late Judge Davis presented to the Association the Lovell manuscript alluded to above. It was given to him more than thirty years since by Mr. James S. Lovell, son of Mr. James Lovell, its author. Judge Davis was kind enough, in the winter of 1845, to make a complete and accurate copy of it for the Association, which was enriched by valuable notes of his own. He also gave to the Association the only catalogue extant of the boys in Mr. Biglow's time.

We are indebted to Mr. William Bentley Fowle for the use of the valuable copy of the Lovell catalogue made by Dr. Homer, and for other notes of interest.

It will be seen that Mr. Gould's history of the School, and Snow's history of the town, have been resorted to in the arrangement of the list of Masters.

The committee must also express their obligation to the City Clerk, Mr. McCleary; the City Treasurer, Mr. Dunn; to Mr. Haven, Librarian of the Antiquarian Society, Worcester; Dr. Harris and Mr. Sibley, of the College Library, and Mr. Felt, of the Historical Library, for the use of volumes and manuscripts under their charge. They have been largely indebted, also, to Hon. Harrison Gray Otis, to the late Rev. Dr. Thomas Gray, the late Samuel H. Hewes, Esq.; to Joseph Sewall, Esq., Rev. T. C. Thacher, Samuel Payson, Esq., Hon. Charles Jackson, Dr. James Jackson, Thomas Walley, Esq., H. Roby, Esq., Robert Lash, Peele Dabney, Hon. Edward Everett, Dr. S. D. Townsend, Hon. John Gorham Palfrey, William Hayden, Esq., Rev. Samuel Gilman, Rev. Dr. N. L. Frothingham, Ellis Gray Loring, Esq., John L. Hayes, Esq., of Portsmouth, N. H., Rev. Cazneau Palfrey, Rev. Samuel May, jr., Charles Warren, Esq., Robert Treat Paine, Esq., Edward Wigglesworth, Esq., Francis Jenks, Esq., Dr. B. B. Appleton, Charles H. Parker, Esq., Hon. John C. Park, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, D. C. Ballard, Esq., J. L. English, Esq., Thomas Bulfinch, Esq., R. G. Parker, Esq., George P. Sanger, Esq., Rev. Ebenezer Cheever of Newark, N. J., Nathaniel Bradstreet Shurtleff, M. D., W. H. S. Jordan, Esq., Duncan Bradford, Esq., Thomas S. English, Esq., Thomas B. Curtis, Esq., Mr. Edward Tuckerman, Mr. William T. Harris, Rev. J. F. W. Ware, William W. Greenough, Esq., Mr. William J. Delano, Mr. Alexander H. Everett, jr., Mr. Erastus C. Pease, Messrs. Metcalf & Co.; to Mrs. Fannie Hunt, Mrs. Tompson of Portsmouth, N. H., and to other persons who will find the information furnished in their kind communications embodied in the following pages.

The Association's committee on the History of the School in 1844, consisted of B. A. Gould, William Wells, S. J. Bridge, John C. Park, Charles K. Dillaway, E. S. Dixwell, Francis Gardner, and Edward E. Hale. In 1845, 1846 and 1847, of most of the same gentlemen, with the addition of Rev. Messrs. Young and Ellis, and of Messrs. Joseph Hussey and Thomas Farrington.

The date given to a class is always that when it joined the School.

The memoranda of titles and the dates of deaths are inserted in a few instances, without any effort for completeness.

Where a literary degree is affixed to any name, it is one given by our University at Cambridge, unless some other institution is specified.

The names of ordained ministers are printed in Italics.

The death of any person is noted by a star against his name. Two stars signify that his connection with the School was closed by his death.

In Chapter II. those pupils who completed the whole course are distinguished by the sign. † In several cases, where they completed the course in a term shorter or longer than the usual period of seven years, that fact is indicated by a figure annexed to the †; †5 meaning that the pupil completed the full course in five years.

The interruption which will be noticed between April 19, 1775, and November 8, 1776, is the suspension caused by hostilities, the siege of the town, and consequent confusion. The school was resumed, by vote of the town, on the day last named.

Since 1814 the regular course has been one of five years. Some occasional changes in its length between 1789 and 1814 are indicated in notes to the catalogue.

The order of names in the second chapter follows that of the manuscript from which it is printed.* It is believed, however, that in later years, at least, that order was merely the order in which the boys came to the examination on the day appointed for it.† The first comer stood first on the register, and so of the rest. Until 1814 boys usually entered at the age of seven years. In 1814 a regulation was made by which none younger than nine years old were admitted. In 1836 the limit was fixed at ten years. In 1847 it has been fixed at twelve years of age.

The materials gradually collected for a sketch of the history of this School are now so full, that the committee trust that in a future edition of this catalogue such a sketch may be laid before its Alumni. It will be seen from this catalogue that the School is the oldest institution for learning in the United States. Its history has been closely connected with that of the influence and worth of the town which established it.

Boston, August 9, 1847.

EDITORIAL NOTE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

The rules adopted by the Committee in preparing the Catalogue in 1847 have been followed in the present edition as far as possible. All names are inserted under the year of entrance, and in cases of re-entrance are not repeated. Names of ordained ministers are in italics. The name of the College by which they were conferred is appended to all literary degrees, except that when a person is a graduate of any college, all subsequent degrees, if not otherwise indicated, are to be understood as given by his Alma Mater, and when no date is given, the degree was received in course.

The dates of death are given as perfectly as it has been possible to ascertain them, but many have probably escaped our notice. A star against a name signifies the death of the person, and two stars that he died while a member of the School. With the names of instructors, all literary degrees and other titles of honor are given under the highest official position held in the School. On some of the pages the numerical order of the notes may be incorrect, owing to the insertion in the plates of additional matter obtained after the pages were stereotyped.

* See note at 1738.

† H. G. Otis describes this distinctly—that the boys tried to be at Lovell's house early for examination.

* The 13th of the 2d moneth, 1635. . . . Att a Generall meeting upon publique notice . . . Likewise it was then generally agreed upon, that our brother, Philemon Pormort, shalbe intreated to become schole-master, for the teaching and nourtering of children with us. Boston Town Records, p. 3.

We find this name variously spelled Pormort, Portmort, Pormont, Portmont, Pormorte, Purmont, Permont, Porment, Pormet, Purmount; but in Boston Town Records and in the registry of his marriage, Pormort. He married, at Alford, England, Susannah, dau. of Wm. Bellingham. Children, Elizabeth, b. Feb., 1628-9, [m. Nathaniel Adams, of Boston, Nov. 24, 1642.] Martha, b. Nov. 24, 1633.

28, 6th Month, 1634, Philemon Pormort and Susann his wife, received into First Church. Lazarus the sonne of Philemon Pormort and Susan his wife was borne 28° (12°) 1635. Annah the daughter (of the same) 3° (2°) 1638. Pedajah the sonne (of the same) 3° (4°) 1640. Susan the wife of Philemon Pormort dyed 29 (10) 1642. Boston Town Records.

After the banishment of Rev. John Wheelwright in 1638 for his adhesion to Mrs. Hutchinson, and for his seditious sermon, he established himself in Exeter. Pormort did not sign the "Remonstrance," but sympathized with him, and "1638, 6th of 11 moneth," with Wheelwright and others, was dismissed from First Church, Boston, "unto the Church of Christ at the falls of Paschataqua, if they be rightly gathered and ordered." He afterwards went to Wells, and seems to have returned to Boston.

At a general meeting of the richer inhabitants there was given toward the maintenance of a free schoolmaster for the youth with us, Mr. Daniel Maud, being now also chosen thereunto. Rev. Daniel Maude arrived from England with Richard Mather in the "James," on the 3d of June, 1635, a little after the school had been opened. He had been educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, and was a student there while John Wilson and Ezekiel

Rogers were at Christ's. Wilson took his first degree the year before Maude, and they two are the oldest Cambridge graduates who came to New England. At the time he became our Head Master he was about fifty years old. He was admitted to the First Church, Oct. 25, 1635,—and admitted freeman May 25, 1636. Mr. Savage is mistaken in thinking that the customary token of respect is omitted in the record: for he appears as "Mr. Daniell Maude." It has been suggested that he sympathized with Wheelwright. But he was not one of the signers of the "Remonstrance,"—and, when, in 1642, the Church in Dover, N. H., needed a minister, and sent to the Boston Elders to desire their help, these elders named Mr. Maude, who went there in 1643, and ministered to that congregation, till he died in 1655. He left no children. Mather says he had been a minister in England: Hubbard, that he was "a good man, of a serious spirit and of a peaceable and quiet disposition." His salary at Dover was forty pounds a year.

* The Town Record of Boston, says only "Mr." Woodbridge. We believe him to have been the first minister of Andover, in whose biography by Mather there is a year or two at this time unaccounted for. Mather, however, does not say that he kept the School. He was born at Stanton, near Highworth, in Wiltshire, England, about 1613. He went to Oxford, and remained till required to take the oath of conformity; declining to do which he took a course of private studies. He came to New England about 1634. His biography is in Mather's Magnalia, Book iii. p. 219.

The records of the town give us the following additional items of information in regard to him: 1644, 26. 1. Seth Woodmancy born, son of Robert and Margaret. Aug. 26th, 1658, Mr. Woodmansy's house to be repaired.

Mr. Woodmansy is the name of a settler in Ipswich in 1641 who had removed thence before 1648. N. E. Hist. Gen. Reg. ii. 174. For Robert Woodmansey's Will, see ib. xvi. 55.

‡ Benjamin Tompson was son of Rev. Wm. Tompson of Braintree. He was a physician, and poet. He was the author of an elegy on S. Whiting in Mather's Magnalia. In 1700 he became Master of the Grammar School in Roxbury. He died in 1714, aged 71. There is a letter from him to Increase Mather in the Mather papers, Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll. 4th series, Vol. VIII, p. 635.

Aug. 21,

Died Aug. 21, 1708.

* Ezekiel Cheever was born in London, Jan. 25th, 1614. There is a tradition that he was, when a boy, at St. Paul's school in London. He came to Boston, in New England, in June, 1637; went, probably the next spring, to New Haven; there married and kept school. He removed from there to Ipswich, Mass., in December, 1650, and was the first Master of its Grammar or Free School. His first wife died in New Haven in 1649. At Ipswich, Nov. 18th, 1652, he married for his second wife, Ellen Lathrop of Beverly. He next moved to Charlestown and entered upon the duties of School Master there, Nov. 26, 1661, at £30 a year. From Charlestown he came to Boston. At a meeting of the magistrates held the 29th of the 10 mo. 1670, "it was agreed and ordered that Mr. Ezechieell Cheeuers should be called to, & installed in, the ffree schoole as head Master thereof, which he, beinge then present, accepted of: likewise that Mr. Tompson should be invited to be an assistant to Mr. Cheeuers in his worke in the schoole; wch Mr. Tompson beinge present desired time to consider of, & to giue his answer: And vpon the third day of January gaue his answer to Major Generall Leueret in the negative, he haueinge had, and accepted of a call to Charlestowne."

The 6th day of 11 mo the Magistrates met again and "beinge met repaired to the schoole and sent for Mr. Tomson who, when he came, declared his remouall to Charlestowne—and resigned vp the possession of the schoole & schoole house to the Gouernr & ca, who deliued the key & possession of the schoole to Mr Ezechieell Cheeuers as the sole Mastr. thereof. And it was further agreed that the said Mr. Cheeuers should be allowed sixty pound p an. for his seruice in the schoole, out of the towne rates, & rents that belonge to the schoole—and the possession & vse of ye schoole house."

Among the Hutchinson papers at the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, is one containing a petition from Ezekiel Cheever to Sr: Edmund Andros, Governor, that he may continue in his place as schoolmaster and may receive satisfaction for the arrears of salary due him.

At a meeting of the selectmen of Boston, May 29, 1693, it was ordered that Mr Ezekell Cheever and the other school-master shall be paid quarterly, and that orders be passed to the Treasurer for it Mr Cheever salary to be sixty pounds in money.

In 1699, his grandson Ezekiel Lewis, (q. v.) was appointed his assistant.

At a town meeting, March 10, 1701, it was "Voted that a House be Built for Old Mr Ezek Cheever the Latine School Master, and it was further Voted, that the Selectmen to Take Care about the Building of it."

At a Town Meeting March 13, 1703-4, "it was Voted that a New School House be build instead of the Old School House in wch Mr Ezekeill Chever teacheth, and it is Left wth the Selectmen to get the same accomplished."

The book with which his name is usually associated, "The Accidence," was probably written by him when in New Haven. This book passed through eighteen editions before the Revolution, and was used as generally as any elementary work ever known, says Dr. Bentley of Salem; and Mr. Samuel Walker says it was the favorite little book of our youthful days, and "has probably done more to inspire young minds with the love of the study of the Latin language than any other work of the kind, since the first settlement of the country." "I have found it the best book for beginners in Latin, . . and no work of the kind have I ever known, that contains so much useful matter in so small a compass." Rev. Thaddeus Mason Harris says:—"I know of no elementary work so well calculated for the beginner as Cheever's Accidence,—preeminently perspicuous, concise and comprehensive." He was also author of a work entitled "Scripture Prophecies Explained,"

A rare instance of Piety, Health, Strength, Serviceableness. The Welfare of the Province was much upon his spirit. He abominated perriwigs." Augt. 23, 1708.—Judge Sewall says, "Mr Cheever was buried from the Schoolhouse. The Govr. Councillors, Ministers, Justices, Gentlemen there. Mr. Williams made a handsome Latin Oration in his Honour." Rev. Dr. Cotton Mather preached his funeral sermon, which was printed and reprinted.

Gov. Hutchinson speaks of him as "venerable, not merely for his great age, 94, but for having been the school master of most of the principal gentlemen in Boston who were then upon the stage. He is not the only master who kept his lamp longer lighted than otherwise it would have been, by a supply of oil from his scholars."

* N. Williams married Anne, daughter of Dr. Sam'l Bradstreet. He was ordained in 1698 as an "Evangelist," for one of the West India Islands. The climate proved unhealthy, and he returned to Boston. He practiced medicine, while Master of the School, and is spoken of as "the beloved physician;" and was the author of a tract on "Small Pox." † John Lovell, eldest son of John and Priscilla (Gardiner) Lovell, born at Boston, June 16, 1710. He was a stern rough man, though in many regards a very good man. His pupils were as much afraid of him as if he were a lion. Annually there was a visitation of the Selectmen, when the boys were examined in public. The lower classes recited in their regular studies, but the best scholar of the highest class delivered a Valedictory Oration in Latin. The boys doubted if the Selectmen knew much about it. There was a dinner afterwards in Faneuil Hall, but none of the boys attended. April 19, 1775, the school was dismissed by Master Lovell with the words: "War's begun—school's done." He delivered the first public address in Faneuil Hall, March 14, 1742, at the town meeting called on occasion of the decease of Peter Faneuil. He was a loyalist, and went to Halifax with the British troops, March, 1776, and died there in 1778. His portrait, said to be by Nathl. Smibert, (L. S. 1744,) is at Harvard College, and a copy of it by Badger, presented to the B. L. S. Association by Robert G. Shaw, Esq., hangs in the school hall.

The first Latin School-house was situated in the burying-ground of King's Chapel, nearly opposite to the School-house, still remembered by many, on the site afterwards occupied by Horticultural Hall, and since by the Parker House; and was removed in 1748 at the expense of the proprietors of that church, for their own accommodation. "Apr. 4, 1748, the Church petitioned the town for a grant of forty-four feet of land east of the old chapel; and proposed to give the town a lot of land at the upper end of a lane or passage fronting the present School-house, and to erect thereon a new School-house of like dimensions with the present," &c. Mr. Lovell was unfriendly to the views of the Church, and threw obstacles in the way. Nevertheless, on April 18, 1748, the town agreed to grant to King's Chapel a piece of land to enlarge and rebuild; and to take down the old Latin Grammar School-house, at a tumultuous meeting, voting by yeas and nays. Yeas 205; nays 197.

In Lovell's day the school house was of one story with an attic above, a cupola with a bell in front, and but one school room. Master Lovell sat directly opposite the entrance; Master James at the left hand corner of the entrance. School was always opened with prayer. In summer, school began at 7, closed at 11, and began at 1 in the afternoon. At 9 in the morning, however, all the forms were dismissed to go to Mr Holbrook in West Street, to learn to write and cipher. They had strict orders from Lovell not to injure the young trees which Mr. Paddock had set out by the Granary Burying Ground. The only examination for admission was in reading in the Bible. This was at Master Lovell's house. The studies afterwards were the Accidence, Nomenclatura Brevis, Corderius, and later Ovid, Virgil, and Terence, and those after the fourth form made Latin from a book called "Introduction to making Latin." In Greek, they read the Testament only.

The town provided Mr. Lovell with a dwelling house, situated in School-street, nearly in front of the new (1832) Court-house, to which was attached an extensive garden extending back towards Court Street, about as far as to the spot where the jail used to stand. This garden was cultivated for Mr. Lovell, free of all expense, by the assistance of the best boys of the school, who, as a reward of merit, were permitted to work in it. The same good boys were also indulged with the privilege of sawing his wood and bottling his cider, and of laughing as much as they pleased while performing these delightful offices.

Mr. Lovell usually passed the vacations, one of which was at Election, and the other at Commencement, with a fishing party, at Spot Pond, in Stoneham, and "the boys heard with glee that he and the gentleman who accompanied him passed their time pleasantly in telling funny stories, and laughing very loudly."

* Samuel Hunt, son of John Hunt, of Watertown, born October 25, 1745. Studied divinity, and preached some time at "Little Cambridge," now Brighton. Appointed Master of the North Grammar School, Boston, and inducted into office April 20, 1767. Transferred to the South Grammar School, June, 1776. He was a conscientious man, who sought, in the traditional way, to train his pupils in learning and virtue. By the terms of his settlement he had reason to consider himself established in his office for life, with a salary of £200, and certain perquisites, such as admission fees, &c., besides a house to live in. The spirit of the times after the Revolution met his control with hostility; and the officials failed to uphold his authority. The perquisites were taken away in 1784, and a grant of £30 made in lieu thereof. His house was taken away in 1790, and no equivalent given. Other encroachments on his income were made, which straitened his circumstances. He left office March 1, 1805, and retired to Watertown, where for several years he educated private pupils for college. June 10, 1816, he left Massachusetts for Lexington, Ky., and died there Oct. 8, 1816. He married, first, Mary Dixwell, his cousin, by whom he had six children. Afterward he married Mrs. Elizabeth (Gibbes) Shepherd, of South Carolina, and by her had six children. His descendants by the second marriage survive in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and South Carolina, and continue the name.

During the term of office of Master Hunt, it was, Feb. 6, 1801, Voted, that in all applications for the office of Master or Usher of any Grammar School in this town, an education in some University shall be considered an indispensable requisite.

* William Biglow, poet and schoolmaster, born at Natick, Mass., Sept. 22, 1773, taught school in Salem, and then took charge of the Latin School in Boston, preaching occasionally, and writing for periodicals. He afterwards taught a village school in Maine, and was ultimately proof reader in the University printing office, Cambridge. In 1796, he edited the Village Messenger of Amherst, N. H.; he also edited and contributed to the Federal Orrery and Mass. Mag; July 18, 1799, delivered at Cambridge a Poem entitled Education; in 1808, published The Youth's Library; in 1809, Introduction to the Making of Latin; and in 1830 Histories of Natick, and of Sherburne, Mass.

F. S. Drake's Dict. of American Biography; also Buckingham's Reminiscences, ii. 276.

He wrote the "Carmen Sæculare," sung at the Centennial of Harvard College in 1836, well remembered as a piece of amusing macaronic Latin poetry.

A pupil who entered in 1813, says, that when he was examined for admission, the school was kept in an old barn in Cole's Lane, now Portland Street, because a new building was in progress on the School Street site.

† Benjamin Apthorp Gould born in Lancaster, Mass., June 15, 1787. His father was a Captain in the Revolutionary army, and a member of the Society of the Cincinnati. The family removed to Newburyport early in the present century. He studied in the schools there and entered Harvard University in 1810, and, before graduation, was appointed, by the recommendation of President Kirkland, to fill a sudden vacancy in the Mastership of the Latin School, giving such satisfaction that he was continued there, and allowed his degree. Under his administration the school rapidly advanced in reputation and numbers, till, from occupying only the third story of the old school house in School Street, it grew to fill the whole building. Mr. Gould's personal influence in producing among his numerous pupils a high standard of moral and intellectual excellence, was marked and powerful. His kind and uniformly just government gained the reverence and love of all who came under his discipline. Whilst connected with the Latin School he published editions of Adam's Latin Grammar, revised and annotated by himself; also of Ovid, of Virgil and of Horace, with copious and valuable notes of his own. These were the standard editions for several years. After leaving the Latin School, he became an honored and successful merchant in the East India trade. He married Dec. 2, 1823, Lucretia Dana Goddard, daughter of Nathaniel Goddard, Esq., a prominent merchant of Boston, and became the father of four children. He died in Boston, Oct. 24, 1859.

‡ Frederic Percival Leverett, son of Benjamin and Comfort Marshall Leverett, born at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1803. His father, who had been a merchant in that city, having removed to Boston, he was educated at the Latin School, and at twelve was ready for College, entering at the age of fourteen. After graduating he entered the office of Dr. Jacob Bigelow, but the support of his father's family early devolving upon him, he gave up the study of a profession, and was appointed Sub-master of the Latin School in 1824, and Head Master in 1828. He was a remarkable Latin, Greek, and Mathematical scholar. Beside the Latin Lexicon, which he edited, which is a monument of his industry and learning, he edited and published the Satires of Juvenal, and the Commentaries of Cæsar, with excellent notes. In managing the school he showed great skill. The boys loved and respected him, although his disposition was not a cheerful one, and became, after the death of his wife, somewhat gloomy. After resigning his position, he established a school for boys in Boston, and was very successful, but he never liked the work of a teacher, performing it only under a sense of duty to his family, and with a feeling of regret that other professions had been closed to him. He married Matilda Gorham, a lady from the West Indies. He died October 5, 1836.

* Charles Knapp Dillaway, born in Roxbury, October 19, 1804. He resigned his position owing to ill health, and for several years taught a private school for boys in Boston, and later, for young ladies in Roxbury. He has been an active member of many literary, scientific, and charitable societies, and published the following books: twelve volumes of Latin Classics, with notes, viz: eight of Cicero, and one each of Plautus, Terence, Quintilian, and Tacitus; also, the Colloquies of Erasmus; Roman Antiquities and Mythology; History of the Roxbury Latin School; and Biographical Sketches of many noted men. He assisted John Pickering, LL. D., in preparing his Greek Lexicon, J. E. Worcester, LL. D., in his English Dictionary, and has contributed frequently to periodical literature, besides being often called upon to teach our language to foreigners, among whom he has had many Japanese pupils. He married Martha Ruggles Porter, daughter of Rev. Huntington Porter, and has had five children.

† Epes Sargent Dixwell, second son of John Dixwell, M. D., born in Boston, December 27, 1807. He was Usher in the English High School from 1827 until October, 1828; then Sub-Master in the Public Latin School until the summer of 1830. He was admitted to the Bar in 1833, and invited in November, 1836, to become Head Master of the Public Latin School, and was inducted into office December 5, 1836. He removed to Cambridge in 1842. In 1851, the City Council having voted that all their employes must reside within the city limits, he resigned, and set up a private Latin School to fit lads for College. This was successful, and continued for twenty-one years until 1872. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and of other learned bodies. He married June 4, 1839, Mary I. Bowditch, and has six children. See Annual Reports of the School Committee from 1837 to 1851 inclusive for the character of his administration. The Latin School Association was suggested and begun by him, and the funds for beginning its Library and Cabinet were collected by his influence.

In 1844, while he was Master, the School-house in Bedford Street was first occupied.

He was the editor of an Abridgment of Leverett's Latin Lexicon, and associate editor of a series of Latin School Classics. See the Memorial, containing an Address by Wm. R. Dimmock, LL.D., published by the Boston Latin School Association, 1876.

† Augustine Milton Gay, born in Francestown, N. H., Nov. 15, 1827. He was prepared for College at Phillips Academy, Andover, and was graduated at Amherst College in 1850. The same year he was appointed Sub-Master, and soon after, Master of the Charlestown High School. In 1861 he resigned this position, and kept a private school for young ladies in Boston. In 1865 he was elected Sub-Master in the Latin School. In June, 1876, he was elected Head Master. His death occurred in Boston, Nov. 3, 1876. He was for a year one of the Editors of the Massachusetts Teacher, and while in the Latin School, an associate editor of several Latin text-books, of which the most prominent are the Latin School Series, of two volumes, containing extracts from Phædrus, Justin, Nepos, Ovid, Curtius and Cicero. He married July 26, 1860, Clara R. Willey of Charlestown, and had one daughter.

‡ Moses Merrill, born in Methuen, Mass., Sept. 14, 1833. He was prepared for College at Phillips Academy, Andover; was graduated at Harvard in 1856. He was Principal of the Shepard School, Cambridge, till October, 1858. He married November 26, 1857, Sarah Ann White of Methuen, and has had four children. Appointed teacher in the Boston Latin School, October, 1858.

In 1880, while he was Master, the School removed from Bedford Street to the new edifice in Warren Avenue.

1666 DANIEL HENCHMAN,*

* March 12th, 1666 The towne agreed with Mr. Daniell Hincheman for £40 per ann to assist Mr. Woodmansey in the Grammar Schoole and teach children to wrighte—the year to begin March 1 1665-6.

In 1668, Nov. 7, the General Court appointed Mr. Daniel Hinckman (sic) with three others a Committee to arrange about the location of the town afterwards Worcester. July 13, 1674, this Committee took a deed of the plantation from the Indians, where he is called Daniel Hinchman of Boston, brewer. In the record of the General Court, May 19, 1683, approving the plan for laying out the plantation of Quansiggamon, (sic) his name appears as one of the active proprietors. [Mass. Records, v. 413.] In 1684 the plantation was called Worcester. In May, 1685, he was present in the town with his son Nathaniel,—but in 1686 he died.

Philip's War broke out in 1675, and Hinchman served in it as Captain of a Company which saw active service constantly, and at the end was a Major. [See extracts from one of his reports in Hubbard's Ind. Wars, v. 1, p. 86.]

June 26, 1675, two days after Philip's War broke out by the murders in Swanzey, a foot company under Capt. Daniel Hinchman, and a troop under Capt. Thomas Prentice, were sent from Boston towards Mt. Hope, a message for assistance having been received from Plymouth Colony.

"It being late in the afternoon before they began to march, the central eclipse of the moon in Capricorn happened in the evening before they came up to the Neponset river about twenty miles from Boston, which occasioned them to make a Halt, for a little repast till the moon recovered her light again. Some melancholy fancies would not be persuaded, but that the eclipse falling out at that instant of time was ominous, conceiving also that in the centre of the moon, they discovered an unusual black spot, not a little resembling the scalp of an Indian."

Hubbard's Indian Wars, v. 1, p. 67.

This expedition of Hinchman and Prentice, afterwards joined by Mosely and Cudworth of the Plymouth troops, only drove Philip to the west. Hinchman with a hundred men was left to watch and follow them, while the rest of the force returned to Boston. He was ordered to disband his men some time in midsummer.

Nov. 1675. He marched again on an expedition against Hassanemesit, (Grafton,) which had but little result.

He was not one of the six captains appointed for the army under Winslow, which assembled at Dodham, Dec. 9, 1675, and was not in the attack on the Narragansett fort, Dec. 19, 1675, which broke the Indian power; but April 27th, 1678, he was out as Captain of a company of horse, commander in chief of three of horse, and three of foot, to range toward Hassanemesit. His troops returned and were discharged "by reason of an epidemical cold, at that time prevailing through the country," and because of the rain which prevented their following the enemy, May 10th; but May 30th, 1676, they were called together again, and were out as far as Hadley, in which Hinchman killed and took about eighty-four of the enemy without the loss of any of his own men. This expedition ended early in July.

Henchman is thus seen to have been the principal man among the Massachusetts captains. "Capt. Daniel Henchman planted the Great Elm on Boston Common in 1670."

Boston Transcript, July 3, 1848.

A tradition has existed in the Hancock family, passed down by Mrs. Lydia Hancock, wife of Thomas, that her grandfather, Hezekiah Henchman, set out the tree when he was a boy; which would have been over two hundred years ago, as his father, Daniel, the old schoolmaster, left Boston as early as 1674. Other accounts, from the Henchman family, give the honor to the old schoolmaster, who wielded the sword as well as the birches, — for he commanded the famous Artillery Company, and served in King Philip's War in 1675. The last tradition says that the tree was set out as a shelter for the company.

N. B. Shurtleff's Top. and Hist. Descr. of Boston, p. 335.

Dr. Shurtleff states the reasons for doubting this tradition, and for supposing that the tree was of good size and growing in 1630 when Boston was settled. Hist. of Anc. and Hon. Art. Co. 2d edit. p. 195; also Histor. Catal. of the Old South Church, p. 229.

* May 8, 1699, "At Publick Town Meeting of the Inhabitants of Boston" it "was Voted by sd Inhabitants, That the Selectmen shall agree wth mr Ezekiel Lewis for his Salary as an assistant to his Grandfather mr Ezekiel Cheever in the Latine School, not Exceeding forty pounds p year."

Hassam on Cheever, p. 12.

At a Town meeting May 12, 1701, "Whereas Mr. Ezekiel Lewis Assistant to Mr. Cheever in the Government of the Latin free School, hath represented unto the Town that the sum of forty pounds per annum is not sufficient for his comfortable subsistence. The Town by their Vote have granted that hence forward he be Allowed Forty five per annum, during his being continued in that Situation.

Town Records, ii, 267.

May 13, 1703 "Sundry of the ministers in this Town having recommended mr Nathl Williams to be a fitt person to be joyned wth mr Chever in Governmt of the Lattin School, ordered that Sd mr Williams be Treated with abt the Same." Selectmen's Minutes, i, 72.

Town Records, ii, 268.

At a town meeting held June 25, 1703 "The Town by their vote do declare their approbation of mr Nathaniell Williams to be an assistant to mr Ezekiel Chever in Governing & Instructing the youth at the Lattin School. † Edward Wigglesworth was born at Malden about the beginning of the year 1693. At College he had a high standing for general scholarship, and was distinguished for his classical attainments. He studied theology after graduation, and was licensed to preach. A certificate signed by Mr. Nathaniel Williams, 1714-5, proves that he was a teacher in our School for at least a quarter before October, 1714. He was not a preacher attractive to the multitude, and so never settled as a pastor, but was appreciated by the intelligent, and when Thomas Hollis, of London, established the professorship at Harvard College, bearing his name, was nominated by him as its first occupant, and inducted into office, October 24, 1722. In 1724 he was elected a member of the Corporation of Harvard College. He was greatly distinguished for his benevolence. He continued to perform the duties of his professorship until within a few days of his death, which occurred January 16, 1765.

Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit, i. 275.

‡ In 1732 Jeremiah Gridley edited a newspaper called the Rehearsal, which almost weekly contained an essay on some historical, literary or political subject, generally, it is supposed, written by him. They abound in Latin allusions and quotations; the style is not bad nor uninteresting. There is a file in the Library of the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester, Mass. He was afterwards Attorney General, and as such opposed to Otis in the question of the Search Warrants. See Knapp's Biog. Sketches, p. 199.

‡ James Lovell, son of John Lovell, born at Boston, Oct. 31, 1737, Usher Latin School, 1757, was also Master of the North School, now Eliot School. In 1775, after the Battle of Bunker Hill, thirty-one persons, among whom was Mr. Lovell, were imprisoned in Boston Gaol by General Howe. At the evacuation of the city, March, 1776, he was carried to Halifax with the British troops, and was a prisoner in that city, while his father was also there as a loyalist refugee. Exchanged and returned to Boston, Nov. 30, 1776. Elected to Continental Congress, December, 1776. Receiver of Continental taxes, 1784. Collector of the Port of Boston, 1788-1789. Naval officer at Boston, 1790-1814. Died at Windham, Maine, July 14, 1815.

The London Political Register for 1780 says: "In the pockets of Warren, the Rebel commander killed at Bunker Hill, were found letters from James Lovell, a rebel spy, stating the number and disposition of the troops in Boston, with a variety of other information. The spy, instead of being sentenced to the gallows and executed, was only taken up and detained in custody, and when our army was at New York, he was discharged at the request of some of the Rebel chiefs. . . . Instead of being grateful for this, the instant he landed in the rebel territory, (he) wrote the commissary a most abusive letter; and by this infamous behavior, having arrived at the summit of villainy, was in the opinion of the rebels of Massachusetts deemed a fit person to represent them in Congress; accordingly, as soon as he set his foot in Boston, he was chosen one of their delegates to Congress. . . ."

Loring's One Hundred Boston Orators.

Mention is made of the imprisonment of Mr. Lovell in Boston in the "Diary of Peter Edes written during his confinement by the British, in Boston, in 1775, after the battle of Bunker Hill," Bangor, 1837; and in "a journal kept by John Leach during his confinement by the British in Boston Gaol in 1775," N. E. Hist. Gen. Reg., July, 1865, the originals of both of which are now in the possession of Henry H. Edes, Esq., of Boston, by whom they were kindly loaned to the Rev. Dr. Hale to read to the Latin School Association at its first annua dinner, November 8, 1876.

He delivered in the Old South Church April 2, 1771, An Oration, at the request of the Inhabitants of the Town of Boston to commemorate the Bloody Tragedy of the 5th of March, 1770, which is in the Library of the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester. ‡ "1794, Apr. 21, Chas. Cutler was introduced as usher." S. Hunt. Given in the old Catalogue as in office in 1796; he probably went out of office about 1799, and was re-appointed in 1800, as appears below.

* According to the School Committee records John Haskell was elected Master of the Centre Reading School, 27 June, 1800. Mr. Wm. G. Colburn has a note written by him, dated Centre School. In Fleet's Massachusetts Register for 1799, Samuel Hunt appears as Latin Grammar Master, Centre School; in 1803, Wm. Biglow is given as the same and John Haskell as English Grammar Master, Centre School, and the latter continues the same as late as 1817, when Mr. Benj. Aphorp Gould appears as Latin Grammar Master, Centre School. The Committee therefore feels justified in filling the blank of the edition of 1847. The same School Committee Records state that Benjamin Gleason applied for the Mastership of the West Reading School, 20 May, 1808, and the Committee has thought it not unlikely his is the name which should be inserted in the blank before Gleason.

† Assistant Master, equivalent to what was afterwards Sub-Master.

1713 RECOMPENSE WADSWORTH,† . . . 1713

(possibly Lat. Sch. 1696,) Harv. 1708, A. M.; died June 9, 1713.

* The Latin and Greek pupils of this School were transferred to the South Grammar School, Oct. 20, 1789, on the report of the Committee on Schools, accepted Oct. 16 of the same year.

† In the Catalogue of 1847, the date of Mr. Wadsworth's death is given April, 1713, but the Boston Transcript of Dec. 28, 1878, states that the Superintendent of Copp's Hill Burying Ground, on the 22d of that month, in opening a tomb, discovered an old gravestone with the following inscription, which seems to require a change of date:

Recompense Wadsworth, A. M. | First Master of the | Grammar Free School | at the | North End of Boston | Aged about 24 years | Died June the 9th 1713.

The same article gives the following copies from the Town Records:—

March 11, 1711-12.

At Town Meeting

Voted, That there be a free grammar school at the North End of Boston: and Voted, That Captain Thomas Hutchinson, Colonel Adams Winthrop, Mr. John Ruck, Captain Edmand Martyn and Mr. Samuel Greenwood be the committee relating to building said school house.

Voted, that the Selectmen be requested to procure a suitable master for said school.

March 9, 1712-13.

Voted, That it be left with the Selectmen, and they are empowered to introduce Mr. Recompense Wadsworth at the North, and to allow him sixty pounds for one year.

There would appear to have been a school in the North part of the town at a period much earlier than the establishment of this, for in the Hutchinson MSS. we find the following order of Gen. Andros, dated Boston, May 24th, 1687.

"By his Ex'cy's command: Upon petition of Joshua Natstock, and recommendation of many of the inhabitants of the N. part of the town of B. I do hereby appoint the said Joshua to be master of the public school there and to have and enjoy such profits and benefits and advantages, as have been heretofore paid and allowed to his predecessors."

When Andros's power ceased, the town lost no time in voting,—Records, June 24th, 1689, that the custom and practice of managing free schools be restored and continued.

† The old Catalogue gives Nov. 8 as the date of the transfer of Mr. Hunt to the South Grammar School; but in his manuscript Catalogue, he himself says he was appointed Master of the South Grammar School in June, 1776. No record of any ceremony of induction appears.

Mr. Hunt states that certain pupils were admitted in October, and in November before Nov. 8. It seems improbable, therefore, that the School was not in session some part of the time between June, 1776, and Nov. 8, 1776.

‡ Documents in the possession of Mr. E. S. Dixwell, show that Mr. Hunt was introduced into the North School April 20, 1767, instead of 1768 as given in the Catalogue of 1847.

The address made on that occasion by the person acting for the Selectmen contains these words:—

"Many plants of renown have been raised here by Master Wiswall who have done worthily in their day both in Church and State. Therefore let his name be mentioned with honour; tho' his great age and infirmities have obliged him to quit this post in which he for a great number of years served his town and Country with honour. The honour of succeeding him will devolve upon you; etc."

As the beginning of the same address says, "Children, this house has been unimproved for some time, perhaps to your disadvantage," it appears that Wiswall had been too old and infirm some time before April, 1767, to perform the duties of teacher. The inference would be that he was alive in April, 1767, when Hunt was appointed, and surrendered the place to him; so that, if the old Catalogue is correct in placing his death in Sept. 1767, it is possibly incorrect in assuming that he died in office.

* E. Langdon, son of Dea. Josiah Langdon, of N. North ch. Boston, and Eliz. (Sexton) his wife. He "was for many years adjunct master of the North Latin Grammar School, when Mr. Wiswall, the principal, was laboring under the infirmities of age. He was a very rigid disciplinarian. He had studied divinity: was a decided Socinian but was prevented from preaching by constitutional timidity."

Note to Memoir of Dr. J. Eliot, Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll. 2d series, vol. 1, p. 228.

† In the same article referred to in the note above, p. 230, it is stated that at the death of Wiswall in 1767, Josiah Langdon succeeded, but that he had no ability to govern and was soon dropped: that the pupils were sent for six weeks to the South Grammar School, under John Lovell and his son James; that then the school was put under James Lovell, but was in an unsettled condition for some time; and Master Hunt was inducted into office 1768, and staid till the Revolution, when he was put over the South Grammar School.

The documents recovered from Samuel Hunt's papers are at variance with some of these statements, and show them to be, at least in part, incorrect. Ephraim Langdon died in 1765, and Josiah Langdon succeeded him as Usher. Our Catalogue says he left office in 1766. The allegation in the Massachusetts Historical Society's Collections, that he "had no ability to govern and was soon dropped," had reference probably to the office of Usher. It may be true that Wiswall's age as far back as 1765 was so great as to incapacitate him from active service, and the school may have been under the charge of the Usher; and the statements about the pupils being sent to the South Grammar School, etc., may be true; but if so, the facts occurred before April 20, 1767.

*† JOHN LEVERETT³

Harv. 1680, A.M., S.T.B. 1692, F.R.S., Fellow and Pres. Harv., Judge Supr. Court of the Prov. of Massachusetts Bay.

*1724

The materials for this chapter are taken from the manuscripts of the persons named, or their teachers, or from published biographies.

The Committee charged with compiling this catalogue is satisfied that many of the following persons were pupils in the School, entering it about the time named; but without further information cannot say this certainly of any one of them. On full investigation, undoubtedly, many names could be added to the list, and many transferred from it to the list above of those who were certainly scholars.

1635 *Henry Saltonstall

Harv. 1642, M.D. Padua 1649, Fellow Oxford 1652.

*Tobias Barnard

⁴ Sprague says that Samuel Danforth, whose name was placed here in the former catalogue, was educated in Cambridge under the care of Rev. Thomas Shepard, and Sibley, (J. L.) agrees with him. Consequently the Committee feels justified in removing his name, and has inserted that of Samuel Bellingham, who appears as likely to have been at the School as the others of his Class mentioned.

* * * The names of the last six classes are here placed in the order in which they stood upon the School records at the times when these scholars left.

CHAPTER II.

THIS chapter, as stated in the edition of 1847, was originally made up from the manuscript Catalogue of Master Lovell, written out by Master James Lovell, which was very imperfect, giving in most instances only the surnames of the boys. Many names were supplied in that Catalogue, (as is stated in its preface,) from the memory of gentlemen then living, who had been pupils of the School. In preparing the present edition, the Committee has consulted such genealogical publications as are now accessible, most of them compiled since 1847, which give the history of families represented here by surnames only. The result has not been as great as was expected or hoped; but a few names have been ascertained of boys whose connection with the School is undoubted. These names have been inserted in the text, with references to the sources whence they have been derived. Sabine's Annals of the Loyalists of the American Revolution have furnished a few more names, some of which seem probable, and one or two certain pupils.

The Records of Births in the Town of Boston, between the years 1720 and 1780, have been examined carefully, and some names ascertained beyond question; while in other cases the names of two or more boys have been found who were of suitable age to have entered the School at the time their names appear on the list. Of these last, all the names have been given, in the hope that, in some instances, there may be relatives still living, who, from their knowledge or family papers, can give us authentic information, that such boys either could not have gone to the School, or undoubtedly did go. It will be as valuable to the Committee to know certainly that a boy did not go to the School, so that his name can be stricken out, as that he did go, so that it can be retained, since such elimination renders it more probable that the boy left was the pupil of the School.

It was impossible for the Committee to make an exhaustive examination of the list of deaths; so that it is possible, in cases where more than one name has been given to supply a vacancy, that one of the boys may have died in infancy, and so could not have entered the School in the year supposed; information of that fact in relation to any one, by again increasing the possibility of elimination, would add to the certainty in regard to those left.

The rule adopted by the Committee has been, that any boy who by the Town Records was about nine years of age, or in his ninth year, at the time the name appears on the Catalogue, is probably the boy who entered, and the Christian name found in the Records is accordingly given in the text, with a query (?), and the date of his birth in a foot note. When the boy is found to have been a year or two older or younger at that time, he is regarded as possibly a pupil of the School, and his Christian name is given, with a ? and ‡ (?‡); where there are two or three names, either of which might be the boy, the most probable name is given in the text, with a ? and ‡, and the other names in a foot note.

The Committee feels justified in this decision, because it is found by Mr. Hunt's Catalogue, where he puts down in many cases the ages of the boys on entering, that they sometimes entered the School when only five years old, while in others they were even fifteen or over.

Whenever a boy appears to have been born in Boston about nine years or less before the name appears on our Catalogue with the surname only, and about ten years later the same name appears in the Harvard or Yale Catalogues, with a Christian name corresponding with that on the Town Records of Birth, the Committee has had no hesitation in deciding that that name should be inserted in our lists as undoubtedly our boy. Whenever there is evidence that one brother was a member of the School, the Committee has, in cases of doubt, given the presumption of probability to other members of the same family, who appear to have been of fit age to precede or follow him.

The spelling of the Records is so uncertain, the surnames of children of the same family often being spelled differently, as Simbert and Smibert, Collins and Collens, that the Committee has felt justified in disregarding the spelling when the name appears the same, and the age is plainly suitable, particularly when there were older or younger brothers in the School of ages corresponding to those given in the Records.

That the list thus made up is not perfect, and that many names are still wanting, and are now likely to remain so forever, seems to the Committee capable of explanation in part by the very imperfect condition of the Town Records of Birth during the years named, and particularly after 1744, some families being only inserted in part, and many births omitted altogether; and in part by supposing that some of the boys may have been born out of Boston (in which case it could not be expected that their names would be found on its Records), and moved into town with their parents before or about the time their names first appear.

The Committee hopes the publication of these names of possible pupils will stimulate the activity of those interested in genealogical pursuits to furnish them information, wherever it is now possible to supply it, so that in the next edition of the Catalogue some of the names now marked probable may be made certain. Each year decreases the opportunity for making these corrections, and whatever is not done now, will probably never be accomplished.

The names of these boys are not arranged, as in the Harvard Catalogue, according to the social position of their parents, but according to the order in which they presented themselves at Lovell's house for examination. This we learn from a letter written by Hon. Harrison Gray Otis (see page viii, Preface), as well as from the position in which the name of the son of Sir William Pepperrell stands in the Class of 1737.

He lived in the house erected by Governor Belcher, at the corner of what are now Washington and Hollis streets. The house and his library, which for the time was valuable, were burnt three years after his death in the great fire of 1787. He was chairman of the Committee sent towards the close of the Siege of Boston in March, 1776, at the request of the Selectmen and with the sanction of Gen. Howe, to propose to Gen. Washington an agreement, that if the British troops were allowed to evacuate the place unmolested, Boston should be left uninjured. Some exception was taken by Washington to the communication as not coming from the General in command; but it was understood between them that this should be as proposed. See Sabine, i. 161.

⁴ b. 28 Sept. 1728. A brother of Samuel and also of Jonathan, whom we suppose ours of 1732 and '4, q. v. The records of the First Ch. say he was baptized 22 Sept. 1728. A similar discrepancy between the records occurs in the case of Jonathan (1734), and will be noticed in one or two other instances farther on. It is impossible to decide which is correct, but they can be reconciled by assuming that the record of birth is probably right, that the baptism took place, as was usual, on the Sunday following the birth, and was recorded subsequently and by some accident the distinction between baptisms on successive Sundays was not made by the party recording them, or if made was overlooked by the copyist, since in nearly every case as in this, a change of a week in the date would make all right, by bringing the baptism on the day following the birth, or within one or two days after.

⁵ b. 1729; see Sabine, i. 360.

⁶ The Welles of 1734, to which the name Arnold has been attached, should be a blank if this is correct,—and it is very likely to be if Samuel is rightly inserted against the other Welles there, as Samuel was an older brother of Arnold. This name should in that case be spelled Welles; and it is not unlikely that the same name in 1739, q. v. refers to the same boy and is repeated, perhaps from his having left and re-entered, or through some accident; but this may perhaps be John Wells, bapt. at King's Chapel, 8 Dec. 1727.

⁷ b. 8 Nov. 1728. See Allen's Dict. of Amer. Biog.

⁸ Sabine, i. 406.

⁹ On Town Records spelled Fullarton, b. 30 Nov. 1727; but the records of the Church in Brattle Sq. give the baptism of William Fullerton, 3 Dec. 1727, so there is probably no doubt the same person is intended in both cases, and that our spelling is correct.

¹⁰ b. 16 Sept. 1728; but perhaps Ezekiel, bapt. First Ch. 27 Mar. 1726.

¹¹ b. 5 Dec. 1730; but perhaps Samuel, bapt. First Ch. 1 May, 1726.

² Brothers. R., b. 13, bapt. Ch. in Brattle Sq. 17 Aug. 1729; J., b. 28 Mar., bapt. Ch. in Brattle Sq. 4 Apr. 1731.

⁶ b. 2 July, 1729, or Samuel, his bro. b. 4 Aug. 1731. Possibly, however, an error for Cazneau; and if so, perhaps Andrew, Judge of Admiralty, *1792; Sabine, i. 298.

⁵ Can this name be an error for Haynes?

⁶ Had a brother Dixi, whom we suppose ours of 1735.

⁷ b. 14 Aug. 1728; but perhaps his brother Peter, b. 25 Dec. 1726; unless he is the Gibbins of 1733, who is plainly a brother of John of 1729.

⁸ If this is the same Samuel that we have assumed for ours of 1724, (an older brother of Robert, whom we take for ours of 1740), all the Calefs of 1734 and 35 become doubtful.

⁹ While retaining this name as given in the edition of 1847, we are inclined to think that John Mico Wendell, b. 31 May, 1728, bapt. Church in Brattle Sq. 2 June, 1728; Harv. 1747, A.M. *1773, the father of several of the Wendells whom we suppose our boys of later years, is intended, and that the John Wendell of the text should be given as one of the three without Christian names in 1743.

¹ b. 17, bapt. Church in Brattle Sq. 23 July, 1727; a brother of Edward, whom we take to be ours of 1740; but perhaps William Allen, b. 5 Nov. bapt. First Church, 29 Oct. 1727 (another case like that of Fayerweather above, see Class of 1736, where the date of birth is probably the correct one); or John Scot (sic), b. 13 Oct. 1730.

⁷ b. 21 Jan. 1730; or his brother John, b. 10 Mar. 1732. On the Town Records this name is spelled with two l's wherever it occurs.

⁸ b. 31 May, 1732; or another John, b. 30 Sept. 1732; one of whom was probably bapt. New North Church, 10 Dec. 1732.

⁹ bapt. Old South, 3 Dec. 1727.

¹⁰ See Allen, Drake, and Class of 1741. Robert Auchmuty, Attorney General of the Province, the only one of the name in Boston, had three sons, Samuel (ours of 1731), and Robert and James Smith, of whom Robert is presumably the older, as his name is first mentioned in his father's will, Suffolk County Probate Records, lib. xlv. fol. 67. The father planted the elm trees which stood in Essex Street (formerly Auchmuty's Lane) until the last decade. This Robert was associated with John Adams in the defence of Capt. Preston, after the Boston Massacre; Sabine, i. 196. In the same case, our Paine of 1738 was joined to the prosecution. See Wells's Life of Samuel Adams, i. 330.

In the notes at the beginning of this chapter we referred to the probability that many boys whose first names we could not find on the Records, were born out of town; since these pages have been passing through the press, we have learned that it was no uncommon thing for boys from out of town to be sent to Boston, that they might enjoy the tuition of the Masters of the Latin School. The occurrence of this name, and that of several others which we know to have been identified with the neighboring towns, as Quincy, Vassall, Brattle, add probability to this statement.

10 b. 7 Apr. 1734; or John, b. 12 and bapt. First Church, 17 Nov. 1734.

11 b. 8 Oct. 1731, brother of Isaac, who is possibly ours of 1738 (see note); or William Willard, Harv. 1755, A.M., *1810, Episcopal Minister at Scituate and Marshfield (Sabine, ii. 417); or Josiah, bapt. Christ Church, 10 May, 1727.

12 b. 2 Nov. 1735; or Edmund, bapt. Church in Brattle Sq. 15 May, 1735; or John, bapt. same church, 4 Sept. 1737.

13 Probably a son of Dr. Sylvester Gardiner, who is thought to have been of our Class of 1724, and a brother of our John of 1744; q. v.; bapt. King's Chapel, 27 June, 1736. Undoubtedly the spelling should be Gardiner, as on the Chapel records. Sabine, i. 462.

14 b. 1733; perhaps Houghton; perhaps William Lee, b. 10 Feb. 1736, who is probably the William on Barrell's List; Sabine, ii. 177; or James, b. 1733, *1773.

15 b. 20 Nov. 1734, a brother of William and Lindal (see under Class of 1738); or Daniel, b. 28 May, 1736.

1 b. 20, bapt. Old South, 16 Mar. 1734; another case like that explained in the note under Fayerweather in Class of 1736. A merchant in Boston. Prof. E. E. Salisbury of New Haven, of our Class of 1824, thinks the ? may be omitted.

2 Son of Richard (Sabine, i. 317); or John, son of Joseph and Margaret, b. 1 May, 1733.

3 b. 9, bapt. Old South, 15 Sept. 1734; but possibly his brother Thomas, b. 10, bapt. Old South, 16 Apr. 1732.

4 bapt. First Ch. 10 Feb. 1734.

5 b. 4 Sept. 1734.

6 Brothers. A., b. 17 July, 1729, and J., b. 10 Sept. 1731, and probably Harv. 1750; but perhaps Abraham, b. 23 Sept. 1727, and his brother John Mico, b. 31 May, 1728 (see Class of 1739); or one may be Edmund, b. 13 May, 1735. Probably this is the John of Harv. 1750, A.M., and Yale 1768, and Dart. 1773, *1808, instead of the one in the Class of 1739, under which name see the note.

7 The Harvard Quinquennial does not give an e. See Perkins's Life of Copley, p. 97; also Sabine, i. 206. He prosecuted the soldiers for the Boston Massacre.

8 b. 30 Jan. 1734, bapt. Old South, 2 Feb. 1734-5; or Edward, bapt. Christ Church, 18 June, 1732; or William, his brother, bapt. same church, 5 Oct. 1735; or Andrew, or John, refugees on Barrell's List.

9 b. 13 Jan. 1735; but possibly John, b. 1 Aug. 1733.

10 Probably the William Simbert (sic) on Town Records, b. 29 Jan. 1732. The record is plainly Jan, but the date of baptism at the Old South, 2 July, renders it possible that the copyist has mistaken u for a, and that it should read Jun. The record of baptism gives the name as Williams, which, being the family name of his mother, is very likely correct.

11 b. 28 Jan. bapt. Old South, 3 Feb. 1733; but perhaps his brother Caleb, b. 6 Oct. 1731.

12 b. 1 Feb. 1737.

13 b. 20, bapt. Old South, 26 Jan. 1734. "My father wrote to Dr. J. Eliot of Nathaniel Smibert: He received his grammar instruction under the famous Master John Lovel, but did not proceed to a collegiate course. He engaged in his father's profession of painting, in which he emulated the excellencies of the best masters; and, had his life been spared, he would probably have been in his day what Copley and West have since been,—the honor of America in the imitative art. I remember that one of his first paintings was the picture of his old master, John Lovel, drawn while the terrific impressions of the pedagogue were yet vibrating upon his nerves. I found it so perfect a likeness, that I did not wonder when my young friend told me that a sudden undesigned glance at the head often made him shudder."—From a Letter of Judge Cranch, of Washington, in Dunlap's Historical Arts of Design. See Perkins's Life of Copley, pp. 16, 17; also note on William above, and John, Class of 1746.

² Brother of Joseph, whom we suppose the same as ours of 1742; see also Class of 1756.

⁴ b. 24 Oct. 1734. See note on Spooner, Class of 1742.

⁵ Sabine, ii. 346; also Barrell's List.

⁶ bapt. Ch. in Brattle Sq. 23 May, 1736.

⁷ May be a brother of Samuel, whom we take for ours of 1742, and bapt. New North Ch. 20 Feb. 1733-4; or John, b. 15 Sept. 1735. We suppose him the latter, and if so, to have been the Commander of Castle William (Fort Independence); Sabine, i. 185. Elisha Cooke, who is perhaps ours of 1742, had a brother John, b. 5 Apr. 1735, who is perhaps the John who belongs here.

⁸ Son of Sylvester; see Class of 1724, a brother of William, whom we suppose the same as ours of 1743, and bapt. King's Chapel, 11 Dec. 1737. Born about 1731 in Boston, sent to England to complete his education, and was admitted to practice in Westminster Hall. He was Attorney General at St. Christopher's; returned to Boston in 1763. See Perkins's Life of Copley, p. 56; also Drake, and Loring's Hundred Boston Orators.

⁹ Died before 1764.

¹⁰ See Sabine, ii. 369.

¹¹ Sabine, ii. 248.

¹² b. 26 Aug. bapt. First Church, 1 Sept. 1734; brother of Ebenezer, whom we suppose ours of 1742; see also Class of 1746.

¹³ b. 1, bapt. New No. Ch. 2 Jan. 1736.

¹⁴ bapt. King's Chapel, 5 June, 1737.

¹⁵ b. 29 Feb. 1735, and bapt. New North Church same day; but possibly Thomas, son of Onesiphorus, b. 10 Sept. 1735.

¹ Genealogy of Greenleaf family, chart iv. but perhaps James Gold, b. 1 Jan. 1734; or Thomas, b. 21 May, 1737.

² Father of Hon. John Phillips, first Mayor of Boston. Son of John and Mary (Buttolph) Phillips. Born in Boston 29 Aug. bapt. Ch. in Br. Sq. 4 Sept. 1737; but perhaps David, bapt. King's Chapel, 14 Sept. 1737; or William, b. 30 Aug. 1736, son of John and Sarah.

⁵ Sabine, i. 406; also note on Goldthwait, Class of 1745; the latter note also applies to Taylor. ⁶ On Barrell's List.

⁸ b. 19, bapt. Church in Brattle Sq. 24 Oct. 1736; or John, bapt. (see Allen's Biog. Dict.); or Josiah, bapt. Ch. in Br. Sq. 14 Oct. 1739.

⁹ This name, like that of Gridley above, is worn so as not to be easily deciphered on the original manuscript. Some one has pasted on a new piece of paper, and written James Taylor for the name beneath, but Dr. Homer gives it Grayton clearly; and a careful examination of the original, under the guidance given by his copy, leaves little doubt that the name there written is Grayton, and that the conjectural Taylor is an error.

¹¹ Robert Hollowell (Sabine, i. 508) would have been about of the right age, if he were born in this country, which S. leaves uncertain.

¹² Sprague's Annals; also Allen.

¹³ Perhaps the L. given by Sabine, ii. 30, without a Christian name.

¹⁴ bapt. King's Chapel, 9 Sept. 1739, a brother of those in 1743 and 44, though not mentioned by Sabine, and like them, probably should be spelled Gardiner, as it is by Dr. Homer. Perhaps he died early.

¹⁶ bapt. Old South, 25 Feb. 1738-9.

¹ b. 14 Jan. 1738, a brother of Benjamin, whom we suppose ours of 1741, and Joseph, and Zabdial, who are perhaps ours of 1741 or 2; or Jonathan, bapt. Church in Brattle Sq. 9 Apr. 1738.

² Can he be James, a refugee on Barrell's List?

³ b. 29 Oct. bapt. Old South, 4 Nov. 1739.

⁴ b. 1 Nov. 1731.

⁵ b. 13 Mar. 1739; or David, b. 25 Aug. 1737.

⁶ bapt. First Church, 5 Mar. 1738.

⁷ b. 20, bapt. Old North Church, 26 Aug. 1739; but perhaps Ebenezer, b. 3, bapt. Old South, 8 May, 1737; or Thomas Wait, b. 2 May, 1741; or Edward, b. 25 July, 1741; or Benjamin Swayne, bapt. First Church, 28 Nov. 1736; or Thomas, bapt. same church, 9 July, 1738.

⁸ bapt. First Ch. 22 Oct. 1738; or his brother Joseph, bapt. 26 Oct. 1740.

⁹ b. 15 Feb. 1739. His grandson, Prof. Butler, thinks him our boy, because then nine years old in Boston.

¹⁰ b. 19 Oct. 1739; but of these two, one may perhaps be Samuel, b. 21 May, 1737; or Christopher, b. 26 July, 1740. Barrell's List gives a James who may be the one here, or should perhaps take the place of the other.

¹³ See Allen and Drake.

¹⁴ b. 12 June, 1735. This name in the old Catalogue was printed Lowder; and supposing that to be correct, we had suggested for the Christian name Jonathan, b. 16, bapt. Old So. 23 Dec. 1739; but on examination of the original, it seems clearly to be Lowden, a name which also occurs on the Town and Church Records, and we have altered our conjecture to correspond with the changed spelling, though referring it to a much older boy.

¹⁵ Allen. His life by John G. Palfrey, D.D., LL.D., is in Sparks's Amer. Biog., second series, vol. vii. He was a prominent Freemason. See Historical Sketch of the Massachusetts Lodge.

¹ b. 27 Apr. 1739, unless he is ours of 1746; or Alexander, bapt. Christ Church, 22 Jan. 1737-8. The reference, Sabine, i. 535, may be to him.

² bapt. Old South, 25 Nov. 1739; a brother of Josiah, of 1743. We had inserted this name, as well as that of Josiah, with the belief that they must have been our boys. A note dated Mar. 1881, from Prof. E. E. Salisbury of New Haven, confirms our conclusions and justifies us in removing the ?. They were brothers of our Stephen of 1755.

³ Probably William Dinsdell (sic) on Town Records, b. 3 Oct. 1739, son of William and Elizabeth; but perhaps John Dinsdall, bapt. Old South, 15 July, 1744.

See p. 70, note 17.⁴ Deacon of Church in Brattle Sq. "An ardent revolutionary patriot. He was a member of the patriotic Corps of Cadets, then under the command of Col. John Hancock, and was one of the two who reversed their muskets and broke from the ranks when the obnoxious Commissioners of Customs, contrary to what had been previously arranged, joined in the procession at the annual election in 1768—an act of sudden but honest indignation, but so unmilitary in character that it cost him his place in the company. He was one of the ever memorable party who destroyed the tea, and one of those also who removed from the guard-house, at the corner of West Street, two cannon, secreting them for a time beneath the desk of the Master, in the school-house near by. In various ways, by patient sacrifices and earnest efforts, Deacon Grant devoted himself to the cause of liberty."—Sermon by Rev. S. K. ¹ b. 19, bapt. Old South, 25 Oct. 1747; with little doubt. He had brothers Joseph, Edward and Clement, who would agree with ours of 1742, 44 and 52. Can he be Gen. Henry, the Colonel of the Boston Regiment, who, according to Drake, was born in Boston in 1748 and died 4 Jan. 1809? Perhaps William, bapt. ⁷ bapt. Old South, 22 July, 1744. There was a James Allen born in Boston 24 July, 1739 (see Allen's Biog. Dict., also Drake); but as he would have been seventeen years old at this time, it is improbable that he is the same as this; or one may be Lewis, bapt. Christ Church, 29 Oct. 1747; or Nathaniel, for whom see under the Class of 1750. See also Classes of 1747 and 59. Dr. Homer gives this name as Joseph.

¹¹ b. 4 Dec. 1749.

¹² b. 22 Sept. bapt. Old South, 9 Oct. 1748.

² bapt. King's Chapel, 10 Mar. 1756.

³ New Eng. Hist. Geneal. Reg. vii. p. 143. Burial Register King's Chapel.

⁴ The only name on the Town Records of birth bearing any similarity to this, about this time, is Gillam Tailor (sic), b. 5, bapt. King's Chapel, 10 Nov. 1754. The Gillam Taylor, Sabine, ii. 346, can hardly be our boy, as at this time he would have been but five years old.

⁵ See Genealogy of Appleton Family, p. 22. ⁶ Sabine, ii. 31. ⁷ b. 18 Jan. 1750.

⁸ bapt. King's Chapel, 30 Nov. 1755. Sabine, ii. 200, gives his name William Dummell, but the King's Chapel record, which gives Dummer, is undoubtedly correct. Perkins's Life of Copley, p. 96, says Anna Dummer Powell, the sister of Gov. Dummer, was wife of John Powell, which, if she were not mother of this Wm., shows a family connection, between the Powells and Dummers. Drake gives his name as Dinsmoor, and the date of his birth 1756, both of which must be incorrect.

² See Allen on his father, Gov. Sir Francis; Sabine, i. 225; Burke's Peerage, 43d ed. 1881.

⁶ Sabine, i. 429.

⁷ The Harvard Quinquennial and Sabine, ii. 137, spell Brinley.

⁸ b. 1756. Brother of Isaac, of our Class of 1766; cousin of Thomas A. of 1761. See Memoir by his son, Capt. Henry Edward Coffin, R.N.; also Drake, and Sabine, i. 326. Sabine was wrong in his age, which was but eighty-two.

⁹ Erased by William W. Greenough in his interleaved Catalogue, edition of 1847, on the supposition that he is identical with our Gilbert Deblois of 1773, q. v.; but we suppose him to be the G. D. bapt. King's Chapel, 29 Sept. 1755, and consequently identical only in name. He is probably a son of the Gilbert referred to in Perkins's Life of Copley, p. 51. Died 12 Nov.

¹⁰ b. 21 June, 1754; but perhaps Joseph, b. 26 Apr. 1758, brother of Daniel, whom we suppose the same as ours of 1770.

Haynes from their Catalogues in this Class, and inserted as Samuel in the Class of 1773. Both names being clearly on Lovell's list here, we think it best to retain them in the absence of more definite information.

2 b. 8 Feb. 1752, a brother of Jonathan, whom we think possibly our boy of 1759. This name occurs on Barrell's List, but may belong to an older person.

3 b. 15 July, 1756, a brother of William and Thomas, whom we suppose our boys of 1757 and 1761. 4 He may be identical with Samuel Doggett of our Class of 1765.

5 See Class of 1766, note on Thomas Walcutt.

6 Drake's Biog. Dict. says he was born in North Carolina and died 1810, and was Judge of Supreme Court of United States. Allen agrees in the latter statements, which makes it possible that there is some error in claiming him as our boy.

² There is a boy of this name on Hunt's Catalogue at the North Grammar School in 1767, and as it appears not to have been uncommon for the boys of this School to be transferred to that and vice versa, he may be the same as this.

³ b. 29 Aug. 1755; or possibly Benjamin, bapt. Old South, 3 Oct. 1756; or Robert, bapt. Christ Church, 27 May, 1750.

⁵ Born in Rawson's Lane (now Bromfield Street), 1754. See Record of some of the descendants of Thomas Clarke, by Samuel C. Clarke (of our Class of 1816), pp. 21 and 22.

⁷ b. 11 Apr. 1759.

⁸ bapt. King's Chapel, 2 Apr. 1756, son of Charles Ward A.; or John, bapt. at same church, 18 May, 1757. It is possible that he is the Charles Apthorp whose picture is described in Perkins's Life of Copley, p. 31.

⁹ See Sprague's Annals, v. 383. On Hunt's Catalogue the name of Thomas Oliver appears at the North Grammar School in 1767 to 1770, and for the reasons given under John Williams above, it seems to us that this may be the same boy, and that he went to college from that school instead of from ours.

¹⁰ Died before 1793; Sabine, ii. 293.

¹¹ Possibly identical with the same name on Barrell's List, though we think that more probably his father (Sabine, ii. 74), and that this is the son, referred to there, who died in 1797. The name McNeal, Class of 1762, may be identical with this, or the note here given may belong under that, but we have preferred to insert it here, as the Christian name here given corresponds to the references.

² New Eng. Hist. Gen. Reg. vii. 144. bapt. King's Chapel, 3 Nov. 1756. The middle name is spelled on the Church Records Stewart. Isaac is given on Lovell's list, but evidently written in by a later hand.

³ The same name appears at the North Grammar School from 1767 to 1771. He may, like others of his classmates, have gone from here there.

⁶ See Hist. Sketch of Mass. Lodge, p. 121; Collections Mass. Hist. Soc. iii. 191; Drake's Biog. Dict., also Allen. He was at the North Grammar School from 1770 to 1772, and went from there to Harvard College. See the note under Peter M. Crequie, Class of 1767.

⁷ b. 19 Nov. 1757; but perhaps William, bapt. Old South, 21 Mar. 1756; or John Parmiter (sic), bapt. New North, 10 Apr. 1757.

⁸ b. 25 Feb. 1756. He had a brother Thomas, whom we suppose the same as ours of 1762; and another, Hezekiah B. who may be our boy of 1759.

He is perhaps identical with the James given in the next Class, and inserted accidentally here or there; if the former, the name here may be Joseph, b. 24 Aug. 1753, a brother of John, whom we suppose possibly one of ours of 1759. The name is abbreviated in Lovell's Catalogue, and it is hard to tell whether intended for Jas. or Jos.

⁹ See notes on the same name in the two preceding Classes. This boy may have entered in 1763, left and re-entered.

¹¹ b. 26 Dec. 1760; or Samuel, who appears at the North Grammar School in 1767, whom we have supposed our boy of 1764. But there is a Thomas Blanchard who was at the North Grammar School from 1768 to 1775, who may have been here first and gone there, as we have already noted of other boys in this Class.

See British Army List, 1781, p. 144.⁶ The last survivor of this Class, and, at the time of his death, the oldest living pupil of the School. His name heads the signers of the Constitution of the Latin School Association.

The story which has passed into fiction, and been represented upon the canvas, as well as in the procession at the celebration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Boston, of the Boston boys going in a body to the Province House to remonstrate with Gen. Gage because their coast was injured, originated in an incident which occurred while this Class was in the School, and near the time of its leaving. The boys were a committee from this School, of which Mr. Robins, who narrated the story to the Rev. E. E. Hale in 1846 or 1847, was one. The General was not Gen. Gage, but another General, and the house not the Province House, but a house in School Street. The boys used to bring their sleds to school and put them in the yard, and as soon as school was done, coast from Mr. Shelburne's house, quite down the hill (i.e. down Beacon, across Tremont and down School Street), past the School-house. The General's servant used to spread ashes on the sidewalk every morning. This spoiled the coasting, and the First Class of the Latin School met and went over to tell the General about it. He told the boys that he had trouble enough with Boston men, and wouldn't have any with Boston boys.

A note of Harrison Gray Otis (of our Class of 1773) to Mr. Gould, dated Dec. 18, 1844, says: "The house next adjoining the wall of the Chapel Cemetery, east, was an ancient stone building of grotesque architecture, which, when I went to school, was occupied by the British or (I believe,) German Gen. Haldiman,* who commanded under Gage. The same house was afterwards, and probably within your remembrance, owned and inhabited by John Lowell, Esq." It was undoubtedly in this house that the interview occurred. See 5th Report Boston Record Commissioners, p. 7. ⁷ See Greenleaf Genealogy, p. 74, note.⁸ He heard Dr. (Gen. Joseph) Warren's address, 4 Mar. 1775, in commemoration of the Massacre. See Allen's Biographical Dictionary; also Sprague's Annals, ii. 173.

* Mr. Otis is wrong in saying German. Frederick Haldiman, K.B. (1737) was Lieutenant-Colonel of the 60th Regiment, or King's Royal Rifle Corps, formerly the 62d, or Royal American Regiment of Foot (of which regiment Hon. Thomas Gage was in 1768 Colonel-in-Chief), from 1756 to 1772, and Colonel-Commandant in 1772; his name disappearing from the list in 1791. His rank in the army was Major, and afterwards Lieutenant-General. *Gordon, James⁵

² Born in Boston 1759, died at Cheltenham, England, July 23, 1839. He took the lead among his schoolmates in their sports; was often captain of the procession on Gunpowder-plot Day, yet became sufficiently familiar with the Latin classics to quote them readily and aptly in Parliament, when such pedantic displays were still the fashion. He entered the British Navy as a midshipman before the Revolution, and gained rapid promotion, and had reached the grade of Admiral, and was created a baronet in 1804. In both our wars with England, he was spared the necessity of taking part against his former countrymen. After the peace of 1815, having acquired a handsome fortune, he appropriated a part of it in establishing a naval school afloat for training officers for our commercial marine. He founded a school for the descendants of his g. g. g. father, Tristram, at Nantucket, one-fourth part of which island at one time belonged to Tristram and his sons, and of which Tristram was the chief magistrate. He imported here several blood horses to improve the breed; and brought over in creels turbot of the English variety, previously unknown, as it is understood, in our waters. Sir Isaac was of noble proportions and of prepossessing countenance, genial in his manners, witty and gay. He was much liked by his brother officers, and well known in Boston, which he frequently visited.

It is believed that all of the name in the Latin School before the Revolution were descendants of William Coffin, great grandson of Tristram, of Nantucket. All his branch of the family then living were, with little exception, refugee loyalists, of whom many rose to high rank in the British service, civil or military.—Note from Hon. T. C. Amory. See Drake's Biog. Dict.; Burke's Peerage, 5th edit. (1838), p. 217; Heraldic Jour. Apr. 1867. See Mem. of Gen. John Coffin by his son, p. 69. Sir Isaac was present at the Visitation of 1822.

³ b. 7, bapt. King's Chapel, 20 Oct. 1758.

⁴ Spelled Scroop by Lovell and Wallcut, but Scrope on the list of Oxford degrees, and by Burke. He was third son of Gov. Sir Francis, and the fourth baronet, succeeding his two brothers—John, who died 1809, and Thomas, who died 1818, whom we suppose to have been of our Class of 1763. He married Harriet, only child of William Morland, M.P., an eminent surgeon of Lee, County Kent, and subsequently assumed, 15 Feb. 1811, by royal license, the additional surname of Morland. See Burke's Peerage, 43d edit. 1881.

⁵ There is no mistake that James is the Christian name on Lovell's Catalogue here, but Dr. Homer has given him in the next Class, and substituted here the name of Hugh Mackay G., who was given in that Class in the Catalogue of 1847: Mr. Wallcut's note, presently to be mentioned, says nothing of James, but gives Hugh M. As the Catalogue of 1847 says Hugh was advanced one year, his position on Wallcut's list is easily explained, but the omission of James is not accounted for. The Catalogue of 1847 says James was A.B., but the only James who has graduated at Harvard was in the Class of 1779; and though he might have been our boy, the editor of the Quinquennial, in an inquiry for information about his death,—which is supposed to have been before 1833,—states that the place of his birth is unknown, though perhaps Amherst or Dunstable, from which we infer that he was not identical with our James, and that the insertion of the degree here is an error. It has seemed best to us to retain James here, dropping the degree attached to his name, and Hugh M. in the next Class, supposing that Lovell is correct in his arrangement, and that our committee on the old Catalogue was led by the similarity of names to conclude that it was our James who went to Harvard.

¹ This name, printed Wolcott in the Catalogue of 1847, and so written on Lovell's, is given correctly in Dr. Homer's list. It is possible that the name Wallcut, in the Class of 1763, is intended for him, he having perhaps entered, left and re-entered, or that there should be a transposition of that name with the name originally given here.

Thomas Wallcut was one of the founders and the first Recording Secretary of the Massachusetts Historical Society, is frequently mentioned in its published Proceedings, and a memoir of him is given in the volume for 1835-55, p. 193. Some years after his death, his papers were presented to that Society (see its Proceedings for 1879-80, p. 160), and among them was found a list of this Class of the Latin School, which was published in the same volume, pp. 216 and 217. This list corresponds with that given in our text, except in the substitution mentioned above of Hugh Mackay Gordon for James Gordon, and in omitting the name of Samuel Newman and giving the names of John Erving, Shirley Erving, and Thomas Temple Fenton, who will be found in the text under the Class of 1771, in which year they entered.

Of this Class, which was in many respects the most noted that had ever entered the School, Dr. Homer says: "It furnished a Judge of Probate, of the Supreme, of the Superior, of the Municipal Court; an Admiral, a Lieutenant General, two English Major Generals, one Knight of the Bath, two Baronets, two Marshals (civil), one Colonel of Artillery, one Lieutenant Colonel, two Doctors of Divinity, two Fellows of the American Academy, three Fellows of the Historical Society, two State representatives, three members of the British Parliament."

The list of Mr. Wallcut's, printed as above-mentioned, gives a little different classification, and mentions the names under each head; so we add it, from the volume referred to:—

"The Class of 1766 has furnished professional and mercantile men, viz: one judge of Supreme Judicial Court, one judge of Municipal Court, one judge of Probate Court—Dawes; one judge of Inferior Court, one public notary—Cooper; one British admiral—Coffin; one British general (Indies)—Ochterlony; one British colonel—Gordon (H. M.*); two American colonels—Freeman and Bradford; three baronets or knights of the Bath—Coffin, Bernard and Ochterlony; one member of Parliament†—Bernard; one British captain—Bethune; two clergymen—Freeman and Homer; two civil marshals—Bradford and Prince; one high sheriff—Bradford; two representatives in State Legislature—Jones and Prince; two physicians—Erving and Greenleaf; one commissary general of the State, one coroner—Prince; one officer in the civil list of Great Britain—Fenton; one antiquarian and scribe to the State—Wallcut; one war agent—Eustis; thirteen merchants—Jones, Johonnot, Robins, Wheelwright, Davis, Deblois, Bradford, McNeil, Eustis, Fletcher, Laughton, Erving, and Prince; five masters of arts—Dawes, Erving, Freeman, Greenleaf,‡ and Homer; two fellows of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences—Freeman and Dawes; three fellows of the Historical Society—Freeman, Homer, Wallcut; two poets—(one doggerel) Prince, (one sublime) Dawes."

In 1810, forty-four years after graduation, when the list was made out, seven of the Class were dead and twenty-one were supposed to be living.

bapt. King's Chapel, 20 Jan. 1757-8: son of Benjamin, Chief Justice of New York, noticed in Drake's Biographical Dictionary and Knapp's Biographical Sketches, p. 163, and grandson of Judge Auchmuty.

¹⁰ See article on John Amory, Sabine, i. 162.

¹¹ Phillips (sic), b. 16 Oct. 1761: a brother of Turner, whom we have supposed ours of 1763; but perhaps John, bapt. New North, 2 July, 1759; or William, bapt. Church in Brattle Sq. 23 Mar. 1760; or John, bapt. at same church, 26 July, 1761.

 "Boston, May 27th, 1771.

"I, Peter Crequi, engage that Chris. Gore shall punctually observe the rules of this School for three weeks from this date; and sho'd he break them or any of them within this time, I promise to receive peaceably the punishment due to such Offence with the said Christopher.
 "PETER CREQUI."

Two other memoranda concern boys who were subsequently teachers of our School:

"I, Jno. Prout, promise the same for Will Bentley.—J. PROUT."

"I, Jona. Snelling, engage for Will Prout.—JONA. SNELLING."

Some similar memoranda will be given in the Appendix.

See note under Class of 1766 on Thomas Wallcut. Hugh McCoy (sic) Gordon, son of Alexander and Jane, was bapt. King's Chapel, 5 Sept. 1760.

Hugh Mackay Gordon entered the army during the American War, and was for many years an officer of the 16th Regiment. He was promoted captain in that regiment in 1788, major in the army in 1796, lieutenant-colonel in 1798, and obtained a majority in his regiment in 1799. He was promoted to the rank of major-general in 1811, and was nominated colonel of the York Chasseurs in 1814; in 1816 he was removed to the Sixteenth (appointed colonel 8 Jan.). In 1821 he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general. He died in 1823. See Historical Record of 16th Regiment of Foot in the British Army, by Richard Cannon, p. 45.

³ Son of the patriot, b. July, 1759. See New Eng. Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. ii. July, 1848, p. 295; also Sparks's American Biography, second series, vol. ii. p. 20.

⁴ The same name appears on Hunt's Catalogue of the North Grammar School this year, but not again. He may have entered there, remained a short time, and then come here.

⁵ Died July 12.

⁶ b. 25 May, bapt. King's Chapel, 20 June, 1760, or Lewis, b. 10 Apr. 1762, d. 9 Oct. 1801.

¹ James (of 1767) had no brother, and his father's family seems to have been the only one of that name living in Boston, until a later period; if this be not a repetition of his name by mistake, perhaps it is intended for his cousin James, son of Joseph of Barnstable, b. 20 Sept. 1755, graduated at Harvard 1775, and died at sea in 1790. See New England Historical and Gen. Register, vol. ii. July, 1848, p. 296. S. A. Otis, of our Class of 1790, was a Barnstable boy, which confirms the idea. From the Town Records it would appear that Joseph, Jr., probably father of this James, came to Boston to live, some ten years or less after this.

² Starred in the Catalogue of 1847, which led to a note from Joshua Loring of Newton, saying that he was not then dead, but living in London, at the age of eighty-nine, "very intelligent, and of sound mind." He was a brother of John and Benjamin Joy of Boston, of our Classes of 1759 and 1765.

⁵ "Artist to George III."

⁶ It is possible that this is Zephaniah, Yale 1778, LL.D. 1817. Chief Justice Conn. who was born at Wareham, Mass., Feb. 1759. See Drake's and Allen's Biog. Dictionaries.

⁷ bapt. King's Chapel, 10 Sept. 1755.

⁸ Joseph Finley (sic) graduated at Coll. of New Jersey 1775, and John Evans Finley (sic) A.M., at the same in 1776. Can this be either?

¹¹ Robert Pierpont is on Hunt's Catalogue of the North Grammar School. He entered 14 Feb. 1774, at 10, and remained through the school year 1774-75. In 1777 and 1778 the same name occurs on Hunt's Catalogue of our School. If this be the same, he must have entered here at this time when less than five years of age. This he may have done, and left for the North Grammar School, returned to be under his old master, and then left again to be fitted elsewhere for college. We are inclined to think the boy of the North Grammar School identical with the boy of 1777, and the Harvard graduate of 1785, but somewhat doubtful whether he was this Robert; but as the previous committee may have had some reason for identifying him with the graduate, we do not remove the degree from his name.

¹ b. 13 Dec. 1760; but perhaps Christopher, b. 5 Oct. 1758, who had a brother John, who may be ours of 1769; or David, b. 18 Sept. 1757, who had brothers Thomas and James, whom we suppose ours of 1762 and 1765; or Caleb, b. 28, bapt. 26 (another case like that referred to in the note on Fayerweather, p. 53) June, 1757, at Old South Church.

² See New Eng. Hist. Geneal. Reg. vol. xii, July, 1858, p. 223.

⁵ b. 29 Jan 1758: son of William, Jr., brother of Sir Thomas Aston. See Sabine, i. 327.

⁶ John Francis Dehon was bapt King's Chapel, 23 Jan. 1761, and is probably the same.

⁷ b. 11 July, 1751. See Allen's and Drake's Biographical Dictionaries; also Sprague's Annals, viii. 128; also Collections of Mass. Hist. Soc. third series, vol. v. pp. 271-282.

¹ b. 20 Jan. 1764. He had a brother Samuel, who very likely is the Samuel above. They are probably sons of Abiah, Master of the South Writing School, who died 27 Jan. 1769, aged 50. See Allen's Biographical Dictionary.

² Was ten years old, and at this School at the time of the Boston Massacre, and saw the bodies of the victims interred in the Granary Burying Ground. See Bridgman's Pilgrims of Boston, p. 174; also New Eng. Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. xxvii. April, 1873, p. 114; also Perkins's Life of Copley, p. 84.

³ Fogo (sic Town Records), b. 6 Feb. 1759.

⁵ Probably identical with the Thomas of 1768; and if so, died 1823.

⁶ Mr. Jonathan Mason, of this city, writes in the Boston Daily Advertiser of April 29, 1880, that when he was residing in 1804 with his "grandfather, at his house at the corner of Court and Common, now Tremont, Streets, occupied by Messrs. S. S. Pierce & Co. as a grocery," there was an English officer who was a frequent and favored visitor at the house. Concerning him, he adds: "Opposite to the King's Chapel, at the corner of School and Common, now Tremont, Streets, I recall in that year an old, weather-beaten dwelling, inhabited by an elderly lady whom we boys addressed as Sally Sheaf. In the same house, it was said, she resided during the Revolution, and with her, it is also said, Lord Percy boarded during the occupancy of the town by his regiment. With her at the same time was a young dependent relative who waited upon and attended to his errands, and became a favorite with his lordship,—so much so as to induce him to beg his relative to allow him to go with Lord Percy when the Evacuation of Boston took place, with the promise of his education and future advancement. It was with many solicitations of the boy and her own friends, she finally consented with great reluctance. The officer visitor at my grandfather's in 1804 and that boy were one and the same person, he then, in 1804, commanding the same regiment in Canada which his patron, Lord Percy, commanded in the Revolution, and bivouacked under the great tree on the Common previous to marching on Lexington."

The officer referred to was General Sir Roger Hale Sheaffe. He was connected with the Coffin family, having married Margaret, the youngest daughter of John (who may have been our boy of 1738), and sister of William and Thomas, of our Class of 1768. See Sabine, ii. 234; Perkins's Life of Copley, p. 106; also Drake's Biographical Dictionary.

¹ bapt. King's Chapel, 24 Aug. 1763. Architect of Boston State House. See Drake's and Allen's Biog. Dict.; also Proc. Mass. Hist. Soc. 1791-1835, p. 395, note, and elsewhere.

² Died Oct. 23. On Hunt's Catalogue (of which later) in 1776, aged 13.

³ These names appear on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776. We suppose them to refer to the same boys, that they were at the School until it was closed at the time of the battles of Lexington and Concord, returned and were re-entered on the Catalogue after it had been re-opened under Master Hunt. The same appears to have been the case with several other boys, under whose names we shall refer to this note. The name of Nathaniel Eustis appears again in 1773, and we suppose it a repetition from here.

⁶ b. in Boston, 2 Apr. 1763; died at Leghorn. Son of Nathaniel, and half brother of Nathaniel Walker Appleton, of our Class of 1762. See Genealogy of the Appleton Family, by W. S. Appleton, p. 14.

⁷ bapt. King's Chapel, 3 Mar. 1755.

⁹ Probably son of Jonathan and grandson of the Governor; b. in Halifax 22 July, 1763, died at Boulogne, 17 Nov. 1841. See N. Eng. Hist. Gen. Reg. vol. xxvii. July, 1873, p. 242.

¹⁰ b. 20, bapt. First Church, 23 Jan. 1763: a brother of Joseph, who is perhaps ours of 1763. See Allen's Biographical Dictionary.

¹¹ He appears on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 10; see note on the same name in the Class of 1772; also note 3, above.

¹² Probably the John b. 4 Mar. 1760.

¹³ bapt. King's Chapel, 14 Apr. 1763; brother of Gilbert of 1763, and Lewis of 1768.

⁴ Probably son of Michael Franklyn and Susannah Boutineau, whose intentions of marriage were recorded 4 Jan. 1762.

⁶ b. 6 May, 1763: brother of Sir Thomas A., of 1761, and William, of 1769; Sabine, i. 327. The committee on the Catalogue of 1847 identified him with Ebenezer Coffin, Harv. 1789, who died in 1816. It is not impossible that this was correct, but in that case he would have been twenty-six at graduation; and as Sabine says nothing of his being a graduate, we are inclined to doubt the identification.

⁷ bapt. Old South, 28 Mar. 1762; or perhaps identical with Robert (Harv. 1785), whose name is found on Hunt's Catalogue in the Class of 1777, and about whom we have given a note under that name in the Class of 1768, q. v.

⁸ b. 14, bapt. New North, 29 Apr. 1764; or James, bapt. Ch. in Brattle Sq. 6 Mar. 1763.

⁹ On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776. He probably re-entered. See "Brief Account of the Quincy Family," by W. H. Whitmore. The Harvard Quinquennial omits the e.

¹⁰ See Sabine, ii. 383; also "Vassalls of New England," p. 23; also Bridgman's Epitaphs in King's Chapel Burying Ground, p. 230.

¹¹ On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 14. Probably re-entered. See note 3, p. 96.

¹² On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 13. Probably re-entered. See note 3, p. 96.

¹³ On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 12. Probably re-entered. See note 3, p. 96.

² See Allen's Biographical Dictionary; note under Class of 1776 on Thomas Wallcut; also Sabine, i. 406, on John Erving, Jr., his father.

³ b. 12 July, 1762; but perhaps William, b. 24 July, 1760.

⁷ See note on the same name under Class of 1773.

⁹ b. 13 Feb. 1764. He had a brother Daniel, who is probably our boy of 1762. But perhaps this is Francis, bapt. Christ Church, 3 Apr. 1763.

¹⁰ Probably a son of Master James, and if so, died very early, as Master James had a son of the same name, b. 1788. He appears on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, and so was most likely in the School when it closed, returning at the re-opening, like Eustis, of 1770, and Greenleaf, above.

¹² Is on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 11. Probably in the School when it closed in 1775, and re-entered when it re-opened, like Eustis, of 1770, Greenleaf, and the others mentioned above and below. See Loring's Hundred Boston Orators, p. 229.

¹³ On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 11. See notes 3, p. 96, and 5, above.

¹⁴ On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 11, died 2 Oct. See notes 3, p. 96, and 5, above.

² On Hunt's Catalogue in 1778. See notes 3, p. 96, and 5, p. 98.

³ See Note on Martin Gay, Class of 1768, who perhaps belongs here, and the place given him in that Class should then be taken by Samuel, as suggested there. See Sabine, i. 466.

⁵ On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 10. See notes 3, p. 96, and 5, p. 98.

⁷ bapt. First Church, 18 Sept. 1763: a brother of Shrimpton, who is perhaps our boy of 1759; or Thomas, referred to in the note on William Hunt, under the Class of 1770.

⁸ b., and bapt. Christ Church, 26 Aug. 1764: a brother of William, whom we have taken as one of the possibilities in 1770. (See Hunt Genealogy, p. 350.) But one of these boys may be another brother, Pattid (sic), bapt. as above, 25 May, 1766.

¹⁰ b. 18 Sept. 1764; but perhaps Joseph, bapt. New North, 26 Jan. 1766.

¹¹ b. 20 July, 1764; but perhaps John, b. 25 Aug. 1761; or Thomas, bapt. Christ Church, 17 Nov. 1767.

¹ Of this Class we have two lists by Joshua Green,—one of August, 1773, given in a letter from B. H. Dixon, dated 24 Dec. 1847, and thus described:—

Memoranda from an interleaved almanac for the year 1773, in handwriting of J. Green. July 26th. I enter'd at Latin School and began in ye accidence.

* Erased in the original.

In this list Thomas Curtis, Joshua Payne and Charles Penny are added to those given in the text of the Catalogue of 1847, and we have placed them above on this authority, with the exception of Curtis, whom we have given in 1776, in which year he appears on Hunt's Catalogue, aged 11, having entered either then or in 1774, as explained in the note under that Class.

John Lovell, Foster Swift, Charles Basnet (though given on his second list), Roland Gilson, and James Forrest, who appear on Lovell's list, are omitted. For Nathaniel, Joshua Paine is given, which we have substituted, and for John Deblois, Gilbert, which name is repeated on his second list. See note 1, p. 101.

The second list is from an almanac of 1775, and is in two handwritings:—

THIRD CLASS AT SOUTH GRAMMAR SCHOOL, BOSTON, APRIL, 1775, viz:

Ebenzer Bass.	Saml. Borland.	Jack Gardner.
Nathan Frazier.	Benja. Homans.	Gilb. Deblois.

Jan'y 18th, Being ye Queen's Birthday Latin School did not keep—Writing School broke up.

NOTE.—“Jack Gardner” was John Sylvester John Gardiner, b. in So. Wales at Haverford West, 1765, sent by his Father, (see Class of 1744,) to Boston to be educated. At the breaking out of the Revolution he returned to his Father in the West Indies, and was sent, at the age of 11, to England, where he passed six years under the instruction of Dr. Farr. He was ordained at N. Y. in 1787 by Bishop Provoost, and became Rector of Trinity Church, Boston, in 1805. He died 29 July, 1830, at Harrowgate, England. See Allen's Biographical Dictionary; Duyckinck's Cycl. Amer. Lit. i. p. 586; and Sprague's Annals, vol. v. p. 363.

² Perhaps John M. of the Class of 1771. His name is omitted on both of Joshua Green's lists. He is given on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 12 years and 6 months.

³ The same name appears on Hunt's Catalogue in 1780, with no age attached. He probably left, re-entered, and went from here to college.

¹ The Catalogue of 1847 gave this name John Deblois, which is as it was written on Lovell's list, but we have inserted Gilbert on the authority of Joshua Green's memoranda. Mr. Greenough in his interleaved Catalogue has erased Gilbert Deblois from the Class of 1763 and inserted his name here instead of that of John. But, as we have intimated under that Class, there were two Gilberts, one the son of Gilbert, and brother of our Stephen of 1772, who was bapt. King's Chapel, 29 Sept. 1755, who, though rather young, is probably the boy belonging there; the other, son of Lewis, bapt. at the same church, 1 Feb. 1764, who was born 20 Dec. 1763, and died in Providence, R.I. in June, 1785, and undoubtedly the one who belongs here, if Joshua Green is correct. A letter which the Committee has received from Stephen G. Deblois, Esq. of our Class of 1826, maintains however that the name John, as given here by Lovell, and in the old Catalogue, is correct, and that the reference is to John, son of Gilbert (another brother of Stephen just referred to), who was born in 1767, and bapt. King's Chapel, 26 Dec. 1767, and died in London, 8 Mar. 1784.

² See his letters in Hist. Sketch.; Memorial Biographies published by New England Historic-Genealogical Society, 1881; also Loring's Hundred Boston Orators, p. 193.

³ We have retained this name, which was on the old Catalogue, because it is found on Lovell's list, and was also given by H. G. Otis, although it is omitted on Joshua Green's lists. We presume it only a repetition of Nathaniel, who is given under the Class of 1770, q. v., and reappears, as we suppose, in Mr. Hunt's Catalogue, under the Class of 1776.

⁵ See Allen's Biographical Dictionary, article on Joshua Paine, of Sturbridge, who was perhaps his father. We have inserted this name on the authority of Green's memoranda, and of Mr. Greenough's and Prof. Haynes's interleaved Catalogues, placing Nathaniel, who was here before, as one of the conjectures in the note under the name of Paine, given in the Class of 1770.

⁶ Samuel was the name inserted here in the Catalogue of 1847; a manuscript note in Rev. Dr. E. E. Hale's interleaved Catalogue, says on the authority of H. G. Otis. See the Class of 1771. Joshua Green's first list says John. His second list, and Prof. Haynes's and Mr. Greenough's Catalogues, probably following it, read John Erving W.; but presuming that John Erving belongs in the Class of 1772, as we have there stated, we think that the boy who belongs here may be Joseph, b. 18 June, 1764, a brother of John Jones, who was given in the old Catalogue in the Class of 1776-83, and appears on Hunt's Catalogue in the Class of 1776 as John Waldo, aged 11; unless the true case is that John Jones entered this year, and remained till the closing of the School, returning when it was re-opened. Under these circumstances, it seems best to us to insert the name John with a ? as it occurs in so many authorities, and in the lack of further information, to suppose him identical with John Jones.

² Appears on Hunt's Catalogue in 1777, aged 11.

³ Appears on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 12.

⁴ Appears on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776. The Christian names of Homans, Brackett and Bass are from J. Green's list; in reference to all these, see notes 3, p. 96, and 5, p. 98.

⁶ He is found on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 10. See notes 3, p. 96, and 5, p. 98.

⁷ On Hunt's Catalogue his name appears in 1778, again in 1779, aged 15, and then disappears. As he is not found in the years between this and those, it is probable that he left the School when it was closed, and remained away a couple of years or so, returning to finish here his preparation for college. See note 1, p. 100; also Allen's Biographical Dictionary.

⁸ A note from his brother Joshua, of Newton, is the authority for the date of his death. Joshua also says he himself was with H. G. Otis. He was younger, and is found on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776. An Israel, aged 9, appears on Hunt's Catalogue, entering in 1777, who must however, if this date is correct, be another boy.

⁹ Inserted on the authority of Joshua Green's list.

¹⁰ Both these names are erased on J. Green's first list, but are inserted because the surnames, though not the Christian names, are on Lovell's.

¹¹ b. 22 Feb. 1762, died 2 Jan. He appears in 1776 on Hunt's Catalogue, aged 15, and probably, like the others above, was in the School when it closed, and returned when it was re-opened. He was, according to the same authority, at the North Grammar School from 1769-73, before coming here. See notes 3, p. 96, and 5 p. 98.

Hubbard, Taylor, Deblois, Otis, Eustis, Jona. Swift, Paine, Waldo, Gardner, Davis, Brackett, Bass, Lamb, Dorr, Homans, Frazier, Green, Foster Penny, Basnet, Lowe, Eliot, were in the School when it closed in 1775, and Eustis, Waldo, Frazier, Bass, Eliot, Dorr, appear to have returned to the School at its re-opening in 1776, Brackett and Homans in 1777, Green in 1778, and Hubbard (perhaps) in 1780.

CHAPTER III.

1774-1781.

MR. HUNT's Catalogue, described in the next chapter, has supplied many deficiencies in the Classes from 1774 to 1805, originally printed from the reminiscences of gentlemen then living. But it begins with 1776, while Mr. Lovell's ended with 1773. Accordingly, we have no record of the Classes of 1774 and 1775. For the reason given below, there was probably no Class that could properly be designated as that of the latter year, but we have attempted to make up that of 1774 conjecturally by adding to the names on the old Catalogue the names of those who, according to Joshua Green's second list, entered the Class of 1773 later than the rest, and two names furnished to the Committee by Mrs. S. F. McCleary, Sen., after the old Catalogue was issued, and omitting John Cooper, Thomas Crafts, and Henry Roby, who, though members of this Class, did not probably enter it until after this year, as we find them on Mr. Hunt's Catalogue of the North Grammar School up to the time when that ceased to be.

Thomas Curtis, who is given in 1776, and is mentioned in note 1, p. 100, may perhaps belong in this Class.

² On Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 9. See note 1, above.

⁴ On Joshua Green's second list in April, 1775, as of the Class which entered in 1773. Against his name on the Catalogue of the North Grammar School, where he was in 1774-5, is April 4, which is perhaps the date of his leaving, and the age 7½. He is on Hunt's Catalogue in 1776, aged 9. After 1777 he disappears.

² b. 13 Nov. 1767, died 19 Aug. Left when the war began. Mrs. McCleary, his daughter, teste.

From April 19th, 1775, when the School was closed by Mr. Lovell, as described in the note of Hon. Harrison Gray Otis, which we give in the Historical Sketch, to Nov. 9th, 1776, when it was re-opened by the vote of the Town, there was no school. The Class of 1776, as given in the next chapter, no doubt contains the names of many boys who entered in 1774 and 1775 before April, and, like many previously noticed, were in School when it closed, and returned when it was re-opened.

CHAPTER IV.

THE Preface to the Catalogue of 1847, (p. iv. of the present edition), reads as follows:—

“Mr. Hunt’s Catalogue of the Boys who entered the School during his time, between 1776 and 1805, is unfortunately lost. His manuscript returns to the School Committee of the boys in the School in 1789, 1790, 1794, are extant, and are here published. Our only other sources for lists of his pupils are one or two of Mr. Carter’s returns of the “Latin boys” who went to his writing school, and the recollections of different gentlemen now or recently living, who were under his care. To these recollections, as will be seen, we are largely indebted. But it has proved impossible to reconcile them perfectly with each other, or to compile from them lists approaching the completeness of contemporary catalogues. It is particularly difficult to give the precise dates to names thus collected.”

As a note to Chapter III, in the same Catalogue, we read: “The materials of this chapter, with the exceptions which have been named, are the reminiscences recently collected of gentlemen now living.”

It is a great gratification to the Committee to be able now, entirely to supply, from the very best authority, the deficiencies thus lamented. No longer can it be said that Master Hunt’s Catalogue is lost.

At the annual meeting of the Latin School Association in 1875, Mr. E. S. Dixwell, a former Head Master of the School, the grandson of Master Hunt, presented to the Association a manuscript volume which he stated was a copy of Master Hunt’s Catalogue from 1776 to 1805; and the following letter from him explains the circumstances under which it came to light:—

CAMBRIDGE, June 14, 1881.

DEAR SIR:—In 1875 an old trunk was found in my brother’s house, which had been stored away in attics over fifty years and forgotten. The contents were unknown to any of our family. Certain reasons prompted an exploration of its contents, and it was broken open. It was found to contain papers left by my grandfather, Samuel Hunt, when he removed to Kentucky in 1816. Among them were two manuscript books, of size and shape convenient for the pocket; and they proved to be the very ones which tradition had reported as kept in his day by Master Hunt, and which we had so much desired to discover at the time we made the first attempt to form a Catalogue of the Latin School.

This chapter is made up from Master Hunt’s Catalogue of the South Grammar School, now for the first time printed.

Soon after that discovery I made a transcript of the lists therein contained, and presented it to the Latin School Association. I retain the originals myself, for reasons which are special and personal. * * * * *

Truly yours,

REV. HENRY F. JENKS.

E. S. DIXWELL.

Here was the missing link. From that Catalogue we have prepared the present chapter. A few names on the old Catalogue we do not find. They were probably inserted from the memory of gentlemen who thought they went to school here with the boys named, and who really may have gone elsewhere with them, and confused the places; a trick which we know is not unfrequently played by the memory upon those who trust to it without the additional aid of written records. Some of these names we are sorry to lose from our rolls, and on the possibility that they may have been at the School for a short time, not long enough to have been registered on the Catalogue, we have adopted concerning them, the practice already made familiar in the first chapter, of placing them "below the line," and awaiting further proof before we absolutely dismiss them.

Mr. Hunt's Catalogue is complete with the exception of the Class of 1781, and that hiatus we have supplied in a manner which will be explained under the Class itself. He gives each year a list of all the boys in the School, from which it is easy to see who finished the course, and who only remained a part of the time. He has arranged the boys apparently in classes, but the order of names is not alphabetical, and as there seemed no special reason for retaining his order, in view of the greater convenience of the alphabetical arrangement, the Committee has had no hesitation in deciding to change it in conformity thereto.

The ages of the boys are generally given against their names, in the year when they first appear at the school, and as this is a great help in identifying them, giving certainty, where in the conjectural restorations of Lovell's Catalogue there has been only probability as a guide, they have been retained. The residences of some are also given, and these too, as a matter of historical interest, have been preserved.

With some of the names in the Class of 1776 no age is given. Some of the boys thus unmarked are either on Hunt's Catalogue of the North School, or Lovell's Catalogue of ours, and were evidently transferred with the former from that School, or having been pupils of the latter at the closing of this, returned after it was re-opened. It seems, therefore, reasonable to infer that with the others, the absence of the age is an indication that they were old pupils who came back as soon as they could after the School was re-opened; and that some whose names are found neither on Hunt's list there, nor Lovell's here, may have been pupils of our school entering in 1774, a year for which we have no record. In later classes there are also found the names of boys who were at the North School before Mr. Hunt was transferred. It is not improbable that their families may have removed from town about the outbreak of hostilities, remained away until after the evacuation, or even longer, and then on their return the boys were sent to their old Master in his new school, either because their residences had been changed, thus obliging them to attend the South instead of the North School, or from a desire on the part of their parents to retain them under his instruction. In some of the later years too, occur the names of old pupils, who perhaps remained still longer out of town, or were temporarily under other teachers, and were finally sent here to receive the finishing touches before applying for admission to college. The course seems to have been seven years, though some boys remained longer and some completed it in less time.

In addition to the boys mentioned on p. 35, as transferred to the South Grammar School with Master Hunt, we find on his Catalogue these who appear on the Catalogue of the North Grammar School in the years named:—

Caleb Brooks Hall, of 1777, in 1774 and '75, aged 8 in the former year.

William Goodwin, of 1777, from 1760 to '75.

John S. Lillie, of 1777, from 1772 to '75.

John Cooper, of 1776, from '70 to '75; in '73 his age is given as 7; he probably should have been on the list of those transferred, as in '76 he appears with age marked 10.

Peter Boyer, of 1776, from 1772 to '74.

Thomas Crafts, of 1776, from 1774 to '76, aged 7 in 1774.

Joseph Loring, of 1776, from 1773 to '75.

Benjamin Homans, of 1777, we have taken to be the same as the Benjamin Homans of 1773, on Lovell's list; Robert Pierpont, of 1777, as the Robert Pierpont of 1768; John Doubleday (aged 15), of 1778, as the John Doubleday of 1772; Joshua Green, of 1779, as the Joshua Green of 1773; Michael Gill, of 1780, as possibly the Michael Gill of 1771; and John Hubbard, of 1780, as the John Hubbard of 1773.

The manuscript of Mr. HUNT'S CATALOGUE begins thus:—

April 19th 1775 A Detachment of the British Troops marched from Boston in Order to destroy some Military Stores, lodged at Concord, which immediately alarmed the Country & caused them to collect the Militia together to prevent the Troops from effecting their Purpose, or to defend themselves (as they knew not what might be their Designs) from any Danger they might be exposed to— In their way to Concord they met with a Number of the Inhabitants of Lexington in Arms. The Consequence of which was that the British Troops fired upon & killed Eight of the Militia, Which was y^e Comencement of a most unhappy unnatural & cruel Civil War— Which drove me from my School at the North Part of the Town, which I left the 6th August & resided at Little Cambridge till the next June 1776, when I was appointed by the Selectmen of Boston, Master of the South Grammar School.

The Catalogues which follow are those of the Pupils of the SOUTH GRAMMAR SCHOOL afterwards called the PUBLIC LATIN SCHOOL.

¹³ At North Grammar School in 1774, aged 14, July, 1774.

¹⁴ At North Grammar School in 1769-75. Entered 19 Feb. 1777. He was born in Portland Street, on the 26th of April, 1761. Being therefore some fourteen or fifteen years of age at the time of our Revolutionary struggle, he was capable of understanding something of the stirring scenes and events that were then transpiring around him. He had no active participation in them, however, save in one instance. On the night of the march of the British troops upon Lexington and Concord, he was despatched on horseback about ten o'clock in the evening by his father, to Roxbury and Watertown, to convey to Gen. Warren and other patriots intelligence of the expected expedition. His father had learned at that early hour the purpose for which the troops were mustering, through a domestic in his family who was intimate with one of the nurses employed in the Soldiers' Hospital, which was near his residence in Portland Street. The scenes amid which his early years were passed, were not without their influence. The spirit and principles of this heroic age of our national existence were stamped upon the character of Judge Hall, and were the controlling guides of his conduct through life. He was prepared for college at the Latin School in this city, and graduated at Cambridge in the year 1781, taking a respectable rank in a Class of which the late Samuel Dexter, Judge Davis and Judge Paine, of Vermont, were members. See Loring's Hundred Boston Orators, p. 307; also Whitman's History Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, second edition, p. 346.

³ At North Grammar School in 1772-'75. See p. 35.

⁴ bapt. King's Chapel, 23 July, 1766. At North Grammar School in 1773, aged 8.

⁵ Was very likely of our Class of 1774.

⁶ Entered Mar. 1777. Spelled Loyde. See Sabine, ii. 23 (on his father); Allen's and Drake's Biographical Dictionaries; also Bridgman's Epitaphs King's Chapel Burying Ground, p. 287. ⁷ Spelled Loyde.

⁸ Entered 4 Feb. 1777, aged 11.

¹¹ With his namesake below he entered 25 Mar. 1777. As there are other instances of Mr. Hunt's repeating a name, these two names, which are very near each other in his original Catalogue, may stand for the same individual; but, as we find on his manuscript in 1777 the same repetition, it is probable that there were two John Lowells.

See Allen's Biographical Dictionary; Loring's Hundred Boston Orators, p. 281; also Proceedings of Massachusetts Historical Society, 1835-'55, p. 160. In this memoir it is stated that he was prepared for college at Phillips Andover Academy. This does not preclude his having been for a time here. He was born at Newburyport, in 1769, which would make his age agree with that given by Mr. Hunt; so that it seems to us not improbable that we are correct in the identification, and our conclusion is confirmed by the Historical Sketch of Massachusetts Lodge (q. v.), p. 124. ¹² Entered 1 Jan. 1777, aged 15.

¹³ Entered 4 Feb. 1777, aged 12. Buried in the Cemetery on Boston Common.

The following boys appear on Mr. Hunt's Catalogue of this Class, in addition to those above, whom, for reasons already given, we suppose identical with those of the same name who are found in previous years on Mr. Lovell's list, and have accordingly omitted from the text. The year given against the name is that of the Class in which we suppose it to belong:—

Nathaniel Bethune, 1770; Edward Sohler, 1770; Charles Bulfinch, 1770; Edward Wendell, 1770; John Lovell, 1773; Nathaniel Eustis, 1770 [and 1773]; John Dashwood, 1771 [and 1772]; Samuel Quincey, 1771; William Webb, 1771; George Scott, 1771; Edward McLane, 1771; George Storer, 1772; Thomas Greenleaf, 1772; Harrison Gray Otis, 1773; John Soley, 1772; John Sohler, 1772; Samuel Waldo, 1771 [or 1773]; Edward Gray, aged 11, 1772; William Gray, 1772; Moses Peck, aged 10, 1772; John Waldo, aged 11, 1772 [or 1773]; John Savage, aged 10, 1774; John Fleet, aged 10, 1774; Thomas Crafts, aged 9, 1774; Benjamin Brackett, aged 11, 1773; John Gray, aged 9, 1774; William Crafts, ? 1771; Nathan Frazier, aged 10, 1773; Ebenezer Bass, aged 12, 1773; Simon Eliot, aged 15, 1773; Joseph Lovell, 1772; William Dorr, 1773.

The following in this Class have no ages attached, on Hunt's Catalogue. Those marked N, appear as his former pupils at the North Grammar School; those marked L, are on Lovell's list, and have already been noted by us as their names occurred. It is probable that he only put down the ages of new boys, at the time they entered, and it seems a fair inference that the other boys than those thus marked, were pupils of the School, entering in the years for which we have no record (1774, and 1775 previous to April 19), and that he found them members at the time he assumed charge.

³ Spelled Sympkins in Hunt's manuscript. See Allen's Biographical Dictionary.

⁴ At North Grammar School in 1774 as Benjamin Morgan, and in 1775 as Morgan.

⁵ Appears on the Catalogue of the North Grammar School in 1774-'76, and as Jonathan Stoddard, aged 7, April, 1773; in 1772-'74.

In the Catalogue of 1847 there is a list headed 1774-89, of boys supposed to have entered during those years to whom the committee was unable to assign the particular year of entrance. Of these, all who appear on Mr. Hunt's Catalogue have now been given in the year to which they respectively belong; the four following, however, are not on his list, and we must think their insertion an error.

*Isaac Boyle

and Columb. N.Y. 1838.

Son of Col. Boyle. Very likely he has been confounded with John Boyle (perhaps an older brother), who is given by Mr. Hunt in 1782. Isaac was born in 1783, but as he did not graduate from college until he was thirty years old, it seems very improbable that he entered this School before he was six.

*Samuel A. Shed

*George Templeman

Son of John.

*George Whipple

*1807

He is given on the old Catalogue as A.M., but his name is not found in the Catalogues of Harvard, Yale, New Jersey, Columbia, Brown, Bowdoin, or Dartmouth Colleges, so that it is probably incorrect. His name may have been George A. M. Whipple.

The following who do not appear on Hunt's Catalogue are given in the Catalogue of 1847:—

1776-83 *John Murray Forbes

Harv. 1787, A.M.

1777-84 *Charles Miller

Probably a mistake for James Miller, given by Mr. Hunt in 1782.

*Bossenger Foster

Harv. 1787, A.M.

*1816

His nephew, S. F. Haven, says the name is Bassenger. This and the preceding name appear to have been inserted on the authority of Dr. Gray, of our Class of 1781.

Editor of "The Portfolio," author of "The Lay Preacher." He was born in Boston, 10 August, 1768, but there appears no reason for retaining his name, which must have been inserted through some such error as is referred to on p. 103. See Proc. Mass. Hist. Soc. xvii. p. 362; also an account of him in a pamphlet privately printed by William W. Clapp, 1880; also Duyckinck's Cycl. of Amer. Lit. i. 583.

Both these names are on the authority of Dr. Thomas Gray, of our Class of 1781.

1 b. 28 Mar. 1767. His death was caused by an accident one Saturday afternoon, on or near the Common, at a place called the Laboratory, where squibs were sold to the boys. He procured some and put them in his pocket, where they exploded and burned him so badly, that he died after several weeks of intense suffering.

2 See note on same name in the Class of 1780.

3 Son of the Clerk of the United States Senate, of the same name, of our Class of 1748. See article on his father in Allen's Biographical Dictionary.

4 The middle name is first given in 1784. It is ordinarily spelled Johonnot.

5 The initial of the middle name is first given in 1782, but it is nowhere written out.

6 The middle name, which appears to have been only a letter, is not given by Mr. Hunt.

7 Lost at sea. See History of the Welles family, p. 122.

8 See New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. x. p. 65.

9 The middle name is interlined indistinctly in 1780.

² Died 2 Jan. aged nearly 85. Nephew of Gov. Hancock, and for many years occupant of the Hancock Mansion in Beacon Street.

³ Son of Rev. Simeon, and brother of Algernon Sidney, of our Class of 1784. He disappears after this year, and re-appears in 1784 when the middle name is first given. See Record of some of the descendants of Thomas Clarke of Plymouth, by Samuel C. Clarke.

⁴ The middle name S. appears in 1782. There are two John Osborns given this year, so that though one name may be a repetition of the other, it is hardly possible that this is identical with the John of 1779.

The name of Jonathan Williams occurs in this Class, but we omit him as probably the same boy as the John Williams in the Class before. He may however be the Jonathan of 1778, who appears as John in 1779 and 1780, now re-appearing as Jonathan. Mr. Hunt seems to have a great deal of trouble with the names John and Jonathan, and to have used them somewhat indiscriminately.

1 See Allen's Biographical Dictionary; also Appendix.

2 bapt. King's Chapel, 11 Jan. 1775.

3 Son of Major Jackson. Lived in Dock Square. Thomas Farrington, of our Class of 1788, teste.

4 Author of the song, "Adams and Liberty." His name was changed on the plea he had no "Christian name." See Duyckinck's Cycl. of Amer. Lit. i. 659; Allen's and Drake's Biographical Dictionaries; also Loring's Hundred Boston Orators, p. 284.

5 See New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. x. p. 64.

6 See Allen's Biographical Dictionary; also Recollections of Samuel Breck.

7 Re-entered 1784.

8 b. 6 Aug. 1772; died 17 Oct.

9 Appears in 1783 with middle name P., in 1784, Pr., and as here given in 1785.

10 Brothers, and brothers of Edward of 1774, John W. of 1776, George of 1779, and perhaps of Charles C. of 1786. Thomas Farrington says John T. lived in Milk or Atkinson Streets. He succeeded his brother George in business as a broker.

² Spelled with an s in 1783 and 4.

³ Son of our John of 1751; grandson of Edward (the merchant); brother of John (in Boston in 1849). H. B. Pearson, teste, 29 Mar. 1849.

⁴ bapt. King's Chapel, 27 May, 1774, and the name spelled Clemens; died before 1816. Brother of Charles and Thomas, of our Class of 1780.

⁵ b. 25 Feb. See New England Historical and Genealogical Register for 1862, p. 17.

⁷ See Allen's Biographical Dictionary.

⁸ Disappears after this year, but we suppose him to have re-entered in 1784. He was a brother of Henry, Charles, and James, of that year.

⁹ bapt. King's Chapel, 30 Sept. 1774. See Allen's Biographical Dictionary. "Died at his residence in West Claremont, N.H., Feb. 9, 1848, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. He was born in Boston in 1774, and educated at the Latin School in this city. Soon after his graduation from that institution, he studied medicine under his uncle, Dr. Charles Jarvis, an eminent physician of Boston; and on being admitted to practice he removed, in 1797, to Claremont, to an estate purchased by his father of Hon. Sanford Kingsbury. There he devoted himself to medicine and to agriculture; and till his retirement from practice about 1820, was one of the most eminent and successful practitioners in Cheshire County. He was descended from a respectable family in Massachusetts. His great grandfather, Nathaniel Jarvis, born in 1668, emigrated from Wales to Boston, and married Elizabeth Peabody, of Maine. He died in Boston in 1738, leaving three sons, Leonard, John and Nathaniel. John moved to Connecticut, leaving numerous descendants in that State, among whom were a former bishop of that diocese, his son, Rev. Dr. Jarvis of Middletown, and Dr. George O. Jarvis, a distinguished physician of Portland, in that State. Among the descendants of Nathaniel is Leonard Jarvis, Esq., a merchant of Baltimore, well known in that city for his wealth and liberality. The other son, Leonard, born in Boston in 1715, married Sarah Church, grand-daughter of Col. Church, distinguished in the Indian wars, especially for the victory over King Philip, at Mount Hope."

¹⁰ Spelled Lambson, but in 1783 Lampson.

¹¹ He may have entered in 1781. The middle name is first given in 1784.

All are probably brothers. We also omit the name of Gerrish Barrett, supposing it the same as in 1777.

A manuscript note in Rev. E. E. Hale's interleaved Catalogue, claims Dr. McKean as a member of this Class, on the authority of Alden's Biography. This biography we cannot find. Mr. Hunt's Catalogue does not give his name; the memoir of him by Dr. Levi Hedge, (Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll'n's, second series, vol. viii, p. 157,) and the notice of him in Sprague's Annals, viii, 414, mention that he was a pupil "at a public school in Boston," previous to 1787, but do not specify this, and there seems no authority for putting him here. A note from Mrs. Charles Folsom (his daughter) says: "Dr. McKean was fitted at the Latin School." He could have been here, if at all, only a very short time. He was prepared for College at Andover, and entered in 1790, at the age of little more than fourteen years.

Mrs. Folsom adds that when he had reached a very advanced age, Mr. Hunt was a frequent visitor at her father's house.

See Proceedings Mass. Historical Society, 1791-1835, p. 273, note.

¹ See article on John Dixwell, the regicide, in Allen's Biographical Dictionary; also By-Laws of St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, p. 109.

² Under the year 1785, the date 20 Feb. 1786, appears against his name, at which time he probably left. ³ See Historical Sketch of Massachusetts Lodge.

⁴ The middle name is given in the Catalogue of 1847. In 1789 his residence is given as New Boston. See Whitman's History of Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, 2d edit. p. 383; Drake's Biog. Dict.; also Proc. Mass. Hist. Soc. 1791-1835, p. 277, note.

⁷ b. 8 Dec. 1776. Entered college before he was fifteen. In 1789 his residence is given as State Street.

Bishop Dehon, at the Boston Grammar School, was under the care of Mr. Hunt, who expressed an exalted opinion of his talents and scholarship; and was always speaking his praise. One of his schoolfellows remembers that during the seven years he remained at this school, he was invariably at the head of his class, and that when he left the school, at the age of fourteen years, he received the first honor, being appointed to deliver the English oration. The teacher used often to remark that while some of his pupils seemed born for obscurity, Theodore was born for eminence and distinction. "I always," said he, "marked him for a great man, and thought he would arrive at what he did."

This seems to be from notes from one of the family. Essay on Dehon's Life, by D. Gadsden, p. 4. See Drake's and Allen's Biographical Dictionaries; Life by C. E. Gadsden; also Dalcho's History of the Church in South Carolina, p. 223.

⁴ See Drake's Biographical Dictionary; also Appendix.

Charles, Henry, and James Jackson, brothers, were admitted June 7; and Robert Jackson was also admitted at the same time. He was another brother, and we suppose identical with the Robert of 1782, who appears to have been out of the School in 1783, and so we do not repeat his name.

⁵ The middle name is first given in 1785.

⁶ In 1789 his residence is given as Beacon Street.

⁷ The middle name is spelled by Mr. Hunt, Johonnot; we follow the usual spelling, and that of the Harvard Quinquennial. In 1789 his residence is given as Marlborough Street.

⁸ Perhaps another Joseph, who received the same degree at Yale in 1820, and died in 1839.

⁹ Son of Rt. Rev. Samuel Parker; brother of Samuel D. of our Class of 1788. In 1789 his residence is given as Pond Lane.

¹⁰ Given without the middle name in 1785.

his age is given as 12¾, which would

¹⁰ In the Catalogue of 1847 he is given as Harnden Palmer. An initial J. for the first name is written in Mr. Dixwell's copy in this and one or two subsequent years. He was undoubtedly John Hampden Palmer b. 22 Feb. 1780, 4th child of Master Hunt's sister Elizabeth and Joseph P. Palmer, Harv. 1771. ¹¹ Residence in 1789 given Newbury St.

¹² In 1789 his residence is given as New Boston.

The Franklin Medals were first awarded in 1793; and he, with John Joy of 1788, and Daniel Bates of 1792, received them.

The name of Jacob Parker is given in this Class in the Catalogue of 1847, but we omit it, supposing him identical with the Jacob Parker who appears in Hunt's Catalogue in 1779.

In this Class is also given, as entering 22 June, 1787, Sydney Algernon Howard, which name is repeated in 1787-8-9, when he appears to have left school. We suppose him identical with the Algernon Sydney Howard of 1784; that he left and re-entered. He was a brother of John Clarke Howard of 1780, and son of Rev. Simeon, and the former is the correct collocation of his names.

³ In 1789 his residence is given as Common Street.

⁵ In 1789 his residence is given as Friend Street; in 1792-3 as Federal Street; died 31 Aug. aged 85 years. See Appendix.

⁶ Son of Rev. Dr. Thomas Gair.

⁷ In 1789 his residence is given as Water Street, and in 1792 as Beacon Street. See note under John Collins Warren, p. 122. He was one of the three (with John C. Warren, Class of 1786, and Daniel Bates, Class of 1792,) to whom the Franklin Medals were first awarded in 1793.

⁹ In 1789 his residence is given as New Boston. See his Funeral Sermon by Rev. S. K. Lothrop, D.D., Boston, 1862.

¹⁰ In 1789 his residence is given as Marlborough St.

In his copy of Master Hunt's Catalogue, Mr. Dixwell has written the following note under this Class:—

"No list for 1790 and 91, like the others, appears to be registered. The admissions are recorded at the end of the preceding year, and an x is placed against the names of those, seemingly, who were withdrawn in that year, by which data the following register of the next year has been composed. It is approximately correct."

We have omitted the names given in previous years, and give the names of those entering in this year from the list prepared as thus described.

April 1, 1790. Report on Latin School: "found the same in very good order." Still six classes,—impossible as yet to reduce to four: gradually to be done. Want of punctuality—perhaps necessary to change the hour. JOHN SCOLLAY.

May 11, 1790. The Committee by vote of the Town: "— are further empowered to pull down the Dwelling House in School Street, now occupied by Master Hunt, and erect on the lot where the same now stands a School House with two stories, sufficient to accommodate the children of the centre of town with a reading and writing school, the materials of the said house to be applied thereto as far as they may be suitable to that purpose.

"Further, that Faneuil Hall be occupied, until this is built, by the children now in Mr. Carter's Centre Reading School."

Master Hunt in 1774 agreed to devote himself for life to teaching on condition of receiving the same emoluments as Master Lovell. Accordingly the town voted him £30 as house rent beside his salary. When he was transferred to the South Grammar School, he occupied the house which Lovell had vacated, in lieu of the £30.

In 1790 he received a peremptory notice, still preserved, to remove, as the Selectmen were about to pull down his house the next Monday. For that year he received a grant for rent, yet no new agreement in regard to a dwelling was ever proposed to him.

1791. An effort was made at this time to reduce the course gradually to four years.

Committee reports that Latin boys (22) be taught writing in their own school.

Hunt's return, April, 1791, gives the names of 62 boys.

Nov. 8. In conference of Masters and Committee, Mr. Hunt said that a private school was in his opinion quite incompatible with a public school. [Many of the masters kept private schools at the hours when they were not occupied in the public schools.]

After the Class of 1791, on Mr. Hunt's Catalogue, as preserved by Mr. Dixwell, follows a copy of a loose sheet which appears to be a return of the pupils to the School Committee in 1792, 3. It was probably made out and presented at the yearly visitation of the Committee in July, (of that year) 1793, and it seems to us best to give it for the suggestions it contains, as it shows the difficulty the Committee has labored under in arranging the boys according to the years of entering, and helps somewhat to locate them in their classes.

³ Son of Samuel and brother of George and Francis of our Class of 1800.

⁴ Died 3 Apr. The middle name is not given by Mr. Hunt, but we find it in the Catalogue of 1847. Son of Nathaniel W. of our Class of 1762. See Rough Sketch of Appleton Genealogy, by W. S. Appleton, p. 27.

⁵ Son of a widow who kept a shop in Union Street. Thomas Farrington, teste.

⁶ Son of Master Hunt. Brother of John of our Class of 1789, and William G. of the Class of 1802. Died 30 Jan.

⁷ Joseph Green Joy, probably our boy, died at Nahant, 1850; See Allen's Biog. Dict.

⁸ Thomas Farrington writing of him as in School at this time, says he was an Irish boy who used to assist Dr. Matignon at the Roman Catholic Church in Franklin St.

He is given on the old Catalogue, and but for that we should have no doubt that the name of J. Malone given in that Catalogue as in the School in 1786 was intended for him, since the latter name is not found in Hunt's Catalogue. We have retained Malone under the line, only because the Committee by giving both names in 1847, seems to have intended to refer to different individuals.

From the Records of the School Committee it appears that in 1792, the salary of the Latin School Master was £200, and that of the Usher, £80.

² Died in St. Croix, 15 May.

⁴ These dates are probably those of admission.

⁶ Died 24 Aug.

⁷ Shot by T. O. Selfridge. See Allen's and Drake's Articles on Benjamin Austin, his father. Also (Jos. T.) Buckingham's Reminiscences, i. 278-9.

⁸ The middle name is given in the Catalogue of 1847 and the final s is omitted, as it is in the Harvard Quinquennial. He was a brother of Isaac, whose name appears under the line on page 111.

1795. July 6. Visitation.

Dec. 10. An additional salary of £50 was voted for the year, and £80 to the ushers.

1796. Jan. 7. Visitation. There was a grant of £100 extra (probably to the Master.)

³ See Allen's and Drake's Biographical Dictionaries.

⁴ The initial of the middle name A. appears in 1802. We take the name from the Harvard Quinquennial.

⁵ Although the age does not quite correspond, it is so near, that we think likely that this is John Minot Fosdick, Dart. 1803, who died at Sing Sing, N. Y., in 1856, æt 74, as we find in Chapman's History of Graduates of Dartmouth, that he was born in Boston.

⁶ We take the middle name from the Harvard Quinquennial.

1797. May 19. On the records of the School Committee of this date, it appears that a petition of Mr. Samuel Hunt to the Town, for an allowance for house rent, was referred by the Town to the School Committee for consideration. The Committee voted it did not think it expedient to make any discrimination between the different Masters in the service of the Town.

May 25. Mr. Hunt appeared and stated his reasons for asking this compensation for rent, when the Committee voted to reconsider the vote of the last meeting, and to postpone the subject until the compensation of the Masters for the year was considered.

Sept. 15. A letter from Mr. Hunt, praying for compensation for house rent having been read, it was Voted: That the Selectmen be requested to inquire into the state of the land in Braintree, bequeathed to the Town of Boston, for the support of the Grammar School, (referred to in Mr. Hunt's communication), and report thereon.

Dec. 1. Col. Thos. Dawes, Rev. Mr. West, Mr. Gray and Mr. Edwards were appointed a special committee to inquire into the facts stated in Mr. Hunt's application for compensation for rent, etc.

The same day, Jona. Snelling was chosen Master of the Centre Writing School, a public writing school kept in the same building as the Latin School.

² The middle name is from the Harvard Quinquennial, which also spells the last with an e.

⁴ See Allen's and Drake's Biographical Dictionaries.

⁵ Son of Joseph May of our Class of 1769; b. 19 Mar. 1788; died 21 Mar. See May Genealogy, p. 21.

² Mr. Hunt's Catalogue says merely Price Greenleaf. The first name we have on his own authority, for as these pages go to press (20 April, 1882) Ezekiel Price Greenleaf is the oldest known living pupil of the Latin School. The Committee is in receipt of the following letter from him:—

“No. 72 Waltham St., Boston, April 19, 1882.

“REV. HENRY F. JENKS.

“Dear Sir,—I was introduced by my grandfather, Ezekiel Price, who had been for many years Chairman of the Selectmen, to Mr. Hunt, charged to his especial care early in 1800; at my entrance I was addressed by F. Parkman and my brother, Thomas Greenleaf, who were leaving the School for College, having past their examination. The head of the Class was a son of Dr. Winship, I was the next, and John Scollay, grandson of Mr. Scollay of the Board of Selectmen, the next. I forget the names of the others, except Doctor Townsend and his brother; there were say, five others; we were under the care of Mr. Wells, I believe afterwards a bookseller. I left for Quincy the next year, and thence to Medford, and after to Quincy. * * * * *

“Respectfully,

“EZEKIEL PRICE GREENLEAF.”

Francis Parkman, mentioned above, was of our Class of 1800, Thomas Greenleaf was of 1792, and Doctor Townsend was Solomon D. of 1803.

Through his maternal grandfather Ezekiel Price, mentioned in the letter above, Ezekiel Price Greenleaf is a direct lineal descendant of Master Ezekiel Cheever.

⁴ Son of Dr. David and brother of Solomon D. of our Class of 1803. See Memorials of Massachusetts Cincinnati by F. S. Drake, p. 63. The S stands for no middle name.

¹ The middle name is furnished by his brother, Rev. John L. Watson, of our Class of 1805. He was second son and seventh child of Marston and Lucy (Lee) Watson, born in Marblehead, 14 July, 1788. Clerk in counting room of Daniel Sargent; died 9 Aug. Buried in the family tomb on the Common.

² According to the letter of Greenleaf given in the note on p. 136, son of Charles Williams Windship of our Class of 1782, and perhaps father of Charles Windship of our Class of 1823. In a note under the Class of 1782 will be found various ways in which this name is spelled, to which may be added Windschip.

In a note to Mr. E. S. Dixwell, dated 12 May, 1874, Mr. Andrews says his older brother Isaiah Thomas Andrews was also a member of the School at the same time with himself, but his name is nowhere on Mr. Hunt's Catalogue.

² Brother of David S. of our Class of 1800.

³ Rev. Dr. Watson says he was Captain of a Latin School Military Company.

⁴ Died 16 Aug. aged 82 years.

⁵ A son of Thomas of our Class of 1766. b. 14 May, 1794; died 27 Jan. His son says he is pretty sure his father went to the Latin School. It is possible, however, that this should be James Greenleaf, an older brother, b. 10 July, 1792, and drowned in Boston Harbor, 18 July, 1815. See Wm. Dawes and his ride with Paul Revere, by H. W. Holland, p. 70. No Christian name was given here by Mr. Andrews.

⁸ Brother of Robert C. of our Class of 1812. Lived in New York City and died there.

⁹ Rev. Dr. Watson thinks he has an indistinct recollection of a Samuel Spear at the School about this time.

¹⁰ The Christian names in this instance are given on the authority, not of Mr. Andrews, but of Dr. Watson, who adds that he thinks he may have died early. He was a brother of Thomas, below, and son of Judge W. who lived in Sudbury Street.

¹¹ Dr. Watson says the name should be Welsh. He was son of Thomas.

¹² Dr. Frothingham gives 1821 as the date of his death.

CHAPTER V.

1801-1805.

THE names in this chapter do not appear on Mr. Hunt's Catalogue, although they are found on the Catalogue of 1847 under the years here given, which were during his administration.

They probably were assigned, on entering, to advanced classes, and this would account for their omission on Mr. Hunt's register, which for the last few years is quite imperfect, giving only the names of those who were received in the lowest class, instead of, as earlier, a list of the whole membership for each year.

Possibly, however, they entered after Mr. Hunt's departure, and were assigned by Master Biglow to classes which had entered under Mr. Hunt; or they may have entered during Mr. Thacher's temporary mastership of the School in 1805, between Mr. Hunt and Mr. Biglow, and thus escaped enrolment on the list of either. We are somewhat inclined to the latter opinion, for though we have no list of those entering under Mr. Thacher, we have a list (to be given in a note under the next chapter), of the boys in the School when Mr. Biglow took charge of it, on which some of the names appear, with Mr. Thacher mentioned as their previous instructor.

³ Brother of Francis and George of our Class of 1800.

⁴ Rev. J. L. Watson, D.D., of our Class of 1805, records a reminiscence of some members of this Class, as follows: "I remember very well a dialogue taken from the 'American Art of Speaking,' or some such name, between Dr. Never-out, Dr. Doubty, Longhead and another character, in which B. L. Weld was Dr. Never-out; Dr. Edward Reynolds was Dr. Doubty; George E. Head was Longhead; and N. L. Frothingham the other character. At a rehearsal Head, whose duty it was to horsewhip or cane Frothingham, did it so much in earnest, that Frothingham cried out, 'Oh, George, you hurt.'"

⁵ We insert this name on the authority of Wm. T. Andrews, his younger brother, of our Class of 1804, q. v., and of Dr. Watson of our Class of 1805, who says he remembers him here.

⁷ Brother of Dr. John C. Warren of our Class of 1786.

⁸ Son of John West, the bookseller. Warren and West were fitted for College at Dr. Gardiner's private school, says Dr. Watson.

The above probably entered before the rest, perhaps before Mr. Hunt left, and were assigned to advanced standing, as we find them on the Catalogue of 1847 in the Classes of 1801 and 1803.

THE following list is on the files of the Committee. It is in a fair copy hand, signed with the name Gulielmus Mackay Junior, 1808, in Old English. The Christian names, which are given in brackets, are inserted in lead pencil, probably by a later hand. It is headed: Mr. Biglow took charge of the Latin Grammar School April 15, 1805: and is written in three columns, as given below, the first of which is headed "Names;" the second, "Time of commencing with Mr. Biglow;" and the third, "By whom previously instructed."

¹ Rev. Dr. Watson says he had a brother Thomas, who was also at our School. We do not find him on the list beginning on p. 142, nor on any other in our possession.

³ Brother of Henry and Richard C. of our Classes of 1799 and 1807.

⁴ See Burial Register of King's Chapel; also, pamphlet on the Descendants of William Curtis, by Samuel C Clarke, p. 23.

⁵ Son of Thomas, brother of Charles P. of our Class of 1803, and of James F. above. See the pamphlet mentioned in the preceding note, p. 22.

⁶ This name is inserted on the authority of Rev. J. L. Watson, D.D. below, who writes May 16th, 1882: "I can say positively he was at the B. Latin School in some of the years that I was there. . . . I left him at the School in 1809, and in 1811 he entered our Class, 1815, H. C., . . and at the end of the Sophomore year, or perhaps a little before that, he left College."

⁷ Inserted on Rev. E. E. Hale's interleaved Catalogue.

⁸ Son of Caleb, and brother of Charles G. of our Class of 1804.

⁹ Dr. Watson says there was a boy in the School by the name of Morse or Morss, whose Christian name he never knew, but whom Master Biglow used to call up in this wise, "O mors, mors, pallida mors," and the name stuck to him, so that the boys called him "Pallidy Morse," many of them probably hardly knowing that he had any other name.

¹⁰ Brother of Francis and George, of our Class of 1800.

¹¹ Son of Dr. Rand. Lived in Cambridge Street, north of Hanover.

¹² Son of Dr. Spooner, who lived in Bulfinch Street, in the rear of the present (1882) Revere House.—J. L. W. See Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll. 3d series, vol. i. p. 265.

¹³ The Christian name, omitted in the Catalogue of 1847, is inserted here on the authority of Dr. Watson.

¹⁴ The Christian name is inserted on Dr. Hale's interleaved Catalogue, and confirmed by a letter from Ebenezer Thayer, of our Class of 1806.

¹ No Christian name appears in the Catalogue of 1847. Although members of his family say Lynde M. never went to the School, Gen. Henry K. Oliver, of our Class of 1810-11, says he certainly remembers him as a school-mate, and (May, 1882,) declares it would be more of a mistake to omit than to insert his name. Perhaps William Bicker Walter, who appears in the Class of 1808, may have been intended. Mr. Greenough's interleaved Catalogue suggests William, which would confirm the supposition.

² Rev. Dr. Watson sends the names of several boys whom he remembers as school-mates, but as we do not find them elsewhere recorded as at our School, we think they must have been with him either at Master Pemberton's school which he attended after leaving this, or at Nicholas Faucon's evening school in Newbury Street. We insert them, however, in the hope that by doing so, we may gain further information by which we can determine definitely whether they should be put upon our list or not.

May, 1882. Rev. Dr. Watson having just revised this list, writes, that of most of these he feels reasonably sure, and of those marked † quite certain.

⁴ Brother of Samuel, of our Class of 1803.

⁵ There is probably very little doubt that this Christian name, omitted in the Catalogue of 1847, is correctly inserted here. An older brother, Nathaniel Hurd Furness, who died in 1872, is supposed to have been a pupil of our School, but as he left school in 1806, must have been in an earlier Class, if here at all. His name is not found on any list.

² He was captured in the Chesapeake according to Mr. Hayden's letter, referred to above.

³ When at School, lived in a house opposite Little, Brown and Co.'s present (1882) publishing house.

⁴ This name is inserted to correspond with the list in note to p. 142.

⁵ Perhaps a younger brother of Andrew G. of our Class of 1805.—J. L. W.

⁶ The Catalogue of 1847 says, afterwards John Temple James Bowdoin, which is an error. His Memoir, (Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll. 3d series, ix. 224,) says he was a pupil of our School. At his death, his brother, John Temple Winthrop, Harv. 1815, (probably a pupil of our School, as some of our older living pupils think they remember him here, and perhaps of this Class, though we have no record to justify placing him in it) in accordance with the Will of the founder of Bowdoin College, dropped the name of Winthrop, adding in its place that of James Bowdoin. See Whitman's Hist. A. and H. Art. Co. 2d edit, p. 407.

⁷ The middle name we obtain from Rev. Dr. Watson, who says he went to College, but never graduated, and died soon after 1822. He had three brothers—Henry, of 1799; Stephen, of 1805; and Edward, and lived at the corner of Allston and Middlecot Streets.

² We add this name on the authority of the list given in the note on p. 142, which mentions a Kuhn 2d, and of Dr. Watson, who remembers a John Kuhn at the School, a cousin of George H. above, and son of John Kuhn, a tailor, to whose business he succeeded.

⁶ Author of a History of Boston.

⁷ Son of Dr. Spooner, and brother of William Jones S. of our Class of 1805.

⁸ Son of Samuel and lived in South Street.—J. L. W.

⁹ Probably a brother of Dr. John C. Warren, of our Class of 1786. The Catalogue of 1847 gives a middle name Henry, which is incorrect, if our identification is not wrong.

¹⁰ According to the list in the note on p. 142, q. v. another Wells entered Sept. 1807.

¹¹ We had questioned whether the Christian name here, which was omitted in the Catalogue of 1847, might not be John Adams, Harv. 1820, but in the memoranda of Dr. Watson, we find a William, brother of Robert above, and on that authority we insert the name.

³ In a letter from Mr. Hayden of our Class of 1807, the first name is given Benjamin instead of Arthur.

⁴ The Christian name is a suggestion of Dr. Watson's.

⁵ The Christian name, omitted in the Catalogue of 1847, was suggested by Ebenezer Thayer, of our Class of 1806, and is inserted as given on information received from Hon. E. T. Fogg, of South Scituate, his son.

⁶ See New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. xxiii. (Apr. 1869), p. 109.

⁷ From Charleston, S. C.—W. H.

⁸ Son of Eben. Larkin, the bookseller.

⁹ Entered Harvard College, Class of 1815, but did not graduate.

¹⁰ Another son of R't Rev. Samuel.

¹² The first name, omitted in the Catalogue of 1847, is inserted on his own authority.

¹⁴ Brother of Jonathan G. above.

¹⁵ Dr. Watson says he was a nephew of Rev. Dr. Walter of Christ Church. He adds, "Mr. Biglow used often to administer a dose of his 'Dr. Busby' to him, and at the same time with a grim kind of jocoseness repeat for his benefit the following jingle: 'Walter, Walter, if you don't alter, you'll come to the halter.'"

¹⁶ Brother of Samuel W. of 1805.

¹⁷ Dr. W. says he was a "North-ender."

lived in "Cape Cod" Row, and was named Samuel.

² The middle name, which was printed West in the Catalogue of 1847, is now changed on the authority of John J. May, of our Committee, and of the Rev. Dr. George E. Ellis. He was drowned at Zurich, Switzerland, 22 Aug. See Wordsworth's Elegiac Stanzas on his death.

⁴ Cousin of T. R. J. in the Class of 1813.

⁵ See Burial Register of King's Chapel.

⁶ See Whitman's History of Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co. second edition, p. 435.

⁷ See a letter in the Appendix. Author of "Aids to English Composition."

⁸ Perhaps the same who was afterwards George Leicester Snelling.

⁹ This name, on the Catalogue of 1847, was spelled Stevenson. Are we wrong in our identification?

¹¹ Perhaps a brother of the above. George Richards Minot Thayer, b. 6 Nov. 1800, died 6 Aug. 1841; or Frederick Nathaniel Thayer, b. 30 July, 1801, died 5 Aug. 1827.

² Dr. Watson says this could not have been Adolphus Eugene Watson, Harv. 1820, A.M., died 1876, his youngest brother, whose name has been inserted on Dr. Hale's interleaved Catalogue, and in addenda to the edition of the Catalogue in 1847, and was suggested by Dr. Furness, as he was never at the Latin School.

³ This name was printed Woods in the Catalogue of 1847, but Mr. Charles Hickling, of this Class, says it should be Wood, as he was a brother of John above.

⁵ See Proceedings of Massachusetts Historical Society, 1881-3, p. 298; also Appendix.

"The regular course of studies, the years of academical and professional education, have not yielded me better facts than some idle books under the bench at the Latin School."—Emerson's Essays.

⁶ Perhaps identical with the Gibbs of the Class of 1810-1811. Dr. Farley, of that Class, thinks Samuel Gibbs had no middle name.

⁷ Is he George Manson Hanners, Yale, 1823, A.M., M.D. 1827? ⁸ Died soon after 1830.

² See Collections of Massachusetts Historical Society, 4th series, vol. ii. pp. 241-245.

⁴ Son of Rev. William Jenks, D.D., of our Class of 1790.

⁷ See a letter in the Appendix.

⁸ Not on the Catalogue of 1847, but inserted on Dr. Hale's Catalogue; and in addenda to Catalogue of 1847.

1814-1828.

THE chapter corresponding to this in the Catalogue of 1847, extended from 1814-1836, and a note stated that as far as 1824 it was "made up mostly from Mr. Gould's printed catalogues from 1819 to 1824, and from the School records of those who finished the whole course." It has seemed better to divide it, so as to make a separate chapter of Mr. Gould's administration, as was done in the case of Mr. Biglow's. Most of the changes in names in this chapter, of which there are several, are made on the authority of the owners themselves, or members of their immediate families, from whom the Committee has received much assistance. As the letters from these sources contain much interesting matter, for which there is not room in this volume, they have been filed among the archives of the Association.

CHAPTER VIII.

1828-1837.

DURING the time embraced in this Chapter, Mr. Leverett and Mr. Dillaway were Head Masters of the School. As the term of each was short, and there is no special reason for separating the pupils who entered under one from those entering under the other, it has seemed best to the Committee to embrace in this Chapter the remainder of what was contained in Chapter IV of the Catalogue of 1847, and to begin, as in that, a new chapter with the commencement of the mastership of Mr. Dixwell.

CHAPTER IX.

1837-1884.

CHAPTER V of the Catalogue of 1847 begins with the Class of 1837, the first to enter the School under the Mastership of Mr. Dixwell, and ends with the Class which entered the year of the publication of that volume. A note to the chapter says it "is taken from the present School Register, in which the names are placed under the year in which each pupil entered the School." As the same source of information has been used by the Committee in compiling this continuation of the Catalogue from 1847 to the present time, and will probably be used by future Committees in the preparation of subsequent editions, as they are required, it has seemed best from this point to embrace in a single chapter all the Classes since the beginning of Mr. Dixwell's Mastership.

APPENDIX.

A.

WHILE these pages have been passing through the press we have found in the History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company the names of the following Boston boys.

Several of them were graduates of Harvard College, and if prepared at school it seems not unlikely that they were our boys, and that their names might with reasonable probability be added to those given beneath the line in Chapter I.

B.

THE book most generally associated with the name of Cheever is "The Accidence." This he wrote, it is supposed, while he was in New Haven. A fac-simile of the title-page of the eighteenth edition is shown herewith.

The Rev. William Bentley, D. D., of Salem [1759-1819], thus speaks of it in his "Notes for an Address on Education."

"His Accidence was the wonder of the age, and though, as his biographer and pupil Dr. Cotton Mather observed, it had not excluded the original grammar, it passed through eighteen editions before the Revolution, and had been used as generally as any elementary work ever known. The familiar epistles of this master to his son, minister of Marblehead, are all worthy of the age of Erasmus, and of the days of Ascham."

"Before Mr. Chever's Accidence obtained, Mr. John Brinsley's method had obtained, and this was published in 1611, three years before Chever was born. It is in question and answer, and was undoubtedly known to Chever, who has availed himself of the expression, but has most ingeniously reduced it to the form of his Accidence, 134 small 4to pages, to 79 small 12mo. with the addition of an excellent Table of Irregular Verbs from the great work of the days of Roger Ascham."

A SHORT INTRODUCTION TO THE LATIN TONGUE; FOR THE USE OF THE LOWER FORMS IN THE LATIN SCHOOL, BEING THE ACCIDENCE, REVISED AND COMPILED IN THAT MOST EASY AND ACCURATE METHOD, WHEREIN THE FAMOUS M ^r . EZEKIEL CHEVER TAUGHT, AND WHICH HE FOUND THE MOST ADAPTACIOUS, BY TWENTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. TO WHICH IS ADDED, A CATALOGUE OF IRREGULAR NOUNS AND VERBS, DISPOSED ALPHABETICALLY. THE EIGHTEENTH EDITION.

PRINTED BY JOHN MYCALL, FOR E. BATTLE, AND SOLD BY THEM AT THEIR SHOPS IN BOSTON AND NEWBURY-PORT.
M.DCC.LXXXV.

The library of Harvard College contains several editions of this book, the earliest being the tenth, Boston, 1767. Mr. Barnard mentions the seventh, Boston, 1704, as being in the library of George Brinley, Esq., of Hartford, Conn. He gives a representation of the title-page of the twentieth edition, Salem, 1785. The last edition was published in Boston as late as 1838, and it had the accompanying title-page.

This edition was preceded by a prospectus* containing commendations of the work from Hon. Josiah Quincy, LL. D., President of Harvard University; Benjamin Shurtleff, A. M., M. D.; Hon. Benjamin Abbott, LL. D., Principal of Phillips Exeter Academy; Hon. John Pickering, LL. D.; Samuel Walker, Esq.; Rev. Nathaniel Thayer, D. D.; Rev. Thaddeus M. Harris, D. D.; Hon. John Davis, LL. D., Judge of the U. S. District Court; Hon. Benjamin Whitman, A. M.; Rev. Ezra Ripley, D. D.; Rev. Palmer Dyer, A. M.; Hon. Alden Bradford, A. M., S. H. S.; Hon. Nahum Mitchell, A. M., S. H. S.; and Hon. George Blake, A. M., A. A. S. President Quincy says: "A work which was used for more than a century in the schools of New England as the first elementary book for learners of the Latin language; which held its place, in some of the most eminent of those schools, nearly, if not quite, to the end of the last century; which has passed through, at least, twenty editions in this country; which was the subject of the successive labor and improvement of a man who spent seventy years in the business of instruction, and whose fame is second to that of no schoolmaster New England has ever produced, requires no additional testimony to its worth or its merits." Samuel Walker says: "I have carefully revised and corrected the ancient and useful elementary Latin manual, compiled and successfully used by one of New England's earliest and best literary friends,—Ezekiel Cheever. His Latin Accidence, which was the favorite little book of our youthful days, has probably done more to inspire young minds with the love of the study of the Latin language, than any other work of the kind, since the first settlement of this country. I have had it in constant use for my pupils, whenever it could be obtained, for more than fifty years; and have found it to be the best book for beginners, in the study of Latin, that has ever come within my knowledge; and no work of the kind have I ever known, that contains so much useful matter in so small a compass." Rev. Thaddeus M. Harris says:—"I have examined and used various Latin grammars which possessed much merit for ingenious analysis

Among the Hutchinson Papers* now in the Secretary's office, Boston, is the following petition, endorsed, "Mr. Cheevers Petition for Continuing the place of schoolmaster, 1687 or 1688."

"To his Excellency Sr. Edmund Andros Knight, Governour & Capt. Generall of his Majesties Territories & Dominions in New England,

"The humble peticon of Ezekiel Cheever of Boston Schoolmr. Sheweth, that your poor peticoner hath neer fifty yeares been employed in ye work & office of a publick Grammar-Schoolmr. in severall places in this Countrey, With wt. acceptance & success I submit to the judgment of those, that are able to testify. Now seeing God is pleased mercifully yet to continue my wonted abilities of mind, health of body, vivacity of spirit, delight in my work, which alone I am in any way fit for, & capable of, & whereby I have my outward subsistence. I most humly entreat your Excellency, yt according to your former kindness often manifested, I may by your Excellencies favour, allowance, & encouragement still be continued in my present place. And whereas there is due to me about fifty five pounds for my labours past & ye former way of that part of my maintenance usually raised by a rate, is thought good to be altered. I with all submission beseech your Excellency, that you would be pleased to give order for my due satisfaction, ye want of which would fall heavy upon me in my old age, & my children also who are otherwise poor enough.

And your poor peticonr. shall ever pray &c

Your Excellencies most humble servt.

EZEKIEL CHEEVER."

Rev. Dr. Cotton Mather's funeral sermon on Cheever was first printed with the accompanying title-page.

It was again printed in 1774. The title-page bears this imprint: "BOSTON: | PRINTED BY EZEKIEL RUSSELL, NEXT THE | CORNFIELD, UNION-STREET. | M,DCC,-LXXIV." Verso, a skull and cross-bones, then, "The following SERMON, | on the Death of that faithful Servant of GOD, the late Ve | nerable | Mr. EZEKIEL CHEEVER, | Is now Re-published to perpe | tuate the Memory of that Good | Man, by his | Great-Grand-Son, | EZEKIEL PRICE,* | BOSTON, Jan. 1, 1774."

In 1828 the Rev. Ezekiel Cheever Whitman† published an Abridgment of the Corderius Americanus. In the words of the title-page, it was "somewhat abridged, by omitting the Latin phrases, etc., and by an attempt to render the language throughout more perspicuous and energetic." It was printed in Boston by "Dutton & Wentworth, Nos. 1 & 4 Exchange Street, 1828," and had for a frontispiece a fac-simile of the "Carmen Genethliacon," or Birthday Ode to the Princess Mary, from the Cheever manuscript in the Boston Athenæum, and some poems in Greek and Latin from the same manuscript.

Cotton Mather's sermon is preceded by "An Historical Introduction," which begins as follows:

* Register, xix. 329-338. Proceedings Mass. Hist. Soc. 1863-1864, pp. 185-262.

† Ezekiel Cheever Whitman, son of Rev. Samuel and Grace [Cheever] Whitman, was born in Ashby, Sept. 17, 1783. He had his name changed to Ezekiel Cheever in 1828, died in Williamsburg, Mass., in April, 1862, and was buried in Goshen, Mass., May 1, 1862, where his father had formerly been installed as pastor of the church there.

DUTY to the Merit and Memory of my Departed MASTER, is now in its Operation. The Fifth Commandment well considered will demand such a Duty. When Quirinus made a Marble Monument for his Master, there was this Effect of it, Invisunt Locum Studiosi Juvenes frequenter, ut hoc Exemplo Edocti, quantum Discipuli ipsi praeceptoribus suis debeant, perpetuo meminisse velint. Scholars that saw it, Learnt from the Sight what Acknowledgments were due from Scholars to their Masters. I wish my little feeble Essay for Mine, may in any measure animate the Gratitude of any Scholars to their Well-deserving Tutors.

A due Care about a Funeral for the Dead, among the Jews had that Phrase for it; A Bestowing of Mercy. But the Sermon which I have Employ'd on the Funeral of my Master, must be called; A Doing of Justice. And I am very much misinformed, if this were not the General Voice of all the Auditory.

Perfection in this Life, is to be Despaired of, must not be pretended to. * * * * We must not wonder at it then, if the Best of our Masters be thought attended with their Imperfections. Whatever mine might have, they are buried. And we generally concur in acknowledging, That New-England has never known a better. I am sure, I have as much Reason to appear for him, as ever Crito for his Master Socrates.

The Short History of his Long Usefulness, is to be comprized in the Ensuing Articles:

He was Born in London, many years before the Birth of New-England. It was Jan. 25. 1614.

He arrived into this Country, in June 1637. with the rest of those Good men, who sought a peaceable Secession in an American Wilderness, for the pure Evangelical, and Instituted Worship of our Great Redeemer; to which he kept a strict Adherence all his Days. He then Sojourned first a little while, part of a Year, at Boston; so that at Boston, he both Commenced and Concluded his American Race. His Holy Life, was a Married Life.

He began the Laborious Work of a School-Master, at New-haven; where he continued for Twelve Years.

From New-haven, he removed unto Ipswich, in December, 1650. where he Laboured Eleven Years.

From Ipswich, heremoved to Charlstown, in November, 1661. where he Laboured Nine Years.

From Charlstown, he came over to Boston, Jan. 6, 1670. where his Labours were continued for Eight & Thirty Years.

He Died, on Saturday morning, Aug. 21. 1708. In the Ninety Fourth Year of his Age; After he had been a Skilful, Painful, Faithful Schoolmaster, for Seventy Years; And had the Singular favour of Heaven, that tho' he had Usefully spent his Life among Children, yet he was not become Twice a Child; but held his Abilities, with his Usefulness, in an unusual Degree to the very last.

In the sermon he says:

"SCHOOL-MASTERS that have Used the Office well, purchase to themselves, a Good Esteem to Out-live their Death, as well as Merit for themselves a good Support while they Live. 'Tis a justice to them, that they should be had in everlasting Remembrance; and a Place and a Name among those Just men does particularly belong to that Ancient and Honourable Man; a Master in our Israel; who was with us, the last Time of my Standing here; but is lately Translated unto the College of Blessed Spirits, in the Mansions, where the FIRST RESURRECtion is Waited and Longed for. Allow me the Expression; For I Learn't it of my Hebrew Masters, among whom, 'tis a phrase for the Death of Learned and Worthy men, Requisiti sunt in Academicam Caelestem."

"Verrius the Master to the Nephews of Augustus, had a Statue Erected for him; And Antoninus obtained from the Senate, a Statue for his Master Fronto. I am sorry that Mine has none. And Cato counted it more glorious than any Statue, to have it asked, Why has he None? But in the grateful Memories of his Scholars, there have been and will be Hundreds Erected for him."

"Under him we Learnt an Oration, made by Tully, in praise of his own Master; namely that, Pro Archia Poeta. A Pagan shall not out-do us, in our Gratitude unto our Master. There was a famous Christian in the Primitive Times, who wrote a whole Book, in praise of his Master Hierotheus; Entitling it, Περὶ τοῦ μακαρίου Ἰεροθεοῦ Concerning the Blessed Hierotheus. And if I now say a few things, Concerning the Blessed CHEEVER, no man who thinks well of Gratitude, or likes well to see the Fifth Commandment observed, will censure it."

"In the Imperial Law, we read, that Good Grammarians, having taught with diligence Twenty Years, were to have Special Honour conferr'd upon them. I Challenge for MY MASTER, more than a Treble portion of that Special Honour. But, Oh, Let it all pass thro' him, up to the Glorious LORD, who made him to be what he was!"

"His Eminent Abilities for the Work, which rendred him so long Useful in his Generation, were universally acknowledged. The next Edition of Tranquillus de Claris Grammaticis, may well enough bring him into the Catalogue, and acknowledge him a Master. He was not a Meer Grammarian; yet he was a Pure One. And let no Envy Misconstrue it, if I say, It was noted, that when Scholars came to be Admitted into the Colledge, they who came from the Cheeverian Education, were generally the most unexceptionable. What Exception shall be made, Let it fall upon him, that is now speaking of it."

"He flourished so long in this Great Work, of bringing our Sons to be Men, that it gave him an opportunity to send forth many Bezaleels and Aholiabs for the Service of the Tabernacle; and Men fitted for all Good Employments. He that was my Master, Seven and Thirty Years ago, was a Master to many of my Betters, no less than Seventy Years ago; so long ago, that I must even mention my Fathers Tutor for one of them."

"And as it is written for the Lasting Renown of the Corderius, whose Colloquies he taught us; That the Great CALVIN had been a Scholar to him; So this our AMERICAN Corderius had many Scholars that were a Crown unto him; yea, many that will be his Crown, in the Presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his Coming; yea, many that were got into the Heavenly World before him. And the mention of the Heavenly World, leads me to that which I would principally take notice of. His PIETY, I say, His PIETY; and his care to infuse Documents of Piety into the Scholars under his Charge, that he might carry them with him to the Heavenly World. When Aristotle set up a Monument for his Master Plato, he inscribed upon it, this Testimony, HE WAS ONE WHOM ALL GOOD MEN OUGHT TO IMITATE, AS WELL AS TO CELEBRATE. MY MASTER went thro' his Hard Work with so much Delight in it, as a Work for GOD and CHRIST, and His People: He so constantly Pray'd with us every Day, and Catechis'd us every Week, and let fall such Holy Counsels upon us; He took so many Occasions, to make Speeches unto us, that should make us Afraid of Sin, and of incurring the fearful Judgments of God by Sin; That I do propose him for Imitation."

The sermon concludes as follows: "Ye have heard, what MY MASTER was, In the School. Sir Walter Rawleigh commends it as a piece of wisdom, to use great moderation when we are treating men with Commendation. I will not forget the Rule, in carrying on my Commendation of my Master. But I will say very much in a Little. Out of the School, he was One, Antiqua Fide, priscis moribus; A Christian of the Old Fashion: AN OLD NEW ENGLISH CHRISTIAN: And I may tell you, That was as Venerable a Sight, as the World, since the Days of Primitive Christianity, has ever look'd up on."

"He was well Studied in the *Body of Divinity: An Able Defender of the Faith and Order of the Gospel; Notably Conversant and Acquainted with the Scriptural Prophecies; And, by Consequence, A Sober Chilias*t."

"He Lived as a Master, the Term, which has been for above three thousand years, assign'd for the Life of a Man; he continued unto the Ninety Fourth year of his Age, an unusual instance of Liveliness. His Intellectual Force, as little abated as his Natural. He exemplified the Fulfillment of that word, As thy Days, so shall thy Strength be; in the Gloss which the Jerusalem Targum has put upon it; As thou wast in the Dayes of thy Youth, such thou shalt be in thy Old Age. The Reward of his Fruitfulness! For, Fructus Liberat Arborem! The product of Temperance; Rather than what my Lord Verulam assigns, as a Reason for Vivacious Scholars."

"DEATH must now do its part. He Dy'd, Longing for Death. Our old SIMEON waited for it, that he might get nearer to the Consolation of Israel. He Dyed Leaning like Old Jacob, upon a Staff; the Sacrifice and the Righteousness of a Glorious CHRIST, he let us know, was the Golden Staff, which he Lean'd upon. He Dyed mourning for the Quick Apostasie, which he saw breaking in upon us; very easie about his own Eternal Happiness, but full of Distress for a poor People here under the Displeasure of Heaven, for Former Iniquities, he thought, as well as Later Ones. To say no more: He Dyed, A CANDIDATE FOR THE FIRST RESURRECTION. And Verily, our Land is Weakened, when those Fly away, at whose Flight we may cry out, My Father, My Father, the Chariots of New England and the Horsemen thereof."

GRATITUDINIS ERGO.

AN ESSAY on the Memory of my Venerable MASTER;

Ezekiel Cheever.

Augusto perstringere Carmine Laudes.

Quas nulla Eloquij vis Celebrare queat.

You that are Men, & Thoughts of Manhood know,
Be Just now to the Man that made you so.

Martyr'd by Scholars the stabb'd Cassian dies,
And falls to curs'd Lads a Sacrifice.

Not so my CHEEVER; Not by Scholars slain,
But Prais'd and Lov'd, and wish'd to Life again.

A mighty Tribe of Well-instructed Youth
Tell what they owe to him, and Tell with Truth,

All the Eight parts of Speech he taught to them
 They now Employ to Trumpet his Esteem.
 They fill Fames Trumpet, and they spread a Fame
 To last till the Last Trumpet drown the same.
Magister pleas'd them well, because 'twas he ;
 They saw that Bonus did with it agree.
 While they said Amo, they the Hint improve
Him for to make the Object of their Love.
 No Concord so Inviolable they knew
 As to pay Honours to their Master due.
 With Interjections they break off at last,
 But, Ah, is all they use, Wo, and Alas !
 We Learnt Prosodia, but with that Design
 Our Masters Name should in our Verses shine.
 Our Weeping Ovid but instructed us
 To write upon his Death, De Tristibus.
Tully we read, but still with this Intent,
 That in his praise we might be Eloquent.
 Our Stately Virgil made us but Contrive
 As our Anchises to keep him Alive.
 When Phoenix to Achilles was assign'd
 A Master, then we thought not Homer blind :
 A Phoenix, which Oh ! might his Ashes shew !
 So rare a Thing we thought our Master too.
 And if we made a Theme, 'twas with Regret
 We might not on his Worth show all our Wit.

Go on, ye Grateful Scholars to proclaim
 To late Posterity your Masters Name.
 Let it as many Languages declare
 As on Loretto-Table do appear.

Too much to be by any one exprest :
I'll tell my share, and you shall tell the rest.
Ink is too vile a Liquor ; Liquid Gold
 Should fill the Pen, by which such things are told.
 The Book should Amyanthus-Paper be
 All writ with Gold, from all corruption free.

A Learned Master of the Languages
 Which to Rich Stores of Learning are the Keyes :
 He taught us first Good Sense to understand
 And put the Golden Keyes into our Hand,
 We but for him had been for Learning Dumb,
 And had a sort of Turkish Mutes become.
 Were Grammar quite Extinct, yet at his Brain
 The Candle might have well been lit again.
 If Rhet'rick had been stript of all her Pride
 She from his Wardrobe might have been Supply'd.
 Do but Name CHEEVER, and the Echo straight
 Upon that Name, Good Latin, will Repeat.

A Christian Terence, Master of the File
 That arms the Curious to Reform their Style.
 Now Rome and Athens from their Ashes rise ;
 See their Platonick Year with vast surprize:
 And in our School a Miracle is wrought ;
 For the Dead Languages to Life are brought.

His Work he Lov'd: Oh ! had we done the same !
 Our Play-dayes still to him ungrateful came.
 And yet so well our Work adjusted Lay,
 We came to Work, as if we came to Play.

Our Lads had been, but for his wondrous Cares,
Boyes of my Lady Mores unquiet Pray'rs.
 Sure were it not for such informing Schools,
 Our Lat'ran too would soon be fill'd with Owles.
 Tis CORLET's pains, & CHEEVER's, we must own,
 That thou, New-England, art not Scythia grown.
 The Isles of Silly had o're-run this Day
 The Continent of our America.

Grammar he taught, which 'twas his work to do:
 But he would Hagar have her place to know.

The Bible is the Sacred Grammar, where
 The Rules of speaking well, contained are.
 He taught us Lilly, and he Gospel taught;
 And us poor Children to our Saviour brought.
Master of Sentences, he gave us more
 That we in our Sententie had before.
 We Learn't Good Things in Tullies Offices ;
 But we from him Learn't Better things than these.
 With Cato's he to us the Higher gave.
 Lessons of JESUS, that our Souls do save.
 We Constru'd Ovid's Metamorphosis,
 But on ourselves charg'd, not a Change to miss.
 Young Austin wept, when he saw Dido dead,
 Tho' not a Tear for a Lost Soul he had:
 Our Master would not let us be so vain,
 But us from Virgil did to David train,
Textors Epistles would not Cloathe our Souls;
Pauls too we heard; we went to School at Pauls.

Syrs, Do you not Remember well the Times,
 When us he warn'd against our Youthful Crimes :
 What Honey dropt from our old Nestors mouth
 When with his Counsels he Reform'd our Youth :
 How much he did to make us Wise and Good ;
 And with what Prayers, his work he did conclude.
 Concern'd that when from him we Learning had,
 It might not Armed Wickedness be made !
 The Sun shall first the Zodiac forsake,
 And Stones unto the Stars their Flight shall make;

First shall the Summer bring large drifts of Snow,
 And beauteous Cherries in December grow;
 E're of those Charges we Forgetful are
 Which we, O Man of God, from thee did hear.

Such Tutors to the Little Ones would be.
 Such that in Flesh we should their Angels see;
Ezekiel should not be the Name of such;
 We'd Agathangelus not think too much.

Who Serv'd the School, the Church did not forget;
 But Thought, and Pray'd, and often wept for it.
Mighty in Prayer : How did he wield thee, Pray'r!
 Thou Reverst Thunder: CHRIST's-Sides-piercing Spear?
 Soaring we saw the Bird of Paradise;
 So Wing'd by Thee, for Flights beyond the Skies.
 How oft we saw him tread the Milky Way,
 Which to the Glorious Throne of Mercy lay!

Come from the Mount, he shone with ancient Grace,
 Awful the Splendor of his Aged Face.
Cloath'd in the Good Old Way, his Garb did wage
 A War with the Vain Fashions of the Age.
Fearful of nothing more than hateful Sin;
 'Twas that from which he laboured all to win,
Zealous; And in Truths Cause ne'r known to trim;
 No Neuter Gender there allow'd by him.
Stars but a Thousand did the Ancients know;
 On later Globes they Nineteen hundred grow:
 Now such a CHEEVER added to the Sphere;
 Makes an Addition to the Lustre there.

Mean time America a Wonder saw;
 A Youth in Age, forbid by Natures Law.

You that in t'other Hemisphere do dwell,
 Do of Old Age your dismal Stories tell.
 You tell of Snowy Heads and Rheumy Eyes
 And things that make a man himself despise.
 You say, a frozen Liquor chills the Veins,
 And scarce the Shadow of a Man remains.
Winter of Life, that Sapless Age you call,
 And of all Maladies the Hospital :
 The Second Nonage of the Soul; the Brain
 Cover'd with Cloud; the Body all in pain.
 To weak Old Age, you say, there must belong
 And Trembling Palsey both of Limb and Tongue;
Dayes all Decrepit; and a Bending Back,
 Propt by a Staff, in Hands that ever shake.

Nay, Syrs, our CHEEVER shall confute you all,
 On whom there did none of these Mischiefs fall.
 He Liv'd and to vast Age no Illness knew;
 Till Times Scythe waiting for him Rusty grew.

He Liv'd and Wrought ; His Labours were Immense ;
 But ne'r Declin'd to Præter-perfect Tense.
 A Blooming Youth in him at Ninety Four
 We saw ; But, Oh ! when such a sight before !
 At Wondrous Age he did his Youth resume,
 As when the Eagle mew's his Aged plume.
 With Faculties of Reason still so bright,
 And at Good Services so Exquisite ;
 Sure our sound Chiliast, we wondring thought,
 To the First Resurrection is not brought !
 No, He for That was waiting at the Gate
 In the Pure Things that fit a Candidate.
 He in Good Actions did his Life Employ,
 And to make others Good, he made his Joy.
 Thus well-appris'd now of the Life to Come,
 To Live here was to him a Martyrdom.
 Our brave Macrobius Long'd to see the Day
 Which others dread, of being Call'd away.
 So, Ripe with Age, he does invite the Hook,
 Which watchful does for its large Harvest look ;
Death gently cut the Stalk, and kindly laid
 Him, where our God His Granary has made.

Who at New-Haven first began to Teach,
 Dying Unshipwreck'd, does White-Haven reach.
 At that Fair Haven they all Storms forget ;
 He there his DAVENPORT with Love does meet.
 The Luminous Robe, the Loss whereof with Shame
 Our Parents wept, when Naked they became ;
 Those Lovely Spirits wear it, and therein
 Serve God with Priestly Glory, free from Sin.

But in his Paradisian Rest above,
 To Us does the Blest Shade retain his Love.
 With Rip'ned Thoughts Above concern'd for Us,
 We can't but hear him dart his Wishes, thus.
 ' TUTORS, Be Strict ; But yet be Gentle too :
 ' Don't by fierce Cruelties fair Hopes undo.
 ' Dream not, that they who are to Learning slow,
 ' Will mend by Arguments in Ferio.
 ' Who keeps the Golden Fleece, Oh, let him not ' A Dragon be, tho' he Three Tongues have got.
 ' Why can you not to Learning find the way,
 ' But thro' the Province of Severia ?
 ' Twas Moderatus, who taught Origen ;
 ' A Youth which prov'd one of the Best of men.
 ' The Lads with Honour first, and Reason Rule ;
 ' Blowes are but for the Refractory Fool.
 ' But, Oh ! First Teach them their Great God to fear ;
 ' That you like me, with Joy may meet them here.'

H'has said !—
 Adieu, a little while, Dear Saint, Adieu;
 Your Scholar won't be Long, Sir, after you.
 In the mean time, with Gratitude I must Engrave an EPITAPH upon your Dust.
 'Tis true, Excessive Merits rarely safe:
 Such an Excess forfeits an Epitaph.
 But if Base men the Rules of Justice break,
 The Stones (at least upon the Tombs) will speak.

Et Tumulum facite, et Tumulo superaddite carmen. (Virg. in Daphn.)

THE following appeared in the BOSTON WEEKLY NEWS LETTER, from Thursday, Jan. 5th, to Thursday, Jan. 12th, 1738: "Boston. Last Tuesday in the afternoon died here the Reverend and Learned Mr. Nathaniel Williams, a Gentleman who has been a faithful and upright Servant in his generation; being for many Years Master of the South Grammar School in this Town which difficult and important Business he discharged with great Industry and Fidelity; and as he was by the Blessing of GOD a very skilful and successful Physician, so he was very much imployed and approved among us. As his Life has been very extensively serviceable, so his Death is esteemed as a publick loss."

The following is the extract from the funeral sermon of the Rev. Thomas Prince, referred to in the text:—

Nathaniel Williams was born in Boston August 25th 1675 of Pious parents, his father a deacon of this church and his mother a sister of the late Honourable Daniel Oliver Esq. he received their gracious Spirit; and improved under their religious influence and the happy Ministry and Life of the Reverend Mr. Willard, for whom he had the highest Veneration, and he aspired to be like them.

In his early days he gave himself to his Creator: at fourteen years of Age, July 1689, he entered the School of the Prophets: and as he advanced in Knowledge he grew in Wisdom and in Favour with God and Man.

Being well accomplished for the work of the ministry, He was ordained an Evangelist in the College Hall, for one of the West India islands (in 1698). But the climate not agreeing with his constitution, He soon returned to this his native City, where He was first employed by several Gentlemen to instruct their sons in learning; and soon after introduced into the government of the then only Publick and Free Grammar School of this Great Town, the Principal School of the British Colonies, if not of all America. Here he displayed his singular talent for this laborious and important service, being very diligent and faithful: applying himself to bring on the Children both in Virtue, Learning and good manners; Praying with them every Morning and Evening, instructing them in religious Principles, especially on Saturdays, and affectionately recommending the Practice to them.

By an agreeable mixture of Majesty and sweetness, both in his Voice and Countenance, with a mild and steady conduct, He happily ruled them; and was generally both revered and beloved among them. Here he spent the strength and vigour of his Life, was a great and publick Blessing, and then he continued for about Thirty Years; till his bodily infirmities increasing, He to the sorrow of many laid it down in 1734.

THE following is a portion of the poem written by Mr. Nathaniel Gardner, and dated 1754, on the course of studies in the Latin School, referred to on page 40:—

Undecima, tandem, schola jam demittitur hora,
Lætentur magis an pueri, dic, anne magister ?

Emicat, en pubes! læta os, vaga lumina læta.
 Nec mora longa—brevis requies spatiumque labori;
 Prima hora pransos studiis campana remittit.
 Ecce Maro primus! crines lauroque decorus
 Insignisque: tuba, bella, horrida bella! sonanti!
 "Cedite, Romani scriptores! cedite Graii!"
 Quis non attonitus videt heroasque deosque?
 Quem non pertentat flamma infelicis Elisæ!
 Jurgia pastorum, teneros vel ludat amores,
 Vel dicat, "quæ cura boum, qui cultus habendo Sit pecori: atque apibus quanta experientia parcis."
 Quæcumque ille canit, canit omnia consule digna.
 Salve, magne Maro! tua dum, divina poeta!
 Scripta lego, ardescoque legens, scribensque tremisco.
 O, flammæ si parva tuæ scintilla, tuæque
 Particula, O Maro! nunc mihi pectora tangeret auræ,
 Altius insurgens animo, majora sonarem,
 Dicerem et insigni Beverigi digna camœna.

THE following entries, concerning Mr. Lovell's imprisonment, are taken from the Diaries of Peter Leach, and Edes, two of his fellow prisoners, which have been kindly loaned us for the purpose by Henry H. Edes, Esq., of Boston, who is their present owner.

[From Leach's Diary.]

June 29. They then conducted me from my house to the stone gaol, and after being lodged there for 20 minutes, the said Cone and Loring brought in Master James Lovell, after searching his papers, letters, &c., as they had done mine.

Aug. 15. Poor Mr. Lovell began to droop; he is very weakly. This night I watched with Mr. Lovell.

Aug. 16. Mr. Lovell continues ill.

Aug. 18. Mr. Lovell received an answer from General Howe, to a letter he wrote him.

Aug. 19. Mr. Lovell continues poorly.

Aug. 20. Mr. Lovell very ill, which gives us great uneasiness.

Aug. 21. Mr. Lovell continues ill; no compassion towards him any more than a dog. We are all very much troubled for him, but cannot help him any other-wise than by brotherly kindness and tenderness.

[From Edes's Diary.]

June 29. Masters Leach and Lovell were brought to prison and put into the same room with me and my companion.

July 18. I was escorted by a strong guard of soldiers from the prison to Concert Hall, with my room companions, which consisted of four, viz., James Lovell, John Leach, John Hunt and William Starr. . . .

July 19. Escorted from prison again, with the additional company of three sailors, thieves and housebreakers, surrounded by soldiers. The three sailors examined, Mr. Hunt, Starr and myself were asked who prosecuted us, etc., and one Captain Symmes of the regulars was summoned by Major Moncrief, as an evidence against Masters Lovell and Leach. Till this time we did not know our crimes, or on what account we were committed, but now we found that Master Lovell was charged with being "a spy and giving intelligence to the rebels." Leach, for being "a spy and suspected of taking plans." Mr. Hunt, for "speaking treason." Mr. Starr and myself "for concealing firearms." When Captain Symmes appeared, he was so ignorant of Masters Lovell and Leach that he took one for the other, that instead of being a just evidence he appeared ashamed and confounded, and went off. At two o'clock we were sent back to our stone edifice under a strong guard.

Aug. 22. A hot day and night. Close confined. Dr. Elliot called at the gate and spoke to Master Lovell. He says the provost ordered him not to come here any more. We cannot go to see a minister, and are denied his coming to see us.

Aug. 31. Master Lovell had half a pound of fresh beef, being sick.

Oct. 1-2. Major Kemble came from the general with promise of relief, on finding two men, inhabitants, to pass their words that we should not leave the town. There was no bonds asked or given. This was offered to Mr. Gill, Mr. Starr, Master Leach and myself. Nothing was said to Master Lovell, nor any offer made him.

ANOTHER pupil of Mr. Biglow, Mr. Robert Treat Paine, who entered the School about October, 1813, when he was not far from eight years old, and found Mr. Wainwright usher under Biglow, gave to the Rev. E. E. Hale of our Committee, under date of April 22nd, 1847, some account of his experience there. He said: He was examined for admission after summer vacation of 1813, perhaps a few weeks later. At that time the School was kept in Cole Lane, now Portland Street, in an old barn near Dr. Greenwood's house, because the new building was in progress on the School Street site. This lasted only two or three months. The new School-house must have been finished in November—before Biglow left.

The disorder through the few months that Biglow remained was atrocious. He remembers a boy firing a pistol under the form in the upper room in the new School-house, near the middle window on the side next Cook's Court. He also speaks of seeing through that window, the rocking of Old South Spire in the October gale, 1815.

Biglow used to pretend to watch a recitation with one eye and the School with the other, keeping his hand edgewise up his face to separate the two.

Before going to the Latin School Mr. Paine went to Mr. J. Snelling to learn to write. This was in Court Square. The scene there was a perfect farce of teaching. There was no sort of instruction. J. S. told the whole School, when School began to write four lines. If, in looking round, he found any one had written his lines before the time (immense) was over, he "thrashed him" for writing too fast. If he had written none he whipped for laziness. But this was only with beginners—for more experienced youngsters wrote two lines and then began their fun—which was unlimited and almost unrestricted, and wrote the next two at the close of the exercise. When the copies were done they all passed in procession with them through a narrow gangway—quite equivalent to running the gauntlet, as J. S. stood ready for a blow with a word. Paine was there six or eight weeks to write a little.

IN 1784 and for a long time after there were no schools, public or private, for girls in Boston.

“The only schools in the city to which girls were admitted, were kept by the teachers of public schools, between the forenoon and afternoon sessions,—these teachers were uneducated men, selected for their skill in penmanship and the elements of arithmetic. The schools were called writing schools.”—Wm. B. Fowle, in Am. Jour. of Educ., Vol. 5, p. 327.

“Boys had been admitted into the Latin School at the early age of seven years, on the mistaken idea that the very young are best qualified to learn a dead language, as they undoubtedly are to learn a spoken one. The age was increased to ten years by the new system, but, as before, no provision was made in the Latin School for their instruction in English, in penmanship, or in any of the common branches. To remedy this serious defect, the Latin scholars were allowed to attend the writing schools two hours, forenoon or afternoon, and about thirty availed themselves of the privilege, although they were obliged to neglect one school to attend the other, and unpunctuality and disorder in all the schools were the natural consequence.”

“The prohibition to teach private schools does not appear to have been of long continuance; for, although the records do not show that the order was repealed, these intermediate private schools were common early in the present century, and permission to the Latin scholars to attend the writing schools was withdrawn. The teacher of the Latin School, in connection with a writing master, kept a private English school in the Latin school-room, while the writer was a pupil there, in 1808, and the writer himself attended a private school kept by a reading master in another part of the town. Of course, it was a passport to favor in every public school to attend the master’s private school also, and those who only went to the public school, were considered a somewhat inferior caste.”—Ibid., p. 330.

THE following Poem was read at the dinner of the Boston Latin School Association in 1879, by Mr. Robert Grant.

I rise, Mr. President, horribly shy,
 With a blush on my cheek and a timorous eye,
 At the notion of rhyming to men who were schooled
 By Lovell’s rattan and the ferule of Gould:

Whose memories date from a time when the ark
Was considered a highly respectable bark,
And the hair of whose heads was beginning to thin in Susceptible spots, when I wore baby linen:

Who can tell of school antics that beat mine all hollow,
And yarns that we try with composure to swallow;
Who were Latin School boys, let me see, how long since?
Not exactly B. C. We will say before Prince.*

But spite of your wisdom, and spite of my age,
One boast I can share with the hoariest sage
Who sits at this table and pegs at the bill;
I'm a Latin School boy—I have been through the mill.

A child of eleven, both little and scared,
I was put into "Andrews and Stoddard's" and "Baird,"
Supplied with a lexicon large as my head,
And told to make friends with the tongues that are dead.

It seems to my fancy but yesterday noon
Since I, on a "pony," crossed Caesar's pontoon;
Since I learned how the heirs of a realm had the luck
To soften the heart of a wolf and get suck.

Dear dryad, sweet naiad, fair nymph of the grove,
Whom I courted in Ovid's loose leaves upon love,
I fain on the sly would encircle thy waist,
But thy garb is too scant for the popular taste.

O friends of my boyhood! O pious Aeneas,
O Dido, thou lovely but credulous, she ass!
I have not forgot you; I have you at home,
And to-morrow I'll scatter the dust from your tome.

O years of my childhood! O days that, alack!
Forever are gone, and no prayer can bring back!
Your memories cling to this noddle of mine
As cobwebs encircle a flagon of wine.

Still churns in this brain, like the roar of the sea,
That moth-eaten "Burial March of Dundee,"
The fate of "Montrose," the "Lament of Glencoe,"
And the rant of the raven who played it on Poe.

And he, our dear Master, who laid down the "lex,"
And never looked through, but looked over his "specs,"
Oh! who can forget him, our teacher and friend!
(Especially those with a sensitive end).

* The Hon. Frederick O. Prince, a Latin School boy, of our Class of 1827, was the Mayor of the City of Boston.

Forever will gladden my fancy, I ween,
His dear old umbrella so stagnantly green,
His ancient surtout, and the quills that would squeak
When marking the dunces deficient in Greek.

He has gone, our old Master, to rest in the skies,
And bad boys can no more "pull wool over his eyes."
What sport to have heard him acknowledge the corn
When Gabriel whispered, "Well, Gardner, which horn?"

O brothers, O boys, and in spite of their curls
And their kisses, I'm glad that I need not add, girls,
O resolute chips that have sprung from the block
Of our glorious patented Latin School stock,

I'll give you a toast, and you'll drink it, I know,
Both you whose thin tresses are white as the snow,
And you whose young hearts, it is fair to assume,
Like our stocks and our statesmen, are all on the "boom."

It is not that long-standing bore, the "Old South,"
And it ain't "Standing Bear," who is down in the mouth;
Nor that stately old chap with the almond-shaped eye,
The Harvard Celestial who hails from Shanghai.

'Tis, Our great public schools—may their influence spread Until statesmen use grammar, and dunces are dead,
Until no one dares say, in this land of the free,
"He done," for "he did," or "it's her," for "it's she."

"THE System of Public Education, adopted by the Town of Boston, 15th October, 1789," referred to on page 59 of the text, is herewith given in full.

It has a special value, as it is made from the original copy discovered among Mr. Hunt's private papers, which bears his autograph, and is in all probability unique. This pamphlet was a small quarto, 8½ by 6½ inches, printed on a sheet of laid paper, of English manufacture, as shown by the water mark, G. R. crowned, and a rampant lion enclosed in a circular paling.

Our pages are not of proper proportions to admit of giving it in facsimile, and the type we have been forced to employ is somewhat smaller in size, but the old fashioned letter of the original has been imitated, the capitals, punctuation, etc., have been closely followed, and the end of each page is indicated by a figure in brackets.

Public Education,

Adopted by the Town of BOSTON, 15th Octob. 1789.

I. THAT there be one School in which the rudiments of the Latin and Greek languages shall be taught, and scholars fully qualified for the Universities. That all candidates for admission into this School shall be at least ten years of age, having been previously well instructed in English Grammar; that they shall continue in it not longer than four years, and that they have liberty to attend the public writing Schools at such hours as the visiting Committee shall direct.

II. That there be one writing School at the South part of the town; one at the Centre, and one at the North part; that, in these Schools, the children of both sexes be taught writing, and also arithmetic in the various branches usually taught in the Town-Schools, including Vulgar and Decimal Fractions.

III. That there be one reading School at the South part of the Town, one at the Centre, and one at the North part; that, [1] in these Schools, the children of both sexes be taught to spell, accent, and read both prose and verse, and also be instructed in English Grammar and Composition.

IV. That the children of both sexes be admitted into the reading and writing Schools at the age of seven years, having previously received the instruction usual at Women's Schools; that they be allowed to continue in the reading and writing Schools till the age of fourteen, the boys attending the year round, the girls from the 20th of April to the 20th of October following; that they attend these Schools alternately, at such times, and subject to such changes, as the Visiting Committee in consultation with the Masters shall approve.

V. That a Committee be annually chosen by ballot, to consist of twelve, in addition to the Selectmen, whose business it shall be to visit the Schools once in every quarter, and as much oftener as they shall judge proper, with three of their number at least, to consult together in order to devise the best methods for the instruction and government of the Schools; and to communicate the result of their deliberations to the Masters; to determine at what hours the Schools shall begin, and to appoint play-days; in their visitations to enquire into the particular regulations of the Schools, both in regard to instruction and discipline, and give such advice to the Masters as they shall think proper; to examine the Scholars in the particular branches which they are taught; and, by all proper methods, to excite in them a laudable ambition to excel in a virtuous, amiable deportment, and in every branch of useful knowledge. [2]

VOTES of the Committee appointed to carry into Execution the System of public Education adopted by the Town of Boston, 15th October 1789.

AT a Meeting of the said Committee, held Decemb. 1, 1789.

That the Children begin to learn Arithmetic at 11 Years of Age.

That at 12 Years of Age, the Children be taught to make Pens.

IV. That the Reading Schools be divided into four Claffes—That from the third Monday in October to the third Monday in April, for one Month, viz. from the first Monday in the Month, the first and second Claffes attend the Reading, and the third and fourth, the Writing Schools in the Morning.—The first and second, attend the Writing Schools, the third and fourth the Reading Schools in the Afternoon.—The Month following, the order be reversed, and so alternately during the above time.—And that from the third Monday in April to the third Monday in October, for one Month, viz. From the first Monday in the Month, all the Boys attend the Reading Schools, and all the Girls the Writing Schools in the Morning; that all the Boys attend the Writing Schools, and all the Girls the Reading Schools in the Afternoon; the Month following the order to be reversed, and thus alternately during those six Months.—That it be understood that from the third Monday in April to the first Monday in June, be considered as the first Month of the Summer Term. That from the third Monday in October to the first Monday in December, be considered as the first Month of the Winter Term. [5]

V. That the following hours be punctually observed in all the Schools, viz. From the third Monday in April to the third Monday in October, the Schools begin at half past 7 o'Clock, A. M. and continue 'till eleven, and begin at half past 1 o'Clock, P. M. and continue 'till five.—That from the third Monday in October to the third Monday in April, the Schools begin at half past 8 o'Clock, A. M. and continue 'till eleven, and begin at half past 1 o'Clock, P. M. and continue 'till half past four.

That in future the Schools keep 'till 11 o'Clock in the Forenoon on Thursday, as well as other Days.

The following substitute for this rule is given in manuscript on the margin :

"Aug't 24th, 1802. From the 3d Monday in Ap. to ye 3d Monday in Oct. the Schools will begin at 8 o'Clock, A. M. and continue ['till] eleven. In the Afternoon they will begin at 2 o'Clock and continue 'till 5. From ye 3d Monday in Oct. to the 3d Monday in April, the Schools will begin at 9 o'Clock, A. M. and continue 'till 12 o'Clock. In the Afternoon they will begin at 2 o'Clock and continue untill 5, excepting the Months of November, December, and January, when the Schools shall be clofed at $\frac{1}{2}$ past four."

VI. That the Masters be excused from keeping School on the following Days and Times, viz.

The Afternoon of every Thursday and Saturday throughout the year.

The Afternoon preceding Fafts and Thanksgivings.

Four half days of Artillery Training, in the Afternoon.

First Monday in April.

Six days in Election Week..

First Monday in June.

Fourth day of July, or Anniverfary of Independence.

The four laft days in Commencement Week.

Christmas Day, and

On the general Training Days.

December 7, 1789.

Voted, That the Committee be divided into seven equal parts, as Sub-Committees for the purpose of inspecting the respective Schools, and examining the scholars; so that one Committee be assigned to each School. And the Committee was divided accordingly. [6]

Voted, That the inspecting Committees be enjoined to visit their respective Schools at least once every month, and as much oftener as they may think proper.

Voted, That the inspecting Committees make the laws of the State respecting Schools, the votes of the Town, and of this Committee, the rule of their conduct in visiting the Schools.

Voted, That the first Monday in January 1790 be the time assigned for putting into operation the new System of Education, as adopted by the Town, and regulated by this Committee.

December 14, 1789.

Voted, That it be the indispensable duty of the several School-Masters, daily to commence the duties of their office by prayer and reading a portion of the sacred Scriptures, at the hour assigned for opening the School in the morning; and clofe the fame in the evening with prayer.

December 21, 1789.

Voted, That the Masters never expel any boy from School, but with the consent, and in the presence of the inspecting Committee.

Voted, That the Instructor of the Latin School be entitled The Latin Grammar Master; the Instructors of the Reading Schools be entitled English Grammar Masters; the Instructors of the Writing Schools be entitled Writing Masters.

The following vote is appended in manuscript:

December 28, 1789.

Voted, That the several Schoolmasters instruct the children under their care, or cause them to be instructed, in the Assembly's Catechism, every Saturday, unless the Parents request that they may be taught any particular catechism of the religious Society to which they belong; and the Masters are directed to teach such Children accordingly.

¶ Order,

OF THE

1876.

The second page gives the location of the Classes in the rooms of the Bedford Street building, and in the old Mason Street and South Street School-houses, which were used as an annex, owing to the largely increased number of scholars.

The letter G designates Gymnastics, and is placed before or after the study, according as this exercise occurs in the first or last half of the hour.

WHEN the new building in Warren Avenue was occupied by the School, it was proposed that the Latin School Association should celebrate the event with appropriate ceremonies. A distinguished pupil of the School was invited to deliver an address before the Association, and ex-Master Dixwell to write a Latin Ode for the occasion. The expected orator proving unable to comply with the request of the Committee, the idea of the celebration was reluctantly abandoned. Mr. Dixwell, however, wrote the Ode, which was read at the next meeting of the Latin School Association, and privately circulated. The Committee has thought that Mr. Dixwell's kindness deserves grateful mention, and that the Ode should be preserved by being printed here.

THE following extract is taken from the Records of the Boston School Committee:—

OCT. 14th, 1822. A letter from a gentleman was read offering $50 as a premium for the best scholar in the year 1823 in the Latin School and also in the English Classical School.

To the Hon. John Phillips, Mayor, &c.

Sir: I propose with the concurrence of your honour and the Board of Aldermen at the annual examination of the Public Schools in Boston which take place in 1823, to offer a gold medal of the value of $50, with an appropriate devise and inscription to be executed under the direction of the Head Master of the Centre

Latin School to the pupil of the said School who shall at that time be adjudged by the School Committee and the principal Instructor to be the best scholar in the School and whose conduct and deportment during the year preceding shall have been such as to have evinced diligence in his studies, respect to his instructors and urbanity towards his associates. The said medal to be delivered to the successful candidate at Faneuil Hall by the Mayor immediately before sitting down to dinner on the day of the examination, and the occurrence with the name of the juvenile Emeritus to be entered on the Records of the City.

I propose to offer at the same time and under the like circumstances a similar donation of equal value to the first and most approved scholar from the English Classical School in Derne St., the medal in this instance to be executed under the direction of the principal master of that School.

Should these propositions meet the acceptance of yourself and the Board of Aldermen I will make the needful deposit to ensure their being carried into effect, and under this event, in order that the desired result of exciting an emulation among the youth of our city to excel alike in application to their studies and in the correctness of their deportment may be produced in a greater degree, I beg leave further to suggest the expediency of a printed label in large type struck off and posted in some conspicuous place in the School rooms, briefly stating the prize which will be awarded and the conditions attached to its attainment.

Another stipulation alone remains to be mentioned, which is, if the proposition be accepted, that the name of the donor shall not be made public.

With great respect I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

In a letter transmitting a copy of this record for preservation in the archives of the Boston Latin School Association, Mr. Dillaway writes:—

“Though Mr. Lloyd’s name is not given it was generally understood that he was the donor.

“Those who are acquainted with the jovial times our City Fathers used to have at the Faneuil Hall dinner on examination day will appreciate the wisdom of presenting the medal ‘immediately before sitting down to dinner.’

“What strikes me as singular is that the names of the boys receiving the medals are not on the Records of the School Committee. Of course their names would be on the Records of the City Council. They should have been on both.”

Q.

FRANKLIN MEDAL SCHOLARS.

In the Annual Report of the School Committee for 1857 will be found an account of the Franklin Medals, and the conditions on which they have been awarded. We give on a separate page a representation of the forms which they have at different times assumed, from the engravings in the possession of the School Committee, which we have kindly been allowed to copy. Beside the designs given, at one time the medal was simply a disk of silver with an engraved inscription. We give also a list of the pupils who have been recipients of these medals, corrected from that published by the School Committee in 1875, and brought down to the present year. It is imperfect, the names of the boys of some years not appearing, but there seems to be no way of supplying its deficiencies.

THE FRANKLIN MONUMENT.

We are permitted to make the following extract from a letter received by one of the Committee of Franklin Medal Scholars, appointed to obtain subscriptions in aid of the proposed Monument. The writer is a distinguished teacher in another State. He says:

"In the year 1798, by some maladministration of the Franklin Fund, one medal only was given in the Latin School, and very much to my surprise, I obtained it. The Hon. James T. Austin was in the Class, but fortunately for me he had received a Franklin Medal at a Grammar School, and was not a candidate. I now forward my medal to prove my right to subscribe on your list of medal scholars.

"Your allusions to your old teachers, Masters Emerson and Snelling, and the floggings you received from the rod of the latter, known to the boys by the name of 'Cayenne' and the 'Old Doctor,' reminds me of good old Master Hunt's ferule and my escape from it. He whipped me often and very hard, and hurt confoundedly. One day I could not help crying bitterly. He called me up and seemed willing to console me. He said: 'You know one Christopher Gore?' (afterwards Gov. Gore.) 'Yes, Sir.' 'He's a great man, isn't he?' 'Yes, Sir.' 'Do you know one Harrison Gray Otis?' 'Yes, Sir.' 'He is a great man, is he not?' 'Oh yes, Sir,' said I. 'I whipped it into them both!' said Master Hunt. I replied, 'I guess you mean to make a plaguey great man of me.' I was in a roaring passion, but the boys in the school laughed outright, and the old man smiled, and patted me on the head, and said, 'Go to your seat, you rogue, I will not touch you again,' and he never did.

"All honor to our old teachers, and success to the Franklin Monument.

"Yours, C. W. G."

* On the City List given as J. Thomas Stevenson, but probably Thomas Stevenson who entered in 1814. Joshua Thomas Stevenson, who entered in 1817, received a medal, as is shown by the List, in 1822.

† The name of John H. Ruggles is given on the City List for this year, but is omitted here on the authority of Giles H. Lodge.

‡ This name is given as Thomas Davis in the City List, and Thomas Kemper Davis appears in the following year, which is an error. Thomas Kemper Davis received a Franklin Medal in 1822 and the Lloyd Medal in 1823.

§ Added on the authority of Cazneau Palfrey.

|| This name appears on the City List both in 1825 and 1826. We omit it in the former year on authority of Wm. Gray, who says Stuart received the Medal in 1826.

R.

THE following Poem by William Everett, was read at the dinner of the Boston Latin School Association in 1877 :—

I.

Is our mother then so wedded
To her building's ancient site,
That the inn she taught was wicked
Gives her children seats to-night?
But since, met in such a session,
Boy or master counts as one,
What shall I be reckoned, standing
Where life's waters both ways run?

II.

Man, or boy? That is my question,
Harder than poor Hamlet's doubt;
Can this table lend assistance
From the fog to get me out?
Feeling hour by hour contending
Boy and man within my breast,
Fire and frost, or jest and earnest,
Who shall set that strife at rest?

III.

Boy no more, while seeing round me
Whiskered lawyers, doctors cool—
Babes! I taught them Ovid scanning,
Born the week I entered school!
Man not yet—his ancient masters
Who could ever see unmoved?
Please don't mark me, sir, delinquent,
If my piece is not approved.

IV.

Blundering yet o'er Greek subjunctives,
Shuddering at the discount rule,
Loathing pipes and loving cream cakes—
Ah, I ought to be at school!
Blowing rainbow bubbles daily,
Eager for each new employ,
Tired with one week's steady drudging—
Why! he's nothing but a boy.

V.

Backward through long vistas gazing
Lined with trunks of blasted hope,
Paved with faded projects, clouded O'er with failure's gloomy cope—
Wrathful at men's guilt and folly,
Sitting Bull or silver bill,—
Rouse thee, man! thy boyhood's over!
Work! Why stand'st thou idle still?

VI.

When, with boys around, I kindle
At their games and tales and glee,
Sorely puzzled that their fathers
Somehow went to school with me—
If they run to meet their equals,
Where are mine? I droop my head—
Ben and John are long since married—
Frank and Bill long since are dead.

VII.

Stand I thus the only waverer,
Looking on and backward too?
Ah, I see the telltale blushes,
Owning kindred doubts in you!
Young hearts bowed by cares of manhood,
White heads warm with youthful joys,
O my staid and reverend schoolmates,
"Whispering! sprouting! Mark those boys!"

VIII.

Mother! Thou whose lively nurture Fostered every purpose high,
Pricked our souls to bold endeavor,
Strung each arm and fired each eye—
If our hearts grow cold and sordid,
If the world our thoughts employs,
Break and thaw the freezing current;
Mother! Keep thy children boys!

IX.

Thou, whose firm and cautious training
 Watched o'er every wayward son,
 Chained the playful and the sluggard
 Firmly in till work was done—
 O, if e'er we stray or falter,
 Lured by hope or pleasure, then
 Draw once more thy old-time bridle;
 Mother, make thy children men!

X.

Boys in hope, and men in council,
 Boys in action, men in thought;
 Boys to breast the world's encounter,
 Men to wear the trophies brought.
 Take, boys, take each pure enjoyment
 From the earth's bright fields of love!
 Strike, men, strike each monster, purging,
 Lifting earth to heights above!

XI.

Fathers, brothers, sons! Our manhood
 Meets with boyish fun to-day.
 Hopes and memories chime to warn us,
 "Hearts be green, though locks be gray."
 So our city's pious motto
 Glows with richer light for us;
 "Sit in omne Deus ævum Nobis sicut patribus."

XII.

One verse more! This meeting's private:
 Some things wont be said outside.
 Many an outward stroke and inward
 Has the dear old school defied.
Boys or men: we'll stand unflinching
 Every bolt that malice hurls;
 But, by all her ancient honor,
 Fill not up our ranks with girls!

IN the New Eng. Hist. Gen. Reg. for January, 1883, (vol. xxxvii, p. 55,) is a list of the acquaintances of Daniel Henshaw, who died in Boston, after his removal from there in 1748, on which we find the following:—

22. Samuel Gibson, Usher of South Grammar School,—died much lamented.

53. John Ruck, Esq^r. a Gentleman of a good Character—one of the Overseers of the Poor of the Town of Boston for more than 20 years successively, aged between 80 & 90 years: I think there were but 2 men in Boston of his standing at Latin School, namely — Mess^{rs} Colman & Winslow.

We have no other information of John Ruck, and there is nothing to indicate the time of his probable connection with our School.

On page 92 of the Catalogue some memoranda taken from the manuscript catalogue of Mr. Hunt have been given; the same manuscript contains the following similar agreements entered into by other boys, presumably in the North School, some of whom will be recognized as among our pupils.

I Benj. Shaw engage the same* for Jos. Langdon for half the time, and I Jos Goodwin for the other half. B. Shaw.

A LIST of Subscribers to the Bunker Hill Monument, published in 1830, gives ninety-five names of teachers and pupils in the Latin School, all of whom are recorded in this Catalogue except the following:

Thomas J. Bowditch
 William C. Center.
 Frederick W. Hubbard.

Joseph J. Loring.
 William O. Parks.

The reason of the omission of these names here is inexplicable, unless the crediting of them to the School there is an error.

The names of Charles Brown, Jr., George Carlton, George W. Davis, John Motley, Andrew J. Ritchie, and Henry S. Sargent, which are given on the same list, are probably intended for Charles I. Brown, George J. Carlton, George C. Davis, John Lothrop Motley, Andrew Ritchie, and Henry J. Sargent on our Catalogue.

SINCE the account of the building of the School House, on page 87, was printed, we have been permitted to copy from the Records of King's Chapel the original statement of the action of the Town in answer to the petition of the Minister and Vestry of King's Chapel for the piece of ground on which the School House stood, in order to enlarge their Church.

As the Transaction of Affairs between the Town & the Petitioners was since the late Grant put intirely on the Town's part into the Hands of their Select Men viz Thomas Hancock, Middlecot Cooke, John Steel Esq^s & Mess^s Jn Tyng, Wm Salter, Saml Grant, & Hill so these gentlemen now began to exercise the Patience of the Chapel Committee in as severe a manner as the Town Committee had done before, insisting that the new School House must be built with Brick, must have a Cellar under it, must be one sixth part larger than the old one, and must have a Gambrell Roof &c Conditions each of them quite foreign to the Grant & which caused sundry Debates. These and severall other Difficultys were secretly contriv'd & fomented by some litigious People, to whom the Select Men gave too much Countenance, particularly by Mr Lovell the School-master who upon very many Occasions impertinently dictated in the Conduct of the affair, & frequently gave Disturbance both to the Select Men & the Committee. But since one Condition of the Grant was that the Work should be accomplish'd to the Satisfaction of the Select Men, they under this general Instruction were resolv'd to accept nothing but what was agreeable to their own Humours; Some of them hoping by this Means intirely to defeat the whole affair & render it ineffectual. It must be indeed confess'd that others of the Select Men thôt this Proceeding most unreasonable and even unchristian but a majority prevail'd; several of the Committee thôt it would be best to build it according to the express Words of the Grant without Regard to the Select Men, but others esteem'd it an unsafe Way, as the Town would be most likely to justifie their Select Men, especially in an affair which too many would have been glad any way to have defeated.

To accommodate the Thing in some better manner it was proposed to the Select Men that a Sum of money should be given them, and that they should undertake the Building to their own Satisfaction, as there seem'd to be Room left for such an Agreement by a Clause in the Grant. To this Purpose an Estimate was obtain'd from sundry Workmen of the Charge of a Brick School House, which amounted to £2900 ; and of a wooden one with all their additional Expence of Bigness, Roof, Cellar, &c. which was computed at £2380.

The Committee wearied out with Opposition and willing to put an End to it offered 2000 Pounds, this the Select Men refus'd to accept but propos'd that if they might be allowed £2400, and the Buildings then standing on the Ground they would try if by Subscription they could raise £500. more, and if so, they would accept. Here again the Committee astonish'd at the unreasonableness of such Proposals were at a Loss what to do; Some were for throwing up at last, imagining that such excessive Charge would prevent or at least greatly retard the building their Church—but after consulting some other principal Members of the Church they came to the following Resolution, vizt

At a Meeting of the Committee for rebuilding Kings Chapel at Eliakim Hutchinson's Esq^r Tuesday 28th June 1748 * * * * Voted unanimously that we make an Offer to the Select Men of the Sum of Twenty-four hundred Pounds old Ten^r together with the Buildings now on the Spott of Ground where the School is to be erected pursuant to a Vote of the Town in Consideration of their freeing us from building said School, & that the said offer be made tomorrow.

20th July, 1748.

“Being desired by the Committee of Kings Chapel on the 13th Inst. to inform them what School we think will be to the Satisfaction of the Select Men, we reply a Brick House of the Dimensions following viz Thirty four feet Front towards School Street, Thirty six feet deep on the Passage and twelve feet Studd with suitable Doors and Windows & finished Workmanlike to the Acceptance of the Select Men, with House of Office, Wood House &c.”

INDEX TO NAMES OF PUPILS.

FOR convenience of reference to the text, it has seemed desirable to employ certain marks in the Index, of which the following is the explanation:

* signifies that the name against which it is placed is that of one who, by the best evidence that can be procured, was probably a pupil, but as this evidence of actual attendance and membership is not perfectly conclusive, it has been given in a note, (see p. iii of the preface to the edition of 1847,) instead of in the text. Further evidence may at some future time cause its removal to the text, as has been the case in this edition with many names given in the note there referred to.

? signifies that the Christian name against which it is placed, left blank in the edition of 1847, has been supplied on evidence entitled to credit, (the testimony of relatives or descendants, the town Records of births, or the baptismal Records of the Churches,) accessible since that edition was printed, which seems to prove that the boy thus indicated was our pupil. (See page iv of the preface to the edition of 1847.)

? † signifies that while the Christian name against which it stands is probably that of the boy whose surname was originally given, (see explanation above,) one or more additional names are given in notes, of which, for the reasons there given, it is at least possible that one should be substituted for that in the text.

Many boys seem to have changed in after life the names under which they entered the School, sometimes by dropping, and sometimes by adding a first or middle name; but occasionally by an entire alteration of the given names, and in a few instances of surnames. In all such instances the name given in the Index is that under which the boy entered the School, and the subsequent name is added underneath it in parentheses (). When the change has involved the surname, the name has been given under both the old and the new, with cross references from each.

ADDENDA.

THE following information has been obtained while these pages were passing through the press, but too late for insertion in the proper place.

UNDER THE INSTRUCTORS.

1714. Edward Wigglesworth is shown to have been in office before Jan. 171 $\frac{1}{2}$, by the following certificate of Nath'l Williams, the original of which is in the possession of Jeremiah Colburn, Esq., of Boston.

Boston Jan. 7. 1714/15

Gentlemen

This may certifie you that Mr Edward Wigglesworth has continued to assist me in keeping the Grammar School another quarter, even to this day,

Yr humble Servt

Nathl. Williams

To the Select men for the Town of Boston.

On page 22.

It is possible that the name of John Vaughan Aphthorp, Harv. 1818, should be inserted between those of Moses Shaw and John Brazer Davis.

On page 328.

In the Index to Teachers, under Groce, Byron, insert 12, before 30.

1735

The History of the Ancient and Hon. Artillery Company, by Whitman, 2d edition, contains on p. 280 a notice of Edward Bromfield, who may be our pupil here; and on page 311 a reference to Adino Paddock.

1736

Copeland. Against this name Dr. Homer has written Copely, Painter, but this must be an error, as Copley was not born until this year.

1737

Samuel Hewes is probably the father of Samuel H. Hewes of our Class of 1770, and is perhaps the Samuel Hughes referred to in Sabine.

George Craddock. On the Burial Register of King's Chapel, under date of 1 July, 1771, is the record of the death of George Craddock, Merchant, aged 37 years, who is very likely this one.

1738

Page 55. To note 5 should be added: See also Bridgman's Pilgrims of Boston, and the reference to the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society should be xiv, 200.

In Note 6, the conjectured spelling given is found to agree with the statement of Dr. Homer.

Robert Treat Paine. See the Polyanthos for June, 1814.

Caleb Blanchard, an Assessor, died aged 71. See Bur. Reg. King's Chapel.

1739

Malem is perhaps John Maylem, who died 11 June, 1747, in the 17th year of his age. See Bridgman's King's Chapel Epitaphs, p. 75.

Addington Davenport. See N. E. Hist. Gen. Reg. Jan. 1856, p. 115, and Jan. 1879, p. 25.

Paddock. A letter received from Morris V. Paddock, Esq., of St. John, N. B., makes it probable that this was Enoch, a brother of Adino and John of our class of 1735.

1741

Hillar is perhaps Joseph Hillar, referred to in Curwen's Journal, 4th edit. p. 561.

Note 13; p. 59, a reference to Joseph Fitch, mentioned here, will be found in the 2d edition of Whitman's History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, p. 282.

1742

Blanchard is probably Edward, b. Boston, 1734, died 18 July, 1792, a merchant on Long Wharf.

1745

The first name, Gatiomb, is very probably incorrect for Gatcomb.

Henry Green. The date of death is probably incorrect. He was known to be living in Dec. 1774, and is thought to have died in 1775 or 6.

Page 65, note 2. The 2d edition of the History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co. gives a different statement of the parentage of William Phillips, and also gives the date of his death as 1771.

Page 66. To note 4, add See also Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, 1881-2, p. 406, note.

1748

James Pitts. Perhaps son of James, b. 1741, d. 1772, at New Providence. See Goodwin's Pitts Genealogy, p. 35.

Page 69. To note 13, (Samuel Allyne Otis), add Also N. E. Hist. Gen. Reg. ii. 292.

1755

Apthorp. Dr. Homer suggests that this was William, and we have so filled the blank conjecturally, though he has probably confounded him with the William in the previous column.

1756

William Oxnard. Dr. Homer says this should be Edward, very likely confounding him with the Edward below.

Samuel Pitts. See Bridgman's King's Chapel Epitaphs, p. 275.

1758

Samuel Gore. See History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., 2d edition, p. 336.

Daniel Jones. May be Rev., Coll. New Jersey, 1766, but more probably is as we have given in the text.

To note 15, (William Coffin,) add Son of Nathaniel the Cashier, brother of Nathaniel of our Class of 1757 and Gen. John of 1765 and Sir Isaac of 1766.

Page 80. To note 1, (John Joy,) add Bapt. 1st Church, 29 Dec. 1751.

Jonathan (?) Pollard. Perhaps the Jonathan of our Class of 1757 is the one whom we have supposed to have been identified here.

1760

Thomas Edwards. See Memorials of Massachusetts Cincinnati by F. S. Drake, p. 19.

Perez Morton. Note 17 has reference to a spelling of the name Moreton, originally given in the text, but altered without changing the note.

1761

Minott. To the suggestion in note 4, page 82, we would add, Possibly Francis, who died Dec. 1774, æt. 28.

Prout. A William Prout was at the North Grammar School from 1768-74, but would probably have been too old then to be our boy here.

To note 12, p. 82, (William Eustis,) add, See Memorials of Massachusetts Cincinnati by F. S. Drake, p. 19.

John Sprague is unquestionably identical with the J. S. of our Class of 1760, and should have been omitted here. If he is another boy, however, the line Harv. 1772, A.M. should be stricken out.

1765

Benjamin Joye. Bapt. 1st Church, 27 Feb. 1757. Dr. Homer gives this name Charles.

Joseph Loring. Add U. S. A. and as a note, See History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., 2d edition, p. 356.

James Prince. To note 8, p. 87, add Dr. Homer gives this name as John.

Samuel Doggett. Dr. Homer gives this name William. See note 16 on page 85.

1766

To note 6, page 88, add, See Historical Sketch, p. 40, for a contemporary account of this transaction.

To the note on General Haldiman, at the bottom of the page, add He was of Swiss descent. See Drake's Biographical Dictionary.

Jacob Eustis was a brother of (Governor) William of our Class of 1761.

1767

James Gould. Dr. Homer supplies the name here as Samuel.

James Millar Church was a son of Dr. Benjamin of our Class of 1745.

1768

Benjamin Cobb, Jr., b. 2 Nov. 1759, was a brother of Samuel. A Merchant, of the firm of B. Cobb & Sons, 22 Long Wharf.

1769

Arnold Welles. See History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., 2d edition, p. 379.

1770

Charles Bulfinch. To note 1, p. 96, add, See Bridgman's King's Chapel Epitaphs, p. 282.

1771

Jonathan Davis was a Merchant.

Edward McLane, Dep. Secretary of State. Buried 21 March, 1826; see Burial Register King's Chapel.

1772

Thomas Green (?†) Hubbard. Dr. Homer supplies Joseph as the name here.

John Soley. See the By-laws of St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, (edition of 1874,) p. 164.

John Baker Sohier. The age in Hunt's Catalogue, given in note 4, must be wrong, as he was born in 1767.

1773

Benjamin Homans was Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

1774

Edward Blanchard was born in 1760. If the conjectured Edward of 1765 is correct, he is the same boy, but that conjecture is very likely wrong.

1776

Thomas Curtis. A Merchant. See Burial Register King's Chapel.

Page 108. To note 12, (Thomas Fleet,) add, See Buckingham's Reminiscences, i. 145.

John Hoskins was baptized at King's Chapel, 17 April, 1765.

JAMES LLOYD was the donor of the Lloyd Medal.

Samuel Prince was baptized at King's Chapel, 7th April, 1769. The date of his death is given in the Burial Register of King's Chapel.

1777

George Bethune entered in 1778. Add Treasurer of the Roxbury and Boston Mill-Dam Corporation.

Page 112. To note 1, (John Sweetser Lillie,) add, Also Buckingham's Reminiscences, ii. 315.

William Mackay was the first City Treasurer of Boston.

1780

Benjamin Whitwell. See A History of the Law, the Courts, and the Lawyers of Maine, by Wm. Willis, p. 242.

1781

Page 116. To note 4, (Thomas Paine,) add, See also Buckingham's Reminiscences, ii. 247.

1782

William Mackay is very likely identical with the Wm. M. of 1777.

1784

Page 120. To note 7, (Francis Johonnot Oliver,) add, See By-Laws St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, ed. 1874, p. 162.

1796

Benjamin Andrews. It is not unlikely this is the Benjamin (Andrews) Hitchborn of 1795. The confusion of names will be explained by consulting the Recollections of Samuel Breck, p. 22. See note 10, p. 131.

1810-11

To Henry Kemble Oliver add Mus. Doct. Dart. 1883.

1815

Charles Pierce. ?Dartmouth 1825, A.M. *1852. Perhaps the pupil, aged 13, at Phillips Andover Academy in 1817, from Newburyport. *1858.

1816

Jonathan J. Gardner should probably be inserted in this Class. See Annual Catalogue of 1832.

Charles Frederic Langdon. Add Dart. Med. Sch. 1828.

John Lemon. Possibly the same who appears in the Boston Directory until 1854 as John Leman, Ship-Smith.

1817

Francis Caleb Loring should probably be in the Class of 1819 with Willis and Bradlee, but as he was put here on the old Catalogue and this page was cast before we had reason to think the change ought to be made, we have thought best not to make it.

1819

Benjamin R. Welch. It has proved impossible to ascertain whether R in this name is for Rand or Renkin.

1820

Joseph Henry Gardner. Dele Clerk, *1884, and add Sec. of Neptune, and President of Triton Ins. Cos. *1886.

1823

Thomas Oliver Prescott, afterwards Oliver Prescott Hillyer. Add *1878.

1824

Edward Belknap, John L. Hooper, George C. McBride, John W. Randall are all given on the annual Catalogue published in 1826 as having entered school in this Class.

The Catalogue of 1847 gives Thomas E. Willis, but he is omitted in Messrs. Greenough's and Haynes's interleaved Catalogues.

1825

The annual Catalogue of 1832 gives a William Peabody as of this Class, but perhaps this is a mistake for Wellington.

1827

Leonard S. Parker and Frederick R. Sherman are given on the annual Catalogue of 1831 as members of this Class, and Samuel S. Noyes on that of 1832, but perhaps the latter is a mistake for James Sullivan Noyes, whom we give.

1828

Charles Henry Appleton Dall. Add *1886.

1832

John Revere. Add *1886.

1833

Charles Frederic Adams. See Memorial Biographies of N. E. Historical Genealogical Society, iii. p. 166.

1837

Charles Dudley Homans. Add President Mass. Med. Soc. *1886.

1845

A. F. Chapin is on the School Records as a member of this Class, but he left after a few days.

Samuel Pierpont Langley. See the Popular Science Monthly for July 1885.

1846

John J. Pratt and J. A. Wilson are on the School Register as of this Class, but appear to have left after a few days.

1849

William Gray. Add *1886.

1852

Edgar Marshall Newcomb. A Memorial Sketch has been published by Dr. A. B. Weymouth.

1854

Henry Fitch Jenks. After Lawrence add Canton.

1866

Isaac Bonney Mills. Add Harv. 1878.

William Croswell Tarbell. Entered as William Crosby Tarbell.

1868

Frazar Livingston Montague. Add Harv. 1884.

1869

John King Hastings. Add S. T. B. Harv. 1883.

1872

Francis Marion Holden. Add M.D. Harv. 1884.

1873

Burnside Foster. Add Yale 1882, M.D. Harv. 1886.

Frederic Clinton Woodbury. Add M.D. Harv. 1886.

1874

Thomas Tileston Baldwin. Add Harv. 1886.

Edmund Dwight Codman. Add Harv. 1886.

Joseph Rutter Draper. Add Williams 1885.

Ezra Palmer Mills. Add Harv. 1885.
